French Representative Ignores Country's Attitude; Albert Thomas Wants Labor-Union Domination.

PARIS, Nov. 13.—Reports as to the attitude which President-[illegible] Harding is likely to take toward the League of Nations after [illegible] office next March are being examined here with close [illegible]. It is felt that in the Republican party two divergent [illegible] are asserting themselves, one section working for the [illegible] rejection of the covenant and the other section urging [illegible] with amendments. Says Congress Must Abrogate Mexico Oil Law.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 13.—President-elect Obregon denied today that he had reached an agreement with oil companies relative to a settlement of the present differences, as was intimated in special newspaper dispatches received here from the United States.

Gen. Obregon stated that he had no intention, when he assumes office, to attempt to abrogate any law now in effect, declaring that such amendments or revision of the Constitution must come from Congress.

One of the first problems he will deal with will be the labor situation, he intimated, saying he is now studying a new labor law to be presented to Congress shortly after his inauguration. He said he hoped it would be sufficiently comprehensive to meet the demands of the laborers as well as protect the employers.

HEAVY FALL OF SNOW CLOSES LUMBER CAMP.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SONORA (Tuolumne County) Nov. 13.—An unusually heavy fall of snow has closed the logging camps of the county for the winter, much earlier than hitherto. The Standard Lumber Company, with a mill capacity of 300,000 feet a day, discharged over 300 men. The mill has sufficient quantity of logs in the pond to keep it running until next spring.

REPORT AGREEMENT.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

TOKIO, Nov. 13. — Newspapers here report the Japanese and American governments have reached an agreement in principle relative to the exclusion of Japanese laborers from the United States. It is asserted, however, that there is a disagreement regarding the methods to be employed.

America is understood to desire provisions for exclusion embodied in a treaty, but Japan, it is said, regards this procedure as humiliating, and as forming a precedent she might be forced to follow in future treaties. Japan is said to declare that measures prohibiting her subjects from emigrating can be taken only on her own initiative.

In other respects the negotiations are progressing, it is reported, and once this point has been settled an agreement may be expected.

Lodi Man Missing a Month.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

LODI, Nov. 13.—Dropping out of sight a month ago, mystery continues to surround the disappearance of Henry Rudaloff, owner of a local machine shop. His business was found to be in excellent condition and no theory has been advanced for his absence. His father clings to the belief that the young man, aged 22, met with foul play.

TROTZKY IS REAL CZAR.

His Moscow Office Like Fortress.

Bristles With Many Machine Guns and the Troops Are Devoted to Him.

Practically Russian Dictator; Could be Absolute if He Wished.

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

[Herewith The Times publishes extracts from the notebooks of its correspondent, who recently made his way out of Russia after many months of travel and adventure in that country. By his disguises and his ability to speak Russian fluently, he was able to get under the surface and to bore deeply into Bolshevism and its works. In paragraph form today he throws a flood of light upon present conditions in Russia.]

LONDON, Nov. 13.—Leon Trotzky, to do him justice, is a remarkable man. He possesses a very exceptional power of organization, an extraordinarily quick brain. He resembles Lloyd George in many respects, and I should not be surprised if, like Lloyd George, he becomes practically a dictator.

He could do so tomorrow if he liked, for he has the Red army with him and his War Office in Moscow is a fortress bristling with machine guns and filled with troops devoted to him.

Trotzky bases himself on the theories of Marx. But Lenine and Trotzky have quite departed from his theories. The state they have formed in Russia bears no resemblance to the perfect Communist commonwealth of which Karl Marx dreamed.

The stories told of Trotzky's revels and dissipation are obvious nonsense.

No such thing as a public meeting, in our sense of the word, is ever held in Red Russia. The Bolshevik leaders only address meetings which have been carefully packed with their supporters.

PRECAUTIONS MINUTE.

The police precautions taken to protect Lenine and Trotzky are as minute, though not as evident, as those formerly taken to protect Nicholas II.

Trotzky says to the entire Russian press: "Start a cry of horror at the white terror in Ireland," and forthwith the entire Russian press resounds with shouts of indignation.

Bolshevik propaganda has caused many in Russia to believe that a soviet is sitting at 10 Downing street, that an English Lenine has replaced Lloyd George and an English Trotzky Mr. Churchill.

Handshaking has been abolished by Trotzky on the ground that it promoted the spread of typhus.

During a recent railway journey of considerable length Trotzky published, on the train, a daily newspaper called En Route, and he dictated, besides, numerous contributions for the newspapers in the towns through which he passed.

If a Socialist revolution took place in England tomorrow, H. G. Wells, Bernard Shaw, Sydney Webb, Ramsay MacDonald, Philip Snowden and all the other philosophic Socialists would soon vanish before terrorists of the Trotzky type emerging from the obscurity of the East End of London. The parlor Bolsheviks, the highly intellectual editors of "advanced" periodicals, might be on top for a time, but they would not be there long.

"RAIN FALLS ALIKE ON—"

Unseasonable Storm Prevents Harding from Golfing or Fishing.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

POINT ISABEL, Nov. 13.—Cut off by an unseasonable storm for recreation on land or sea, President-elect Harding spent today in Point Isabel reading and making preliminary preparation for the speech he will deliver next Thursday at New Orleans.

The President-elect and his party virtually were marooned for the day, the cold norther which blew up yesterday still holding sway on the fishing grounds off Laguna Madre, and a downpour of rain making the winding dirt road into Brownsville practically impassable. He had hoped at least to go in for golf at the Brownsville Country Club, but automobile drivers pronounced the trip impracticable.

Unless the weather moderates by tomorrow the Harding party may be moved to a Brownsville Hotel. Local weather sharps thought tonight, however, that the storm would be over in a few hours and that warmer weather would follow.

WANTS TRY AT TARPON.

Mr. Harding wants to remain here and get one more try at tarpon fishing off Point Isabel, if possible. It is about twenty miles to Brownsville along a road that is little more than a trail through cactus and mesquite, and for fifteen miles of the way there are no houses visible from the roadway. An old-style narrow gauge railroad train of two cars, hauled by gasoline engines, makes the trip each way once a day, and today it was used in preference to motor cars by two or three members of Mr. Harding's party, who took permanent leave of Point Isabel and started for home.

DAUGHERTY LEAVES.

Harry M. Daugherty, close adviser of the President-elect, was one of those who departed, having been called to Columbus, O., by the death of a sister-in-law. Senator Elkins of West Virginia, who has been Mr. Harding's companion on his two fishing trips here, also left for his home. It is expected that Edward B. MacLean, the Washington publisher, will leave the party Thursday at New Orleans before the departure for Panama. Mr. Harding has invited Will H. Hays, the Republican national chairman, to make the Panama voyage as his guest, but no definite acceptance has been obtained.

Unable to either fish or play golf today, Senator Harding visited for the first time the office set up in the Point Isabel Hotel by his secretary, George B. Christian, Jr. He also called upon a number of members of his party in the unheated rooms of the hotel, which was erected for summer accommodations and not to shelter guests against a norther such as that which has swept the coast the last two days. He found most of his fellow-adventurers clustered close about a small stove that had been erected hastily in the large room that serves as a hotel lobby.

DISPOSES OF MAIL.

During his call at Mr. Christian's room the President-elect gave instructions for disposition of the most urgent letters and telegrams that have come to him here. He decided that most of the communications be filed away, however, until his vacation trip is over.

One of the messages that has reached Mr. Harding is an invitation to visit the city and republic of Panama during his week's stay in the Canal Zone. Despite his hesitancy in his present position to enter the territory of any foreign nation, he is understood to have replied that he would be glad to receive a delegation formally presenting the invitation and to have promised that he would make the visit if he found it possible.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 13. Because he threw the residue of his home-brew mash over the fence, where a neighbor's cow consumed it and ran amuck through a vegetable garden as a result, George Orput of Oakland faced a charge of illegally manufacturing liquor in the United States District Court here today. Orput pleaded guilty and his sentence was set for next Saturday.

The owner of the vegetable garden complained to the police, saying that the cow showed distinct evidences of intoxication. Complaint to the Federal authorities followed.

TRAGEDY IN POSSESSION OF DAGGER.

Miss Sanders and Father Killed on 29th Birthday by Same Weapon.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 13.—Back to the sunny southland where blood runs warm and despair breeds quickly out of hope, there started this evening the body of beautiful Theodora Sanders, who stabbed herself to death on the mezzanine floor of the Fort Dearborn Hotel as the tragic climax of a shattered romance with Harry Garver, Chicago commercial expert.

Accompanying the body was the loyal friend of Theodora's girlhood, Mrs. Ruby Campbell, who arrived today from Laredo, Tex., to claim the remains and supply the links missing in the story of the love that flamed up fiercely and died quickly.

HAND OF FATE EVIDENT.

Mrs. Campbell says the hand of fate was particularly evident in the life and death of Miss Sanders. Her father, a prominent politician, was slain in quarrel in Mexico on his twenty-ninth birthday. He was stabbed to death with his own dagger and this dagger, taken from his body, was the same with which his daughter killed herself on her twenty-ninth birthday.

Theodora put much faith in the reading of cards. The turn of a card at her home in Texas convinced her Garver's love for her was dead. The turn of another card—the ace of spades—was interpreted by her as a sign of death, as an action for her suicide.

BELIEVES IN FATE.

"I attended the University of Mexico with Theodora," said Mrs. Campbell. "Those whom she loved, she loved passionately. She could not understand lukewarm affection. She was a firm believer in fate. She used to brood over the death of her father and felt that sorrow would come to her as it came to him. And her premonition has proved well founded."

COWS FROM AMERICA ARE NOW IN HAMBURG.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

BERLIN, Nov. 13.—Seven hundred Holstein cows, comprising the first consignment of milch cows donated by Americans to Germany, arrived in Hamburg today. They have been quarantined pending action by the American donors and officials who will determine their final destination.

German red tape is further complicating the situation in that various governmental departments, which claim the right to dispose of the American gift, have thus far been unable to arrive at a settlement of the question. Meanwhile the cows must remain in the quarantine station at Hamburg until their disposition is determined.

LEAGUE TO ORGANIZE.

Delegates Now Are in Geneva.

Assembly Goes Into Session Tomorrow; Nations' Court Becomes Operative.

Scandinavian Amendments the Only Ones Now in Sight; Germany Will Wait.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

GENEVA, Nov. 13.—The British delegation to the Assembly of the League of Nations, 100 strong, arrived here this morning, completing the representation of most of the principal members of the League.

The actual proceedings will begin tomorrow with a meeting of the Council of the League to complete the organization of a financial and economic commission, which will arrange another international financial conference.

The Council will give further consideration to Polish-Lithuanian affairs.

The Assembly meeting Monday, which is regarded by the delegates as the real beginning of the League, will open with an address of welcome by President Motta of Switzerland. Routine work, organization and the report of the Council of the League probably will take up the entire day, if not two days. An important item of the agenda, amendments to the covenant of the League, will be reached Tuesday or Wednesday.

THREE AMENDMENTS.

Three Scandinavian amendments are the only ones proposed thus far. Two of these provide for the ineligibility of a state to succeed itself as one of the four elective members of the Council and eliminate the word "generally" from Article XIII, and so remove the qualification on questions susceptible of solutions by arbitration. These amendments are encountering no serious opposition.

The third amendment, providing that a neighboring state shall not be obliged to join in the blockade of a member breaking the covenant, if in danger of invasion, probably will not be accepted without a contest. In French circles it is said this would make inoperative the only arm the League possesses to make itself obeyed. The fault of even one adjoining country would render an effective blockade almost impossible.

GO TO COMMITTEES.

Other amendments probably will be proposed from the floor of the Assembly. They will, according to the proposed rules of procedure, be referred to committees without previous debate. This will be the method of disposing of nearly every subject on the agenda, throwing the principal work of the Assembly into the committee rooms.

The meetings of the Assembly will be public, unless it is deemed advisable first to discuss some particular questions privately. In that case a report of the decision reached will be read in public.

PERSONAL OPINION.

George Nicol Barnes, one of the British delegates to the Assembly, informed the Associated Press today that the declaration made by him recently, in common with the Earl of Selborne and Viscount Grey, in favor of the immediate admission of Germany to the League, was an entirely personal expression and that the British delegation was not committed on the question. Mr. Barnes could not say whether any member of the British delegation would bring the matter up before the Assembly.

It is learned from British sources that there is a strong probability of Premier Lloyd George coming to Geneva during the sittings. It is expected here that, if the British Prime Minister comes, either President Leygues will be here at the same time.

GERMANY TO WAIT.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

GENEVA, Nov. 13.—Germany will not make a formal applicaton for admission to the League of Nations, but would not ignore an invitation, should it be extended by the organization, said Dr. Herrmann Mueller, vice-president of the Foreign Affairs Committee of the German Reichstag, in a statement to the Journal De Geneve, yesterday.

"Germany will not ask the Assembly to admit her to the League," he declared, "because such an application would give rise to a sharp discussion in the Assembly, for it is known certain states have given indications they would oppose her immediate entry. I do not know whether they have sufficient support to insure the triumph of their viewpoint but, however that may be, such a discussion would not be without danger to the League itself.

NOT YET PERFECT.

Besides, the German government does not consider the League in its present form as perfect. How, indeed, could it be, since, to mention only two states, it includes neither Russia nor the United States and universality is the fundamental condition of its existence.

"That, however, does not mean that Germany would maintain a reserved attitude in the event of some delegation raising the question of her admission, and if the Assembly should accept her, Germany would not decline an invitation resulting from such a decision."

CATTLE HAVE EPIZOOTICS.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

PARIS, Nov. 13.—Germany having failed, up to the present time, to abide by the terms of Annex No. 4 of the Treaty of Versailles, calling for delivery to the Allies of a certain number of cattle, the Reparations Commission has invited Germany to send qualified experts to Paris so that the whole question may be settled by November 20.

REDS CRUSHING WRANGEL IN BIG CRIMEAN DRIVE.

Refugees Making Wild Dash to Escape from Sebastopol; Lines Broken and Thrusts Made in the Rear.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

SEBASTOPOL, Nov. 13.—The forces of Gen. Wrangel in the Crimea are in a most dangerous situation. The Bolsheviki have broken through all the lines of defense and are now attacking the Wrangel army in the rear. The evacuation of Sebastopol probably will be effected by Sunday, according to quarters close to Gen. Wrangel, quoting him to that effect.

Thousands of refugees, panic-stricken, fill the streets and wharves of Sebastopol. Ships of many nations are hurriedly taking refugees aboard and the American Red Cross is loading its supplies. Rear-Admiral Newton McCully, commander of the Adriatic naval forces in Russian waters, will stay at Sebastopol until the last moment with a small guard on the American destroyer Overton. The American colony has been taken aboard the Overton.

It is reported the Bolsheviki have sent an ultimatum to Gen. Wrangel demanding the unconditional surrender of the White Army.

CONDITION PITIFUL.

Twenty-five thousand Bolshevik cavalrymen are reported to have reached Simferopol.

The condition of the refugees is pitiful and they are suffering indescribable misery. Considerable looting is going on in the Crimean towns. All the refugees are clamoring to be taken aboard Allied ships and feverish efforts are being made by the crews of French and British squadrons at Sebastopol to load as many refugees and their effects as possible. The number of refugees awaiting passage exceeds 50,000 men, women and children.

The cruiser U.S.S. St. Louis sailed from Constantinople for Sebastopol this morning to take a full load of the refugees. Gravest fears are now felt for Gen. Wrangel's army. With the entrance to the Crimea in the hands of the Bolsheviki, military observers say Wrangel's position in the Crimea is untenable.

BRITISH TAKE ACTION.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

LONDON, Nov. 13.—Sebastopol is being evacuated and British authorities are requisitioning ships in Constantinople to take refugees from that city, says a dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company from the Turkish capital.

Ships are scarce and of 80,000 persons who seek to leave Sebastopol probably not more than 20,000 can embark, says a Constantinople dispatch to Reuter's Limited.

TAKE MUCH BOOTY.

Reviewing the Crimean military situation, a Moscow message says: "After fierce battles in which much booty was captured and after breaking through a number of fortified positions the Red troops are penetrating Crimea. The Second Cavalry Corps is already advancing in the peninsula on a wide front; the enemy is retreating in disorder, blowing up military stores; burning food and revenging itself on the population."

A soviet wireless message from Moscow dated Friday says:

"In the Mozyr region (Minsk government) fighting is proceeding with troops under Gen. Balakovitch. In the direction of Novo-Ushitsa our advance is developing successfully. We captured 800 of Petlura's troops.

"In the Crimea sector after fierce fighting Wednesday we took the enemy's fortified position at Yushun village, pursuing the defeated enemy and capturing much booty."

Gen. Wrangel has telegraphed Maj.-Gen. Charles V. Townshend, who commanded the British forces at Kut-El-Amara in 1915, asking him to take command of Wrangel's forces in Crimea. Gen. Townsend is considering the matter.

Early in October it was reported that Gen. Townshend was going to join Gen. Wrangel on the Crimean front. This caused some comment at the time, but it was pointed out that Gen. Townshend had resigned from the British army and that his offer was a personal affair.

FRENCH SAILORS BUSY.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

PARIS, Nov. 13.—The French warships Waldeck-Rousseau and Provence are aiding in evecuation of Sebastopol, says a Havas dispatch, and are making special arrangements for the care of the military missions and the French colony. Measures are under way for the protection of members of the Wrangel government from Bolshevik reprisals.

The Russian soviet forces have won control of the Isthmus of Perekop, leading to the Crimean Peninsula, and the situation of Gen. Wrangel is extremely bad, the French Foreign Office has been notified. The Allied fleets, it is stated, are preparing to aid in the evacuation of certain districts in the Crimea.

The Bolsheviki have advanced beyond Perekop, the advices show, and have captured 12,000,000 cartridges, eighteen cannon, one tank, three armored trains, 10,000 shells and much transportation material.

POLES ATTACK.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 13. — A strong offensive by Polish troops was begun Wednesday on the northeast Lithuanian front, according to a Kovno dispatch to the Berlingske Tidende today. After violent fighting the towns of Smolny and Turmond were occupied by the attacking forces which now are fighting outside Novo-Alexandrovsk, the reports state.

Disaffection is reported in the army of Gen. Zeligouski, the insurgent Polish commander (whose troops presumably are the ones referred to in the Kovno message.)

Weather Bureau Predicts a Storm for State Monday

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 13.—A rapidly rising barometer today indicated that the storm which has been sweeping the State for the last three days would not be evident Sunday, but there were signs that it would be renewed on Monday or Tuesday, the United States Weather Bureau reported here today.

Today California had been given a much needed drenching from Santa Barbara to the Oregon line and there was a snow pack in the Sierra Nevada Mountains at least sixteen inches thick.

A low pressure area, so immense that it stretched from Alaska to a point below the southern steamer route to Honolulu, promised much more rain to the coast areas.

The weather outlook in the State was termed "most encouraging" for all concerned, by E. A. Beals, government forecaster. Storm warnings which had been ordered for all points along the coast from San Francisco north, were taken down today.

Precipitation figures for the storm period were: Chico, 3.08; Red Bluff, 1.84; Sacramento, .82; San Francisco, 1.02; San Jose, .40; Fresno, .02; Santa Rosa, 1.65; Orland, .93; Colusa, .98; Paso Robles, .17; Rocklin, 1.39; San Luis Obispo, .08; Oroville, 1.74; Stockton, .22.

Black-and-Tans Threaten Reprisal for Kidnaping.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

CORK, Nov. 13.—Reprsials have been threatened in connection with the abduction of Thomas Griffin, a warden of the Cork jail, who was kidnaped October 10 while on his way home. The following notice was found posted today on the front door of the offices of the Cork Examiner:

"Final notice. If Warden Griffin is not released within forty-eight hours, Cork will remember his abduction.

[Signed]

"BY ORDER OF THE BLACK AND TANS."

"Not out of danger, but there is no reason why we should not pull them through," the jail doctors said today of the nine hunger strikers in Cork jail who yesterday broke their fast of ninety-four days.

Every three hours the prisoners are given liquid noruishment. This diet will be continued until Monday, when the first solid food, in the shape of boiled fish prepared with milk, will be served them. With one exception they were able to read the newspapers this morning. All of them drank large quantities of very sweet lemonade with much enjoyment.

BELFAST (Ireland) Nov. 13.—Sinn Fein arches displaying the Sinn Fein and American flags were the source of party frictions here last night. Fierce stone-throwing and revolver firing occurred and intervention by the police, with removal of the arches, was necessary to restore order.

SAN DIEGO RAILWAY TO RESUME SERVICE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN DIEGO, Nov. 13.—Announcement was made today that the San Diego and Arizona Railway, through service on which was suspended several months ago by a large slide in Carriso Gorge, in the mountains between San Diego and Imperial Valley, will be reopened Thanksgiving Day. Large sums have been spent in removing what amounted to nearly half a mountain in order to make the line absolutely safe for travel.

Through train connections to eastern points are made by the San Diego and Arizona with the Southern Pacific and Rock Island lines.

Canadian Grain for Spain.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WINNIPEG, Nov. 13.—Foreshadowing days when a deep-water canal will make Port William, Ontario, an ocean port, two ships for Vigo, Spain, carrying 100,000 bushels of western Canadian grain each, the Antroneo and the Joseff, just built at Duluth, sailed from Fort William on their maiden voyage.

ITALY PLANS DEFENSE PACT.

New Treaty With Jugo-Slavs to be Concluded.

Alpine Frontier Strong, Says Minister of War.

Has Not Bartered Territories of Albania.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

RAPALLO (Italy) Nov. 13.—A defensive treaty between Italy and Jugo-Slavia will be concluded at an early date, according to reports here.

"The apprehension felt in some quarters that the Serbian Constituent Assembly about to be elected will not approve the Rapallo treaty is unfounded," Signor Bonomi, Italian War Minister, said to the Associated Press today. "M. Trumbitch (the Jugo-Slav Foreign Minister) promised that the treaty will be ratified by royal decree, as was done by Italy in the case of the treaty of St. Germain.

"The Alpine frontier obtained by us is the strongest that could be desired for defensive purposes, without having any advanced posts from which to carry out aggressive measures against our neighbors. For this reason we consented to give up Longatico, which dominates Leibach, as we do not believe anybody in Italy is anxious to conquer Leibach. But our frontier even there is almost inaccessible.

GAVE UP VILLAGES.

"We spontaneously gave up the small villages of Castua and Spinico, because they are Slav centers and not necessary to our defense. We wished to keep Zara not for strategic purposes or because it can be fortified, but only in order to have that great beacon of Italian civilization on the Eastern Adriatic.

"As for Montenegro and Albania, the conference at Rapallo has not bartered any of their territories, nor has it violated the independence or will of other peoples; it only discussed questions strictly connected with Italy and Jugo-Slavia.

FIUME IS SILENT.

"D'Annunzio must be satisfied that his noble aim has been reached. During the night we have tried to communicate with him in order to know his impressions. But Fiume and D'Annunzio have been impenetrably silent."

Admiral Acton, head of the General Staff of the Italian navy, said:

"The problem has been perfectly solved concerning the strategic defense of the upper Adriatic, but the central Adriatic with the loss of Dalmatia, especially the stronghold of Sebenico, leaves our coast at the mercy of those, who, besides Sebenico, possessed Cattaro. In fact, Lagosta, which we hold, can merely serve as an observation post on Cattaro, but is insufficient for our maritime defense. Therefore, the problem of the central and lower Adriatic remains as before the war."

BURLINGTON TRAIN MAIL SACKS STOLEN.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

COUNCIL BLUFFS (Iowa) Nov. 13.—Robbers climbed aboard a Burlington passenger train in the yards here this evening, broke into a mail car, and made away with an undetermined number of mail sacks when the train was moving from the Union Pacific transfer to the Burlington city station. Two sacks were recovered later.

The number stolen will not be known until a check is made of the mail.

TROTZKY NOW A REAL CZAR.

carefully controlled as the circulation of dangerous drugs.

Merciless war is waged on all of the distinctively religious literature produced by Christianity. The Bible, Dante, Milton and Bunyan have disappeared.

Bolshevism tends to ignore all history prior to October, 1917. Its present craze is for publishing all the forecasts of a future Utopia that have been made from the time of Sir Thomas More to the time of H. G. Wells.

Shakespeare is popular and Shakespearian plays which have not been produced since the time of Queen Elizabeth are now to be seen on the stage of Moscow.

PREACH CLASS HATRED.

The Bolsheviks have produced films preaching an intense class hatred which will make Russia a center of infection for the next half century.

The minuteness of the care taken by the Bolsheviks to create a favorable impression on the visitor is almost incredible. It goes even so far as to send street cars flying past while the foreign observer is looking and to galvanize into fictitious life factories which have long been dead and which will be dead again once the visitor has left.

It may seem incredible, but it is a fact that Tchitcherin personally sees every news telegram that leaves Moscow by radio.

Tchitcherin is a visionary and a fanatic who before the Bolshevists came into power divided his ancestral acres among his tenantry, and he is at present penniless.

All the Bolshevist chiefs who are really dangerous to the world lead a simple life and work very hard.

EDUCATION—RELIGION.

Education is conducted with enthusiasm and will, if continued, reduce illiteracy in Russia, but it is very antireligious and inculcates that antinational and class hatred which is the first principle of the Bolshevists. A generation of this teaching will overthrow every religion in Russia and convert the country into a factory of high explosives, in the metaphysical sense, which will make it a danger to the whole world.

Princely apartments in the Kremlin are sometimes placed at the disposal of visitors whom the Bolsheviks regard as peculiarly sound in their views, and some of these highly honored guests have been foreign journalists. Along with this lavish hospitality there is a sleepless vigilance to prevent the "guest" from coming into contact with the wrong sort of people and most meticulous care to keep him in the right atmosphere. Each correspondent has attached to him an interpreter, guide and warder, all in one. This functionary reports every movement of his charge.

There are now no candidates for priesthood in the Russian church, and all ecclesiastical seminaries are closed.

CATHOLICS ARE ENEMIES.

The most formidable enemy of Bolshevism among the religious bodies in Russia is the Roman Catholic church. There has been no interference on the part of the Bolsheviks with the Catholic services, but their schools have been closed, their school books and libraries confiscated and the children of Catholics have been forced to attend Communist schools.

The standard of education and general culture among the Roman Catholic clergy in Russia is much higher than that which prevails among the Orthodox clergy, hence the machinery of the Catholic church is able to function much as usual.

In another year Siberia and the Urals will be, like Moscow, a pile of dust and ashes covering the grave of lost illusions.

The wreckage in the environs of Moscow made a more dismal impression on me than any of the war-wrecked cities I have visited.

In the suburbs of Moscow I saw schoolboys, editors, teachers, poets and sculptors setting out into the country to collect food and fuel from the villagers.

In Moscow shop windows, as large and as stylish as the best in Regent street, I have seen nothing save a small plateful of carrots or about a dozen frost-bitten potatoes, and these for sale at almost the same price as the diamonds they had replaced.

The bakers' shops have been replaced by huge bare government offices as uninviting as crematories, and even these only give out bread on tickets.

IN PRIMITIVE STAGE.

Russia is a huge country in a primitive stage of civilization and dwellers in remote steppes will not be affected by Bolshevism for years.

Today Lenine is busy laying the foundations of a great capitalistic state in Communistic Russia. In a speech delivered in Moscow while I was there the Red dictator confessed that he did not quite know toward what harbor he was drifting.

Why, indeed, should not the handful of desperate adventurers who have conquered Russia by their ideas evolve, with the support of international capital, into a ruling caste, even as the disreputable freebooters who conquered England in 1066 by their swords evolved into a perfectly respectable people?

Lenine set out to kill individualism in Russia as well as militarism, but all he has killed has been the vague Socialistic spirit which tinged the thoughts of most Russians. A harsh, greedy individualism has now mastered most of the Russian people.

The Bolsheviks declared they would extirpate all capitalists, but, judging by innumerable indications, they will, if they last, find themselves in the hands of foreign capitalists.

The Bolsheviks are losing touch with the normal workers at a very rapid rate indeed, and in a short time every member of the party will be a bureaucrat.

In the railway station at Ekaterinburg are posted charts showing how to make bombs. There are also posted exhortations to study and denunciations of ignorance and illiteracy as unpardonable crimes.

Peter the Great has been knocked off his pedestal in the center of Ekatrinburg and his place has been taken by a large marble head of Karl Marx. Catherine the Great has also been deposed.

Bolshevism itself consists of great promises and no performances.

Railway carriages in Russia are not now divided into classes, nor are there first and second-class waiting rooms at the railway stations.

Double the amount due on insufficiently stamped letters will be collected from those receiving them.

Printed matter and commercial papers will be restricted in weight to four kilograms, except single volumes which may weigh five kilograms.

UNIVERSAL METERING SAVES CITY'S WATER.

WATERWORKS ASSOCIATION IS TOLD HOW SAN FRANCISCO ELIMINATES WASTE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 13.—From 10,000,000 to 12,000,000 gallons of water were saved daily in San Francisco the last year by the elimination of leaks and waste, C. E. Clemons of the Spring Valley Water Company said today in an address here at the convention of the California section, American Waterworks Association. This saving could not have been made if the city had not been universally metered, Clemens asserted.

"Chlorination in California" was discussed by Ralph Hilscher of the State Board of Health. Other speakers were L. M. Anderson, controller of the Public Service Commission of Los Angeles; S. B. Morris, chief engineer of the Pasadena Water Department; C. B. Jackson, superintendent of the Fresno water supply; J. P. Fieberling of the East Bay Water Company of Oakland, and E. P. McMurtry and George W. Pracy of San Francisco.

QUARTERLY DIVIDEND ON COMMON PASSED.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

AKRON, Nov. 13.—For the first time in many years the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company of this city today passed its regular quarterly dividend on common stock. The decision was made at a meeting of the board of directors, who issued the following prepared statement:

"The directors of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company make the following statement: 'At the meeting held today it was decided by the directors that in view of the present financial and business conditions, and in order to conserve the cash resources of the company, it was inadvisable to declare the usual quarterly dividend on the common stock payable on December 1, 1920.'"

The usual quarterly dividend of the company which it has paid for many years is 3 per cent. When the last quarterly dividend was declared in August it was cut to 2½ per cent.

FLAGS ARE ORDERED FLOWN AT HALF-MAST.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 13.—Mayors of San Francisco, Oakland and other cities in the Twelfth Federal Reserve District issued proclamations urging that all flags on public buildings, business houses and residences be lowered to half-mast tomorrow in commemoration of the soldiers, sailors and marines who lost their lives in the war, it was announced today by Theodore Hardee, director of the war savings organization of the district.

The proclamations are in line with a recent executive order by President Wilson in regard to flags on government buildings, vessels and Army posts.

NEW ENFORCEMENT MEASURE CERTAIN.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

FRESNO, Nov. 13.—Declaring his intention "not to quit fighting until we have won," State Senator Harris of Fresno, author of the so-called Harris State Enforcement Bill, defeated as a proposition at the recent election, today said that one thing certain was that another enforcement law will be introduced in the next session of the Legislature.

LEAGUE COUNCIL SEEKS TO RULE.

agenda of the approaching meeting of the Assembly of the League, with the result that the French Ministry of Foreign Affairs has obtained its first information regarding the program of the meeting from the Paris newspapers.

With respect to that question of paramount importance to France, Germany's admission into the League of Nations, M. Bourgeois is reported to have differed for a long time from the official policy of stern refusal as announced by the French government. He is said now to have given way, but reluctantly, to the official presidency of the republic. Premier Millerand was obliged to dispatch to Bourgeois two official letters censuring his action. What followed is illuminating and worthy of note.

WIELDS GREAT POWER.

Bourgeois, as President of the Senate, wields great political influence and thereby succeeded in obtaining from Millerand on the very eve of his election to the presidency, the withdrawal of the two letters of official censure referred to above and even took up a definiteld rondemnatory attitude towards the Quai d'Orsay whom he suspected wrongly of having inspired the measure originally.

Premier Leygues is a very weak man himself and is entirely dependent on Bourgeois for mercy in the Senate, so that he is absolutely unable to oppose M. Bourgeois much less discipline him. Thus Bourgeois had no difficulty in arranging matters so that with regard to the meeting of the League of Nations Assembly in Geneva, he would be given only written information respecting the principles of French policy and nothing in the nature of formally binding instructions.

SEEKS UNION DOMINATION.

Albert Thomas, head of the International Labor Bureau created by the League of Nations, supplies another instance of the attempts at cosmopolitan government to which I have referred. His idea is that the League of Nations is bound to fail sooner or later because it will have no concrete material power of any kind to rely upon. He asserts that the international labor organization which he has been building up will be found to constitute a very powerful substitute because it is able to command the support of the international syndicalists' organization, the strength of which he could mobilize effectively against any defaulting country.

PRESSURE ON SWISS.

At the present moment M. Thomas is bringing strong pressure to bear upon the Swiss government in an endeavor to compel it to observe the regulations with regard to the eight-hour working day adopted by the labor conference when it met at Washington. He alleges that the Swiss are trying to evade some details of those regulations. M. Motta, the Swiss President, is understood to have expressed his keen displeasure over the action of the International Labor Bureau. However, Thomas successfully established the autonomy of his bureau with regard to both the national governments and also the League of Nations from which it gets all necessary funds without rendering any account to anybody.

From the foregoing it becomes apparent that the so-called Lodge reservations will not supply any remedy for the existing imperfections of the League and that in order to be made into a useful organization the League as it now exists will have to undergo the most drastic reform.

BLUE-SKY PROSPECTS ROB IOWA OF HOMES.

INVESTMENTS DIVERT MONEY FROM BUILDING SENATE COMMITTEE TOLD.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

OMAHA, Nov. 13.—Omaha business men testifying today before Senator Calder of New York, chairman of the Senate committee on reconstruction, expressed the opinion that housing conditions here would improve if more money were available for loans.

Investment in what he referred to as "blue sky" projects was mentioned by V. Ray Gould, president of the Omaha Master Builders' Association, as having diverted money from building investments.

Responding to this statement, Senator Calder asserted that the statement was made to him in Des Moines that Iowans had paid out upwards of $200,000,000 to "blue sky" promoters in the past three or four years.

HIGH SCHOOL CLASH DEVELOPS GUN PLAY.

BOY SHOT THROUGH HEEL AND SHOOTER BEATEN INSENSIBLE BY COMPANIONS.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 13.—Antagonism between the sophomore and freshman classes of the Waukegan High School developed tonight into a gun battle and free-for-all fight in which one student was shot in the heel and another beaten into insensibility. The students involved in the affray were from some of the most prominent families in the city.

The row started when a party of boys and girls, including Carl Ambrose, the 13-year-old son of Dr. C. S. Ambrose, commander of the American Legion post here, drove up to the High School building to attend a party. As they left the car they were confronted by five masked youths. Ambrose, the smallest in the party, was gruffly ordered to go with them. Several times previously Ambrose has been hazed by upper classmen. This time instead of obeying the command of the five youths, he whipped out the .45 Colt automatic pistol, used overseas by his father, and fired one shot. This shot tore through the heel of Theodore Lux, a sophomore, who has not yet been identified as a member of the hazing party. Neil Dickson, an upper class man, tore the gun from Ambrose. The masked youths then beat him into insensibility.

An investigation headed by W. I. Hiller, president of the Waukegan High School, is under way.

FATHER NOT LIABLE IF CHILDREN DRIVE.

AUTO VICTIMS GET NOTHING UNLESS ERRAND INVOLVED, SUPREME COURT SAYS.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

REDLANDS, Nov. 13.—Reversing the Superior Court of the county and the Appellate Court, the Supreme Court has decided that the parent of a boy or girl is not responsible for an accident in which the child figured while driving an automobile for pleasure only. The decision came in the case of Mrs. Emma Spence and Philip Spence against Henry Fisher, millionaire resident of this city.

The suit resulted from an accident on Cajon street, when an automobile of Mr. Fisher's, driven by his daughter, Miss Natalia, struck a buggy in which Mr. and Mrs. Spence were riding. They were thrown to the pavement and injured. They brought suit for damages which were allowed by Judge J. W. Curtis of the Superior Court. His decision was upheld by the Appellate Court.

The Supreme Court decision is that if the boy or girl has the machine, without being under orders of the parent, and is bent on pleasure, then the parent is not responsible. The testimony showed that Natalia Fisher's negligence was the cause of the accident, but also showed she was on her way to a concert and was not under orders of her father. Had she been on an errand for her parents then they would have been responsible, the court holds.

The decision is on the action of an adult child, for Miss Fisher was 19 years of age when the accident occurred. The decision recites: "The question is one over which there has been irreconcilable conflict in the decisions of courts of last resort. It may safely be said that now it is generally conceded that the liability on the father must be based on the conclusion [illegible] was acting as the [illegible] for the father [illegible] car. There is no [illegible] ing the doctrine of [illegible] father, that we have [illegible] where the child is [illegible] father."

BENSON AGAIN MADE CHAIRMAN

President Announces Personnel of Shipping Board.

Chester H. Rowell of Fresno Named as Republican.

Approval May be Held Up Until After March 4.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Reappointment of Rear-Admiral W. S. Benson as chairman of the Shipping Board was announced today at the White House. At the same time announcement was made of the appointment of six other members of the new board authorized by the Merchant Marine Act.

The other six members are:

Frederick I. Thompson, Alabama (Dem.,) term of five years.

Joseph N. Teal, Oregon (Dem.,) term of four years.

John A. Donald, New York (Dem.,) term of three years.

Chester H. Rowell, California (Rep.,) term of two years.

Guy D. Goff, Wisconsin (Rep.,) term of one year.

Charles Sutter, Missouri (Rep.,) term of one year.

RECESS APPOINTMENTS.

Admiral Benson is appointed from Georgia as a Democrat and his term is for six years. The appointments are recess ones and the nominations under the law are subject to approval by the Senate.

The chairman and Donald are reappointed from the present board while the selection of Thompson and Teal was made some time ago, but was not announced because some of the members appointed then declined to serve. They included Theodore Marburg of Baltimore, Gavin McNab of San Francisco and Martin Gillen of Wisconsin.

Under the law not more than four members of the board can be of any one political party. Four Democrats and three Republicans have been appointed, but in some quarters today doubt was expressed whether the Republican Senate would approve this political alignment in view of the fact that a Republican administration will come into power in March. It was regarded as possible that action on the nominations would be held up until after March 4.

IMMEDIATE ORGANIZATION.

Immediate organization of the new board is looked for as a number of policies with respect to the government-owned merchant marine laid down in the Merchant Marine Act cannot be carried into effect until the full board has begun to function. Much of the preliminary work, however, has been done by the present board.

Since Congress failed to make a specific appropriation for salaries of members of the new board, they are not expected to draw any pay until Congress at its next session has made funds available. The salaries fixed by law are $12,000 for each commissioner. Members of the board must devote all their time to the duties of their office and they must divest themselves from any interest which they may have in the shipping industry.

VIRGIN AND CHILD STOLEN TWO YEARS AGO FOUND BY POLICE.

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PARIS, Nov. 13. — After a ten months' search of French art galleries the police here have discovered in the shop of a Paris dealer a painting of the "Virgin and Child," which was stolen from the church of Ste. Marie Des Crottes in Italy last January.

The painting is valued at $20,000 and was sold by the thieves who stole it for that many francs.

The price for which they sold it aroused the dealers' suspicions and there followed the arrest of two brothers who it was charged succeeded with the connivance of a railroad guard in crossing the Franco-Italian frontier with the painting.

The famous theft of Leonardo da Vinci's "Mona Lisa" being recalled by this incident dealers here declare that it is impossible for a great work of art to be stolen without it being found, the "Mona Lisa" having been returned to the Louvre after the person who stole it had tried in vain for two years to find a purchaser of it.

The painting of the "Virgin and Child," which has just been recovered in the work of Duccio—di Buominaegna, a Sienese painter, whose famous altar piece in the cathedral of Siena was begun in 1308. He was one of the founders of the Siena School of Art.

MINISTERS TO PLEAD FOR THE RED CROSS.

SERMONS TODAY WILL EMPHASIZE UNFINISHED WORK LEFT IN EUROPE.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13. — The uncompleted work of the American Red Cross in Europe will be emphasized in sermons that will be delivered in churches throughout the country tomorrow, which has been designated as Red Cross Sunday, Dr. Livingston Farrand, chairman of the Central Committee of the Red Cross, said today.

Thousands of ministers are expected to discuss the organization's relief work and to urge the public to continue to support it.

Dr. Farrand, who recently returned from Europe, said he considered the problem of re-establishing the 11,000,000 orphans of the war-stricken nations on a basis that will assure their future usefulness toward Europe's economic welfare as overshadowing all others faced by European countries today.

The origin of the fire is not known, the first notice of it being when flames shot out from the second-story window.

Three firemen were injured in the collapse of the second floor.

PRINCE, JEWELS, LOVE IN LIMELIGHT AGAIN.

PARISIAN ASKS POLICE TO RECOVER NECKLACE PAWNED BY CONSORT.

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PARIS, Nov. 13.—Prince Antoine de Bourbon's love affairs and his jewels again are in the limelight. The Prince has appealed to the Paris police to recover his famous golden mascot necklace and other jewels, which a pretty divorcee, whose confidence he shared, admits having pawned in London for $50,000. The Prince's gems are valued at $250,000.

Several months ago he recovered them from the divorced husband of Mme. Louise Chardonnet. Mme. Louise later accepted the hospitality of the Prince at his private hotel in the Rue Spontini, in the heart of the most fashionable part of Paris.

However, when the Prince returned from a business trip to Italy, recently, he learned that his family jewels had been extracted from his strong box. Mme. Louise readily explained that she had pawned them when the household budget needed reinforcing.

The Prince, on the other hand contends that a prominent physician who also is friendly toward the divorcee is partly responsible for their disappearance.

While the courts are deciding what they shall do in the case, the Prince has taken the remainder of the gems which have not been pawned to safer precincts.

ITALIAN DEPUTIES IN VIOLENT OUTBURST.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

ROME, Nov. 12 (Delayed.)—Violent scenes occurred in the Chamber of Deputies when the reform Socialist Drago, Deputy from Palermo, accused the Maximalist Vincenzo Vacirca, Deputy from Bologna, but a native of Sicily, of having speculated in land, which Deputy Drago accused Vacirca of having sold to Sicilian peasants at a profit of 70,000 lire.

Several times the two Deputies were restrained from coming to blows by friends. On the suggestion of Deputy Modigliani, Socialist, the President of the Chamber appointed a committee to ascertain whether Deputy Drago's accusation is true. If the charge is proved Deputy Vacirca must resign; in case it is false Deputy Drago must submit his resignation.

GREEK ELECTION FATEFUL.

Monarchists Opposing Venizelos Seek to Restore Constantine.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

ATHENS, Nov. 13.—All Greece is deeply absorbed in tomorrow's election, the outcome of which is generally expected to be the return of Premier Venizelos and the Liberal party to power by a large majority. The election is regarded as having the greatest influence on the country's future.

Although he has expressed himself as confident of victory, the Premier has been conducting a most active campaign. He returned to Athens on Thursday in time to address an armistice gathering, where he was given an ovation by more than 100,000 persons.

The Venizelists carried huge wood and paper anchors, emblem of the Liberal party. Many persons shouted: "Long live the republic." For the most part the crowd was orderly. It was made up largely of workers. The Venizelists assert that the attendance at the meeting was twice as large as the opposition's gathering on the Sunday previous at the same place.

Both sides have charged that persons were paid to attend the meetings.

TROUBLE IS FORECAST.

While the country is calm, trouble is forecast after the election, no matter which side wins. If Venizelos gets the majority of 270 of a total of 368, which his supporters claim, it is expected the Royalists will denounce the elections as fraudulent. Should the Royalists win, the Venizelists have announced they will not accept the political dethronement of their chief.

Demetros Gounaris, former Premier and leader of the element supporting the return of former King Constantine to the throne of Greece, who is the opponent of Premier Venizelos in the elections, has requested passports to Italy. If he fails to be elected, his parliamentary immunity expires.

EXILED FOR TREASON.

Gounaris, with the approval of M. Venizelos, was permitted to return to Greece to participate in the elections, although he was exiled during the war on the charge of high treason. His request for passports is regared by the supporters of Premier Venizelos as a significant indication of the trend of the forthcoming election.

The outstanding question which the elections will decide is whether Premier Venizelos will be given a free hand in the selection of a new king or whether the opposition will make possible the restoration to power of former King Constantine.

Premier Venizelos is likely to have a big majority in the new provinces of Macedonia and Thrace and the islands, but in old Greece the struggle is a spirited one.

ALLIES WATCH RESULT.

Representatives of the Allies in Greece are watching the elections with kenest interest, both England and France having strongly indicated their opposition to any government which would favor the return of Constantine.

It is the belief in Allied circles that the defeat of Premier Venizelos would probably result in assumption of the throne by Constantine. The Gounaris party is making a determined fight for success and the Venizelos adherents charge that Gounaris has the full support of all pro-German influence.

The election of Gounaris, in the opinion of Allied observers, would mean the return of Greece to German domination, but these same observers regard the re-election of Venizelos as almost certain.

ACTION CRITICIZED.

M. Venizelos's action in permitting his opponent to return to Greece, although exiled, has caused an agreeable impression throughout Greece. The opposition, however, accuses the Premier of entirely disregarding the constitution by the step. It says that Venizelos should facilitate the arrival in Greece of Prince Paul and resign immediately Paul reaches Athens.

Newspapers favorable to M. Venizelos point out his achievement, one of them saying his policy "has led our small kingdom to be a big one," and that "he has saved Greece from Germany's clutches."

ATHENS, Nov. 11.—The censorship, which ostensibly was removed last September, has again been put into force against foreign correspondents. In this connection it is recalled that on one occasion recently Minister of Foreign affairs Politis announced that censorship on news sent by foreign correspondents did not exist adding: "No civilized country which respects itself would maintain a censorship except for military matters."

WAR WITH JAPS "UNTHINKABLE."

Ambassador to Japan Regrets Ill-Advised Talk.

Many Problems, but None of Them Unsolvable.

Growing Trade Relations of Nations Emphasized.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 13.—War between Japan and the United States is simply unthinkable, declared Roland S. Morris, American Ambassador to Japan, in addressing the American Academy of Political and Social Science here tonight.

Asserting he did not intend to take up any question which might happen to be the subject of friendly discussion between the American and Japanese governments, Mr. Morris expressed regret for the ill-considered statements which from time to time find expression in both countries as to the suggestion of war.

MANY COMMON INTERESTS.

"It is as Premier Hara has recently said, 'simply unthinkable'" Mr. Morris continued. "That there are pending questions for the consideration of both our governments is no valid evidence of unfriendly feeling between them. On the contrary it is the best possible evidence of the many interests we have in common—many of them difficult and complex, but not one of them insoluble."

After paying a tribute to the American missionary work of sixty years, the Ambassador referred to growing trade relations as being of such proportions that Japan purchases from us and sells to us more than any other single nation with which she deals.

FAITH IN HIGH IDEALS.

"Are we not justified in stating," he asked, "that the history of our relations with Japan has been one of frank confidence, mutual understanding and sincere respect? And are we not justified in approaching any pending questions in the same generous spirit, free from bitterness, rancor and exaggeration?

"If we do I am sure it will meet from the government and people of Japan a response which will demonstrate anew their abiding faith in America's unselfish purposes and high ideals of international conduct."

BILLINGS'S PROSECUTOR NOT FOR CONVICTION.

SAYS POLICE OFFICER'S STORY OF FRAME-UP PROBABLY IS TRUE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 13.—A statement that he would not now vote for the conviction of Warren K. Billings, who is serving a life sentence for murder with Thomas J. Mooney, in connection with an explosion here, and that if Draper Hand, police officer, said that Billings was a victim of a "frame-up," it probably was correct, was made here today by James F. Brennan, who as an assistant District Attorney prosecuted and convicted Billings.

"Were I on the Billings jury with my present knowledge of the case, I would not vote for his conviction," Brennan said. "I would not be a prosecutor again for anything.

"Billings had a fair trial and was given good treatment as far as the presentation of the case on my part was concerned. I took what witnesses the police department furnished me and tried to make a case against him. Their stories told to me after interviews with the police seemed inconsistent in many points and incredible in others. Draper Hand had full charge of these witnesses. If Hand admits now that the witnesses were framed it was probably the fact."

The first official action on the statements made by Brennan and Hand is to be taken by the Police Commission at its meeting next Monday night, Dist.-Atty. Mathew Brady said he was advised today. Brady said that his office had formed no policy in regard to the statements, but it was possible that it would conduct an investigation also.

ENGLISH PRESSMEN AMBUSHED BY IRISH.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DUBLIN, Nov. 13.—An official telegram received at Dublin castle tonight from Castle Island county Kerry, states:

"A party of English pressmen, traveling under police escort, were ambushed while motoring between Castle Island and Tralee by about seventy armed men. The police escorted the attackers resolutely and succeeded not only in defending their charge, but in capturing seven of the attackers and their motor van. Two attackers are reported killed and several wounded. The press party and escort escaped injury."

THEORY OF MURDER NOW IS DISSIPATED.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

FRESNO, Nov. 13.—A theory of the San Francisco and Los Angeles police that Andrew Slavich, well-known fruit dealer of Fresno and San Francisco, and his son, Ivan, were murdered, was dissipated here this afternoon when the father, located at a hotel, declared that his son left here November 9 for Chicago. Slavich knew nothing of the belief that he and his son had been murdered, and at once communicated with his family in San Francisco to relieve their fears.

HOOVER TO MEET LEADERS OF UNION.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Herbert Hoover, former Food Administrator and member of the President's second industrial conference, is expected to meet with the executive council of the American Federation of Labor early next week to discuss the question of co-operation of labor officials and scientists to promote improved working conditions and increased production.

WILSON VISITED BY RELATIVES.

White House Social Activity Taken as Sign of President's Better Health.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Social activity at the White House, which has increased since the national election, is regarded here as a certain indication of improvement in President Wilson's health.

Just now the Wilsons are entertaining a house party, having as guests Miss Margaret Wilson and Mrs. Wilson Gibbs McAdoo, the President's daughters, and their cousin, Miss Helen Woodrow Bones.

This is the first time in many months that the President's immediate family circle has been so nearly complete, Mrs. Francis Bowes Sayre, third daughter, being the only absentee. Miss Bones, who used to be a member of the White House household, had not visited the President and Mrs. Wilson since their last trip abroad.

POLISH AIR HERO BACK IN CHICAGO.

Col. Fauntleroy, Former Garage Worker, Beat Reds, Saved Lemberg.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 13.—Three years ago when the news of the sinking of the Lusitania filled the world with horror, Credvie Fauntleroy threw down his tools in H. F. Wolf's garage and left to join the American Legion. He said it was a time for men and his place was at the front. Today he returned, the hero of Poland. Church, political and financial dignitaries swarmed through the gates of the La Salle-street station to greet Col. Fauntleroy, commander of the Polish air forces on the southern front. He, with a handful of intrepid aviators, had turned back Gen. Budenny's Bolshevik hordes from Lemberg and saved that district from the unspeakable horrors of a Bolshevik invasion.

SEEKS FOOD FOR CHILDREN.

Col. Fauntleroy is on a four-months' furlough and has returned to Chicago as a representative of the American relief administration of which Herbert C. Hoover is chairman.

"I've come to get food for Poland," he said. "We are marking time there until spring. And we need food for the children of Poland."

Cheers interrupted the modest hero as Polish war veterans swarmed around him and sought to embrace the stalwart figure. The colonel saluted as the newspaper cameraman clicked and then was surrounded by the applause of the great crowd.

ORGANIZED AIR SQUADRON.

Discharged as a major from the Lafayette squadron at the end of the war, Fauntleroy and a dozen adventurous young men headed for Poland. He organized the Kosciusko squadron and when the great Red drive began on Warsaw it was Fauntleroy and his fellow-aviators fighting the Bolshevik hordes, night and day from the air, finally turned the thrust at Lemberg into a disastrous rout.

LABOR CONDITIONS IN MEXICO BETTER.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 13.—Labor conditions throughout Mexico took a better turn yesterday, according to official statements. Advices from Vera Cruz asserted the strike of stevedores and dockworkers there had ended and that the men had returned to work.

The settlement was said to be final, the sixty-day armistice agreed to last Friday not having been accepted by the workers after their representatives had come to this city and had signed it following a conference with Provisional President De la Huerta.

ZION PARK IS GIVEN PROPER RECOGNITION.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

DENVER, Nov. 13.—Zion Park, in Southern Utah, will be the main route of the national park-to-park highway as a result of a resolution adopted this morning by the National Park-to-Park Highway Association in convention here.

The resolution, which was introduced by Adolph Mack of San Francisco, also provided that the park will be shown on all future maps issued by the association. Dr. J. F. Broddus of Salt Lake City last night gave an illustrated lecture on Zion Park before the delegates.

Slow Demand for Wool.

His Hearing Restored.

The invisible antiseptic ear drum invented by Mr. A. O. Leonard, which is in reality a miniature megaphone, fitting inside the ear and entirely out of sight, is restoring the hearing of literally hundreds of people in New York City. Mr. Leonard invented this remarkable drum to relieve himself of deafness and head noises, and it does this so successfully that no one could tell that he is a deaf man. This ear drum is effective when deafness is caused by catarrh or by perforated, partially or wholly destroyed natural drums. A request for information addressed to A. O. Leonard, Suite 111, 70 Fifth avenue, New York City, will be given a prompt reply.—[Advertisement.

PHONOGRAPHS AND RECORDS

"All music finds full and true expression in the mellow tones of the Brunswick."

Its ready adaptability to play all makes of records at their best, the truly distinctive styles and wonderful cabinet work make the most sought after and highly appreciated phonograph in the world today

The Brunswick
ALL PHONOGRAPHS IN ONE

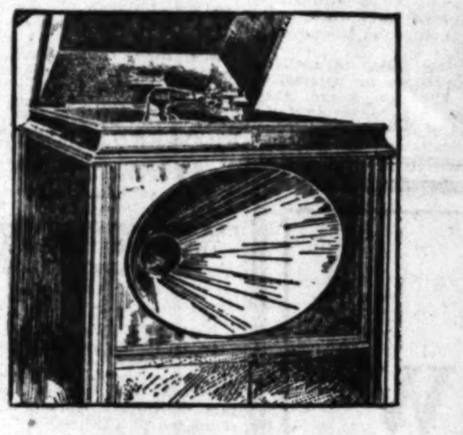
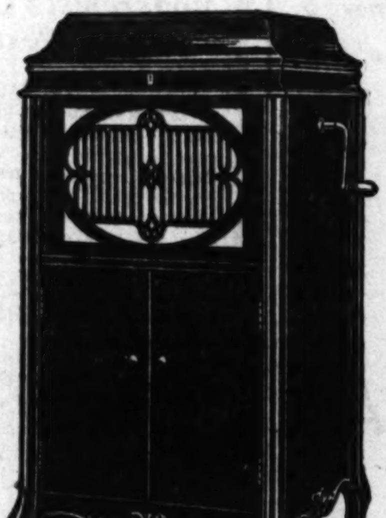
The Ultona

The Ultona, an exclusive all-record reproducer, to be obtained only on The Brunswick, not an attachment, but a built-in part of every Brunswick. It plays all the records of all the artists of all the world—and it plays them at their best.



The Amplifier

The Brunswick Tone Amplifier and Acoustic throat made entirely of moulded wood, gives added richness and fullness to the tone. Does away with surface noises and metallic sounds.



Other Models Up to $775

Two Exclusive Features
You can't buy elsewhere

The reason so many critical music lovers prefer The Brunswick is not hard to find. It is all due to the Brunswick Method of Peproduction, two features of which are pictured at the left.

Tone is the chief reason for so many friends for Brunswick. And tone depends largely upon the reproducer and the tone amplifier.

In both of these features Brunswick has gone far in advance. The Ultona plays all records, not confining you to one make. And it plays each exactly as intended, with the proper diaphragm, the proper needle. Best of all, it is not a hastily contrived makeshift, but a basic invention.

The Brunswick Tone Amplifier is built entirely of wood. Not merely the part you see, but the throat between the reproducer and amplifier. The usual way is to make this throat of cast metal, a faulty way that brings metallic sounds.

You'll appreciate how far in advance The Brunswick is; you'll admire its superior tone. Hearing is the proof of The Brunswick pudding. All we ask you to do it to hear The Brunswick with your own ears.

ARIZONA HAS A BUILDING BOOM.

Operations Throughout State Extremely Active.

New Industry Added in Pencil Factory at Flagstaff.

Bar Association Meets and Discusses Ethics.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

PHOENIX, Nov. 11.—Building operations in Arizona are extremely active, despite the slackening of mining work and production.

An entirely new industry may be added, in a pencil-wood factory at Flagstaff, to handle juniper, which, in three varieties, is abundant at a slightly lower altitude than that in which the pines are known. The wood of at least one variety is pronounced excellent for the purpose.

Safford has a new 100-barrel roller flouring mill. Chandler is to have a $40,000 ice plant, owned by H. J. Robichauf. At least a dozen new long-staple and several short-staple gins were added during the summer to the cotton handling equipment of the larger valleys.

BIG AUDITORIUM.

Work is being pushed on the big Shrine Auditorium, in Phoenix, which may be ready for the proposed inaugural ball early in January. In size it is 100x188 and it will cost about $130,000. The Masonic Building on Central avenue has been sold, for $75,000, to Mose Drachman of Tucson. Phoenix Elks are planning a large office building and clubhouse, to cost at least $200,000. Winslow Elks are to build a $50,000 clubhouse.

At the Pioneers' Home, at Prescott, accommodations are being provided, at a cost of $65,700, for sixty-eight more old Arizonans, bringing the gross number to about 130.

In Phoenix the new six-story Walker Hotel is nearing completion. At Litchfield the Southwest Cotton Company is to build a resort hotel somewhat similar to the Hotel San Marcos at Chandler.

In Mesa plans are expected to arrive soon from Salt Lake for the new Mormon Temple, a structure to cost more than $500,000. In preparation for the work, a number of cottages are being built for the workmen, to later house the temple attendants.

The Mesa Commercial Club is setting aside $200 a month in a building fund and hopes next year to have a home of its own.

ATTORNEYS DISCUSS ETHICS.

Led by George J. Stoneman, now of Los Angeles, but for years an attorney in Phoenix, the main subject for discussion at the annual banquet of the Arizona Bar Association here was that of "Ethics."

There was rather general agreement that the Arizona method for admission of attorneys is lax and that something should be adopted similar to that known in California, where there is close scrutiny by a bar committee of the character and standing of every applicant who may apply for admission, on the basis of credentials from another State. In Arizona all that is necessary now is a motion by a local practicing attorney and the presentation of a license from another State.

DEFENDS BAR.

In the course of the discussion, there was warm defense of the Arizona bar by Supreme Justice Baker and others, who expressed belief that in this State was to be found as high a class of lawyers as in any of the other States of the Union.

Charles H. Rutherford of Jerome presented a report on revision of the constitution and bylaws of the association, permitting a broader membership, giving to each county a vice-president and an added council of two members and permitting holding of the annual meeting in any Arizona city at any time of the year.

Judge John H. Campbell of Tucson was elected president and Tucson was given the members of the executive committee. James E. Nelson of Phoenix was re-elected secretary - treasurer. Resolutions were passed expressive of regret over the death of Allan B. Jaynes of Tucson, a member of the association, admitted to the bar eight years ago.

MILLIONS INVOLVED IN SUIT COMPROMISE.

CLARENCE D. HILLMAN GIVES UP MORTGAGE ON GREAT VENTURA RANCHO.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 13.—Transfer of a plot of 4500 acres lying on the outskirts of Olympia, Wash., and valued in excess of $1,000,000, figured in the compromise here recently of the $900,000 larceny and conspiracy action brought by Edward and Catherine Wineman of San Luis Obispo against Clarence D. Hillman, Pasadena and Seattle millionaire, and others, it was announced by Theodore A. Bell, counsel for Hillman, today.

The property, according to Bell, was turned back by the Winemans to Hillman in the compromise as a result of their having become dissatisfied with the deal. The Olympia property was said in the announcement to be "upon deep water" and suitable for railroad terminals and industrial sites.

Further details in the compromise, according to the announcement, were the return to the Winemans of a $300,000 lien on the 5600-acre Bunker ranch in Solano county and a $400,000 mortgage on the Estrella ranch in San Luis Obispo and Ventura counties.

SAN JOSE JAP HOTEL DESTROYED BY FIRE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN JOSE, Nov. 13.—Fire which resulted in a loss of $75,000 destroyed the Yamamoto Hotel and half a block of stores in the Japanese district late this afternoon.

The 19-year-old daughter of A. Eiki, whose general merchandise store was destroyed, was cooking supper in the rear of the establishment when her dress caught fire. Tearing off the garment she threw it to the floor, the flames quickly spreading to adjoining rooms. The girl was seriously burned.

DANIELS WILL NOT STAND FOR HAZING.

ANNAPOLIS MIDSHIPMEN MUST BEHAVE OR NAVY DEPARTMENT WILL GET 'EM.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Declaring that the Navy Department will "go the limit" to uphold the authorities of the Naval Academy at Annapolis in their efforts to stamp out hazing at the institution, Secretary Daniels announced today that instructions had been issued that no hazing would be tolerated and that any number of midshipmen would be dismissed if necessary to end the practice.

"I would rather have 800 men at Annapolis who can obey orders than 2200 who cannot," said Mr. Daniels "When I came into the Navy Department there were only 800 students at the academy, and although there are 2200 now, the navy would survive if the number were reduced to 800 again. The presence of insubordinate midshipmen is not desired. Men who are being trained to give orders must first of all learn to obey."

No new cases of hazing had been reported as a result of the investigation now being conducted under the direction of Rear Admiral Scales, Superintendent of the Academy, Mr. Daniels said. One midshipman already has been expelled, the Secretary announced, adding that he had entire confidence in Rear Admiral Scales's ability to handle the situation.

MINING CONGRESS TO DISCUSS OPEN SHOP.

GOLD PROBLEM ALSO TO BE QUESTION BEFORE MEETING AT DENVER.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

DENVER, Nov. 13.—War's contribution to the business of saving lives in mine accidents was shown here today for the first time when the United States Bureau of Mines opened its educational exhibit in connection with the annual convention of the American Mining Congress. It is a "geophone."

The "geophone," which, bureau officials say, was employed with remarkable success in the trenches of Europe for determining the location of enemy mines, is declared to have met the needs of the mining industry in pointing the location of entombed miners through the transmission of sound waves.

According to officials, the congress will be one of the most important to the mining industry in years. The gold problem will be discussed during the convention, which will continue five days. Recommendations for complete revision of existing tax laws, particularly as they affect the mining industry, are expected, according to officers of the convention.

The labor problem will occupy much time, according to the announced program. Many speakers were prepared to advocate the open shop. James Lord, president of the mining division of the American Federation of Labor, has been invited to address the convention. He is the only union-labor organization official in the list of speakers.

Vessels Collide and Immigrants Bring on Panic.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 13. — As her passengers, 250 of whom were immigrants, lined the rails for a glimpse of New York's skyline, the Spanish Royal Mail steamship Montserrat collided today with the Mallory Line freighter San Marcos. The vessels, moving in from quarantine, were under the lee of the Statue of Liberty. The Montserrat was beached on the Brooklyn shore before she sank. The San Marcos, her bow smashed in, made her pier safely.

Water poured through a gaping hole in the starboard side of the Montserrat. Seized with fear of disaster, the immigrants dashed for life rafts and boats. Capt. Muslera, a skipper in the Spanish service for more than a quarter-century, rang for full speed, turned the vessel sharply toward the Brooklyn shore, jumped from the bridge into the excited crowd and restored order.

Other of the ship's officers, with Ramon Manuel Villova Nova, Spanish Consul at Vera Cruz, gave assistance to Capt. Muslera by taking charge of lifeboat and raft stations and prevented immigrants from jumping overboard. One man, however, leaped over the side. He fell on the deck of a tug that had come alongside and was not seriously injured.

BUSINESS IS SOUND IN LATIN AMERICA.

EXPECTATION OF LOWER PRICES IN UNITED STATES FACTOR IN TRADING.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Despite the falling off of South America's favorable trade balance with the United States, conditions in most Latin-American countries seem to be fundamentally sound, according to Acting Director Charles E. Herring of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

"As the normal market for raw materials on which the economic prosperity of Latin America depends is re-established, conditions there will right themselves," Mr. Herring declared in a survey of trade conditions.

"It is to be expected that as lower prices are definitely reached and consumers in the United States and elsewhere resume their normal purchases, the present slump in the market for South American raw materials will be relieved by heavy purchases in the United States, Canada and other non-European countries."

Anticipation of further price reductions in the United States, Mr. Herring said, is an awkward factor in the situation. Furthermore, he added, the Latin-American importer in many cases is obliged to pay a premium of from 20 to 30 per cent on account of his depreciated currency.

MARKET SLUMP CONTINUES.

New Low Record for from One to Three Years Made on New York Exchange.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—New low records for a period extending from one to three years were made by the stock market today, the two-hour session showing unusual activity on decline with total sales of 700,000 shares.

Losses of one to five points resulted from extensive offerings of industrials, specialties and rails, in which steels, equipments, sugars, oils, tobacco and leathers proved most susceptible to pressure.

Short selling derived further stimulus from the day's news, various reports from out of town indicating an expansion of the downward movement in trade and industry.

Advices from New England and western and southern manufacturing centers told of additional letting down of operations in the textile trade. In one instance this was coupled with the announcement that mill operatives had accepted a 25 per cent reduction of wages.

The clearinghouse statement was the one encouraging feature of the day, a strengthening of the loan account resulting from the week's heavy liquidation of securities.

NEW WHEAT LOW.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE]

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 13.—With a decline of 25 to 50 cents a barrel at the mills here today, flour followed the course of the wheat market yesterday by touching a new low price in four years. Today's range of prices was $9.15 to $9.50 a barrel for family patents, and represents a reduction of $1.95 to $2 a barrel since the first of the month.

CANADIAN DECLINE.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE]

MONTREAL, Nov. 13.—Shares of Atlantic Sugar Refineries, Limited, which were selling at 164 last July and have fallen steadily since the sugar situation became acute, fell another ten points to twenty-two on the stock exchange here this morning.

FLOUR REDUCTION.

TACOMA, Nov. 13.—Millers here today announced a reduction of 60 cents a barrel in the price of flour. Standard brands were reduced to $10.60, the lowest quotation since early in 1917.

SCRAP MATERIAL CAUSE OF SCRAP.

Name of Bay State Congressman is Mentioned.

Delay Over Sale Caused Loss of Money, Claim.

Walsh Committee Hears of Ship Operations.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—The name of Representative James A. Gallivan of Massachusetts was brought into testimony offered here today in the Walsh committee inquiry into the affairs of the United States Shipping Board.

Robert E. Kline, special representative of the board's supply and sales department, was testifying as to methods used in disposal of surplus material. In the course of his testimony he described an effort on the part of his department to procure what he said was an advantageous contract for disposal of scrap material. A bid for its sale on a six months' supply basis at a rate of 50 cents a ton over the market price was accepted, rejected, accepted again and once more held up because an official in Washington discovered he had acted without authority, he said.

In the interim another form of bid had been offered. The second bidder alleged he had been discriminated against and, according to the witness, the board received from Mr. Gallivan a telegram complaining that this bidder, one of his constituents, had not been treated fairly. This first telegram, the witness added, was soon followed by another which he termed sharp, demanding an investigation and threatening to take the matter to the floor of Congress.

DELAY COST MONEY.

The insistence of Mr. Gallivan, the witness said, no doubt caused the home office of the board to give the controversy over the "scrap" contracts quicker consideration. At any rate, he said, he forwarded to the board a complete file of the case. The delay in determining the successful bider, however, cost the government money, he declared, for at that time—last June and July—the market for scrap material was much higher than it now is.

Scrap material sold by the board was disclosed by the witness's testimony to include everything from unused parts, bolts, asbestos packing for steam pipes to even discarded uniforms of the guards used during the war to protect shipyards and plants. He also described details of how this material was assembled, invoiced and eventually sold.

From shipyard materials and contests over contracts for "scrap" the hearing, in its closing hours today, drifted back to operations.

DELAYS TO VESSELS.

Capt. James A. McGregor of Baltimore, now general manager for the South Atlantic Maritime Corporation, but formerly district agent for the Shipping Board at Savannah and Wilmington, was called.

He related instances of delays to Shipping Board vessels, alleged interlocking operating organizations, delays in repairs to ships and congested harbors, which he said cost the Shipping Board money. He admitted, however, that incidents similar to those he described had occurred with private companies, but not to such an extent as they did with the government operations.

He told of a shipment of resin from Savannah to Havana which could not be unloaded at the latter port because of congestion. Its consignee raised a vigorous complaint and he was paid for the resin by the steamship company which carried it with a check on Shipping Board funds.

The resin went with the ship from Havana to Buenos Aires, thence back to New York, thence to Baltimore and back to Savannah, where it was sold at a loss. The Shipping Board was reimbursed, but the point of the witness was that its funds were used without proper authority

Methods of Shipping Board operators holding cargo for their own vessels, when board vessels operated by another line were available, was criticised by the witness. He alleged that this system caused a tie-up of cotton at Savannah last fall.

"UNCLE" MOSE OUT FOR GOOD FELLOWS' FUNDS.

HOPES TO RAISE LARGE SUM TO BUY CHRISTMAS CHEER FOR POOR OF CITY.

"Uncle" Mose Lowenstein, who, each year, takes care of the blind and the crippled and the poor, and sees that they have a real Christmas dinner, with turkey and all of the trimmings, is planning already for the feast to be given on December 25 of this year.

Last year 2800 persons, who otherwise would have gone without their Christmas repast, were made happy through the generosity of Uncle Mose and his assistants, and this year plans are being made to accommodate an even larger number.

This year Christmas dinners are costly, and "Uncle" Mose is going to call on the people of Los Angeles to help him. Yesterday he said he wanted the "Good Fellows" of this town to help. He said last night:

"Every year there are a lot of young men, and old ones, too, who spend $10 or $20 or $100 for a good time; they drink lots of whisky and wine and beer, and in the morning they are no better off. If these men will give a part of what they have been accustomed to spending on themselves in order to help the blind, the crippled and poor families, then they will have done something to be proud of."

The drive for securing funds will be started tomorrow, and every "Good Fellow" of Los Angeles is expected to help.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

HAITIAN PRESIDENT HITS YANK OFFICIAL.

DECLARES TREATY VIOLATED AND COUNTRY HAS BEEN UNDER OPPRESSION.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

PORT AU PRINCE, Nov. 13.—President Dartiguenave, in a statement today to correspondents, declared that if America desired the Haitians to consider the Haitian-American treaty on a basis of independence it would be necessary to hold a Congressional investigation of the civil functionaries.

"The treaty," the President said, "has been violated and not carried out because Haiti has been under the oppression of the American Minister and financial advisers. There is need of a Minister, wise and enlightened, and I believe an investigation would clarify the situation.

"The Minister and adviser have sent to Secretary Colby declarations alleged to have come from me, intending to infer that Haiti is not keping her obligations."

The burden of the President's complaint was against the civil administration, as he declared the marine administration, except for occasional lack of judgment on the part of junior officers, was good. There were faults of occupation which could not be prevented, but of late there had been a desirable improvement.

The President mentioned no names. He expressed the firm belief that a Congressional inquiry was necessary in order to amplify the testimony taken before the Naval Board of Inquiry.

BUSINESS IN MEXICO GOOD.

Americans Greatly Encouraged by Conditions.

Lack of Understanding Now Only Hindrance.

Better Credit Terms Needed by Merchants.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Signs of more stable and settled business conditions in Mexico and of increasing interest in trade between that country and the United States are reported by the American Chamber of Commerce in Mexico. According to a communication from this organization to the Foreign Commerce Department of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, more than a hundred American houses have begun business in Mexico in the last two years.

Besides this, numerous American manufacturers and merchants, as well as chambers of commerce and other associations, are said to be making inquiry concerning the Mexican credit situation, the volume of business, the attitude of American concerns and other important phases of the general trade situation across the Rio Grande.

BUSINESS IS BETTER.

The American chamber in Mexico says that banks and commercial agents report that in every part of Mexico business is better than it ever has been and that Americans in Mexico feel greatly encouraged.

The letter continues: "More than 100 American houses have begun business in Mexico in the last two years. Some of them have sent representatives down here to open branch offices, others have put their business into the hands of established houses handling American representations, and still others are conducting their business through salesmen who make Mexico City their headquarters and travel into every State of the republic. The American manufacturers are learning to pack well and the principal hindrance now to trade between the two countries is the lack of understanding on the part of the American manufacturer of the stability of the Mexican house which is its customer.

NEEDS PERSONAL TOUCH.

"If 100 American manufacturers could come down to Mexico City and stay a week studying the business of the city, which you know is the mercantile as well as the political capital of the country, there would be an enormous change in the system of giving credit to Mexican merchants, and it would be found that the American manufacturer, instead of demanding cash in advance on order, would be willing to give open accounts and ninety days with absolute confidence.

"The American houses which have been in Mexico a long time and have built up volume trade in this country, do give open accounts and ninety days, but the American house which is just beginning business thinks that the Mexican house is weak and demands either cash in advance or cash upon receipt of shipping documents. The English, French and Spanish exporters give much better credit terms, and Germany is making a very strong effort to regain its trade in this country by giving most extraordinary terms.

"No American house will lose money in Mexico if it will follow the same system that it uses in its business in the United States and will get a report from Dun and from its own agent in Mexico upon its customers, and then decide upon its line of credit."

DEPENDENCY DATA.

Electricity caused the deaths of thirty-one workers, machinery eighty-six, and firearms twelve, says the report. Nine women were among those killed at their work. Out of the total of 586 deaths passed upon, the degrees of dependency were listed as follows: 656 total dependents were left by the victims of 278 fatalities; 106 partial dependents were left in fifty-three fatal cases; in 170 fatal cases there were no dependents; and in eighty-five, the degree of dependency was not known.

The widows who were left without support as a result of the fatalities, says the report, averaged 39.3 years of age, while for dependent children the average was 9 years. The status of beneficiaries under the Workmen's Compensation Act, left dependent as a result of accidents, was gone into by the Industrial Accident Commission in cooperation with the children's department of the State Board of Health. It was found, according to the report, that in the 997 cases investigated the limitation of four and a half years for compensatory death benefits very frequently worked extreme hardship and caused a desperate struggle just at the time when the income was most needed.

So deplorable was the financial condition found to be in many of the cases investigated, and so seriously had the standard of living been lowered following the death of the bread winner, that the commission will propose that new legislation be enacted to care more satisfactorily and justly for dependents, states the report.

WIDOWS OLDER.

The average age of the persons killed in industry during the period covered by the report is given as 34 years and the average wage as $28.51 a week, as compared with 39.9 years and $25.01 a week for the fiscal year preceding that covered in the report. Since practically all of the slain were men, it is interesting to compare their average age at the time of death with that of the widows mentioned in the report, who were six years older than the men, if the averages are to be taken without any deductions for unmarried men.

In 494 cases submitted compensation was denied, the report says. The increase in applications adjudged unallowable is given as 69 per cent over those of the preceding year. Life pensions were awarded to fifteen persons for serious and permanent injuries. Injuries that caused a time loss of more than a week numbered 28,974, according to the report.

Altogether, according to the commission, $5,621,828 was awarded to California's 108,947 injured workers and to the dependents of the killed, while $1,447,242 was expended during the year for medical, surgical and hospital payments.

During that time 1074 men and women needing re-education because of serious injuries were aided by the department, says the report. All of the expenses for their tuition were paid by the State, under a law passed by the last Legislature.

For the period covered by the report it shows the net premium writings for compensation coverage amounted to $9,739,617.15, of which the State compensation insurance fund wrote $3,251,974.25, or 33.39 per cent, in compensation with thirty insurance carriers.

Moonshiners in San Bernardino Bury Booze Now.

In San Bernardino county the moonshiners are burying their product, according to the information brought to the city yesterday morning by Dan J. O'Leary, prohibition agent.

On the premises of Enrico Matteo, near Etiwanda, sixty gallons of brandy, 300 gallons of wine and two stills were found which had been hidden by burial in the brush. The stuff was confiscated, but Matteo had been warned and escaped. The local constables are looking for him.

At Colton, Pablo Vallarde's premises yielded a supply of brandy, whisky and wine. This stuff was buried in the garden.

The prohibition officers report a general defiance of the prohibition law, especially among the Mexican or Spanish portion of the population.

COUNTY MUST EMPLOY MRS. PEETE'S COUNSEL.

PUBLIC DEFENDER ASKS FOR DEPUTY TO BE SELECTED BY SUPERVISORS.

Public Defender Walton J. Wood, who, because he was recently elected Superior Court judge, will not himself be able to defend Mrs. Louise Peete, charged with the murder of Jacob C. Denton, has asked the Supervisors to appoint temporarily a deputy to take the place of the deputy named to act as the defender of the accused woman. The Supervisors will comply with this request, as they are obliged to under the law.

The office staff of the Public Defender consists of Mr. Wood, six deputies and two stenographers. The budget requirement this year for this office is $28,134. It is estimated that the trial of Mrs. Peete will cost the county approximately $20,000. The county will be obliged to pay the expenses of all witnesses whom she summons to her defense.

The court has the power to appoint any member of the bar as counsel for a defendant who comes into court without counsel. Inasmuch as the Public Defender's office was created to take care of poor persons who are unable to employ counsel, the case of Mrs. Peete furnishes a precedent for persons charged with murder who assert they are unable to retain an attorney.

The bulk of the business of the Public Defender at first consisted of taking care of persons charged with failure to provide and those charged with minor crimes. Complaints from renters now nearly swamp the office.

REVIEWS BOOZE CASES.

Prohibition Director Thinks Federal Grand Jury Will Indict.

There is sufficient evidence in the hands of the government to justify Federal grand jury indictments this week for violations here of the prohibition act, said E. C. Yellowley, State Prohibition Director, yesterday. Mr. Yellowley stopped off in Los Angeles between trains while on his way from San Diego to San Francisco, and reviewed the evidence in the liquor cases with Asst. U. S. Atty. Lawson and U. S. Collector Carter.

In addition to his duties as prohibition director, Mr. Yellowley is in charge of the force of internal revenue agents, and has several hundred men under his control. One of the objects of his visit to Los Angeles yesterday was to arrange for the annual drive for income tax returns that will begin tomorrow.

TO SHOW WAR SEA FILM.

U. S. Navy destroyers in pursuit of German U-boats, and the discharge of depth bombs when an American transport convoy was attacked at sea by submarines during the World War will be shown this week at the Kinema Theater. This official government cinema feature is billed by Gore Bros. & Sol Lesser in compliment to the men of the Pacific Fleet here, and to stimulate navy recruiting in the Los Angeles district.

INDIAN, SHOT IN ROW ON STREET, DIES.

OFFICERS HUNT MEXICAN WHO WIELDED GUN AND PAL OF THE VICTIM.

Jose Chico, a 23-year-old Indian from the Indian School at Torrance, was shot and fatally wounded last night by an unknown Mexican who engaged in an argument with Chico's partner, Henry Owlingush, in front of 645 New High street. The wounded man was taken to the Receiving Hospital, where Police Surgeon Stadfield found that the bullet had penetrated the left side of the abdomen. Late last night the surgeon performed a major operation on the Indian, but he died about midnight.

Detective Sergeants Rico, Ballestero and Mart, investigating the shooting, are seeking the unknown Mexican and also the dead man's partner, Owlingush, who disappeared after the shot was fired. He is from the Pala Indian School.

CHECK DOWNFALL OF OFTEN-ARRESTED LAD.

TAKEN WHILE ATTEMPTING TO PASS WORTHLESS PAPER, SAYS DETECTIVE.

H. L. Saltzberg, an 18-year-old youth, was arrested last night by Detective Nick Harris of the agency bearing his name, while attempting to pass on a downtown haberdasher a check declared to be worthless.

Saltzberg, the arresting officer stated, was posing as the son of a Long Beach banker. Later, when confronted with his own rogues' gallery photo and his previous record, the youth admitted that he had been arrested on six previous occasions.

In Saltzberg's room merchandise valued at $400, consisting of articles of men's high-grade clothing, was found. The clothing, the officers allege, was purchased with bad checks.

WORDS SHAKE WINDOWS.

California Singer Finds Low Vocal Range is Often Handicap.

Possession of the voice of lowest range of any in the world has its disadvantages, declares William F. Myers, the noted California singer, who has arrived in Los Angeles to sing all this week at Grauman's Theater. Here are some of the disadvantages he mentions:

There's no word in the language of music to indicate how deep his singing voice goes—an octave below the range of a basso profundo.

His voice shakes the diaphragm of a telephone receiver so much that folks can hardly hear him.

Light furniture vibrates and windows rattle when he speaks.

Every remark on his voice, no matter how favorably intended, sounds like a knock. When he heard Myers last night, Sid Grauman said: "That's fine—he sings like thunder."

POULTRYMAN HERE IS ARIZONA FAIR WINNER.

Poultry entered in the Arizona State Fair by William P. Williams of 102 West Fifty-second street has been awarded thirteen prizes, according to word received by Mr. Williams last night from the Arizona Fair Commission.

Among the prizes was one first place, three second places, five third places and four fourth places. Raising fancy poultry is a hobby with Mr. Williams. Of the 200 birds he now has, he sent nineteen to the Arizona fair.

Those assisting Mrs. Higby are Mrs. J. R. Hall, Mrs. Rita Houston, Mrs. Charles Winslow, Mrs. Alta Hitchcock and Mrs. W. A. Walsh. A "fish pond" and the various booths will be in charge of the Misses M. Naborette, Georgia Holland, Helen Johnstone and Belle Lyons. "Bud" Jameson, motion-picture star, will hold forth as manager of the vaudeville program.

Through an error the name of Carl Whipple was mentioned in a picture caption in the issue of The Times on the 12th inst. as the disabled veteran photographed while being decorated with a Victory Medal at Exposition Park. The veteran who was being decorated by the army officer is Fred Thomas, a clerk at The Times' Spring-street branch and who had one of his legs shot away while in battle overseas.

THANKS PUBLIC.

Los Angeles Post No. 1, Disabled Veterans of the World War, issued a statement yesterday thanking the merchants, auto men and citizens who assisted the post on Armistice Day. Apologies are made to those who sent cars to First and Temple to meet a Sawtelle car that by mistake was routed to Fifth and Hill instead. Persons who had flags and pennants on their cars belonging to the organization are requested to return them as they were loaned by a local store.

TO OPEN FOUR NEW CLASSES.

Four new night classes will be opened here this week by the extension division of the University of California. Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock at room 610 Union League Building, Miss Virginia Rowell will start instruction of a class in training of the speaking voice. Other classes to be started during the week are in Spanish, French and in scenario writing.

WANTS MUSEUM DIRECTOR.

The Los Angeles County Civil Service Commission will hold an examination early next month to fill the position of director of the County Museum of History, Science and Art. The place pays $4200 the first year and $4500 thereafter. Applications must be filed not later than December 2.

TROJANS SWAMP NEVADA IN A REAL GRID BATTLE.

Visitors Never Lose Punch and Display Some Genuine Football; Bradshaw Lives Up to Expectations.

BY HARRY A. WILLIAMS.

Elmer Henderson's U.S.C. Trojans turned in their usual afternoon victory.

They trounced the University of Nevada football team, 38 to 7, and called it a day's work, which it was.

WAS HARD WORK.

For the Nevadans, although decisively outclassed and never in any danger of winning, are tougher individually than a collection of pine knots, and it requires effort to knock the tar out of them.

Nevada, as a team, was clearly outclassed, and did not know as much football as the more educated Trojans, who as the fall draws on apace are growing ripe with gridiron experience. But although outweighed in the matter of class the visitors never lost their punch and fought a strong rear-guard action at all times.

Outplayed in three of the four quarters, they were able to turn the tables and outplay the Trojans in the third period, when they plastered their only touchdown on a far-reaching forward pass. It was part of an aerial attack which they had tried with almost ludricous results in the earlier part of the game, but which had the Trojans guessing for the remainder of the combat, and converted the last twenty minutes of play into something resembling an open-air basketball tournament.

DEFEAT LOOMS.

Although a Nevada defeat loomed as clear as the well-known handwriting on the wall after the first five minutes of play, the visitors had a surprise in the backfield. This was Bullet Bradshaw, of BB caliber, but very explosive. Bradshaw is no soft-nosed shell which tears large holes in an enemy. He is a steel-jacketed athlete who whistles through the air and pierces keenly. At all times he was a potential Pandora's box of woes to be wished on U.S.C., but only a few times did the lid fly off.

One of these occasions was in the second quarter, when he cradled his arms around a Leadingham punt and scudded down the field in a curving sprint to the 10-yard line, where Leadingham avoided two interfering runners and nailed him to Mother Earth with a sharp, snappy report.

LIGHTNING FAST.

Bradshaw in every way lived up to the advance lithographs. He is as fast as a wireless, tricky as an Apache, as greasy as a bucket of lard and as hard to hold with the bare hands as a moist catfish. Brad got away for a number of spectacular dashes, but more frequently he was pegged to the grass, as he was a marked man and the Trojans had the Bertillon system on him. The system in modern football is to get the thumb prints of a star, and then appoint a committee to sit upon him.

And then the Bullet is some passer. If he can pass the gravy like he can a football we would like to sit at the same table with him. It was his pegging with the pigskin which gave the invaders their only touchdown. Brad earlier in the game had shown a tendency to pass the ball around those present with a forward motion, but always none of his own people were present. When he passed there was nobody except Trojans to act as a reception committee.

LONE SCORE.

But in the third quarter they became better acquainted with each other, and worked the pass in unison. A series of these forward heaves worked the oval down to U.S.C.'s fifteen-yard mark. Brad then took the ball and made a final and mighty heave to Martin, who made a fine large falcon into the air and made a star catch on the scoring side of the Trojan goal line.

Subsequently this play was used with such success that Nevada kept the pigskin herded in U.S.C. territory much of the time.

LIFE OF PARTY.

In a large sense the Bullet was the life of the party, as otherwise there would been nothing left for the bugs to guess about. It would have been a plain spectacle of one football team mopping up another.

After Bradshaw caught that punt and sprinted half way downtown with it, Leadingham used his punting finesse to kick out of bounds and thus deprived the Bullet of his meat. It was a good deal like walking Babe Ruth to keep him from making home runs common.

Nevada could do little in straight football except make slight dents in the solid U.S.C. line, while the Trojan backs seemed to have little trouble drilling the Blue and White barrier for big gains, although the Nevadans did, at times, stiffen with surprising suddenness.

RAH FOR DEAN!

The Trojans rammed and threshed through the Nevada outfit until they had taken a commanding lead. While Henderson's backs worked like a well-tuned machine, Charley Dean was the chill-steeled tip of this remorseless hammer. Repeatedly he crunched through the Nevada line and then catapulted on out into the open for big gains. And when the few feet or yards for a touchdown were required, the ball was simply fed into Dean's arms. But after crushing through once too often, Mr. Dean was seen to spit out a mouthful of teeth, and then in the fourth period one of his massive legs crumpled under him. The spirit was willing, but the knee was weak, and it was with poignant grief that he permitted himself to be taken out of the fracas.

U.S.C. resorted in the main to straight football, but varied its repertory somewhat in the fourth period when some forward passing was injected. The culminating heave was a long one, Leadingham to Leahy, which netted the final touchdown. The other four were executed by the now temporarily defunct Dean.

Swede Evans then threw an extra thrill into the proceedings by executing an artistic place kick from the 35-yard line for a nightcap of three points. It was a forceful boot, and the ball would easily have carried over the bar from the 45-yard line. Capt Evans also topped off each touchdown with a neat kick. When Capt. Evans uses his feet to kick with he always removes his helmet from his head. To be consistent he should take off his shoes when he studies with his head.

Something like this happened to Bevo Colwell, the lusty Nevada right tackle, who played the last half with only one shoe. Whether he removed the shoe to enable him to think better, or merely jarred it loose with heavy thinking, is not definitely known. Anyway, exposing Bevo's large, corpulent, perspiring hoof to the air seemed to strengthen the Nevada line. Anyway, the Trojans didn't seem as willing to charge into it with their heads down.

Illinois Meets With Its First Grid Defeat.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

MADISON (Wis.) Nov. 13.—Wisconsin today tumbled Illinois out of first place in the western conference football race by a spurt of forward passing which gave the Badgers fourteen points to Illinois' nine in what was perhaps the greatest football victory ever won by a Crimson eleven.

Illinois in the early quarters lived up to expectations by taking a lead, 6 to 0, when Quarterback Ralph Fletcher made two placement kicks after the Illini backs had plunged through to Wisconsin territory. Fletcher kicked a third goal later but it did no good.

In the third period, however, the Wisconsin team lived up to its reputation for versatility.

With Quarterback Barr as the pivot, a pass to Elliott brought the first touchdown and a moment later another pass to Tebell sent over the second. Barr kicked both goals.

TIGERS MAIM BULLDOGS.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

REDLANDS, Nov. 13. — By the narrow margin of one touchdown the Tigers beat the Bulldogs here this afternoon. The final score was 6 to 0 in favor of Occidental, Fulton packing the ball over in the third quarter for the only touchdown of the day. The two teams were as evenly matched as two teams could be and while Occidental earned the touchdown she made, it was by the narrowest squeak that she registered it.

Redlands had her big chance to score in the second quarter. Redlands took the ball to the 20-yard line. With last down and 5 yards to go, Hasty called Gair back from center for a drop kick. Gair failed to make it, the kick being blocked. Gair recovered the ball on the 30-yard line, but Redlands lost it there on a fumble.

Oxy had a good chance to score in the fourth quarter. Troyer dropped one of Fulton's long punts. Occidental recovered the ball on the 20-yard line. The Bulldogs stiffened their backs and pushed the Tigers back to the 30-yard line. There a drop kick was attempted, but it was a failure. Thompson punted out of danger.

On the kick-off in the third quarter, after Oxy had scored, Carpenter, who had gone in at full for Redlands, ran the ball back 40 yards and was going for a touchdown, but was forced out of bounds. The line-ups:

Redlands.		Occidental.
Levering	R.E.	Davidson
Cook	R.T.	Jones

SAGEHENS TAME ARIZONA CATS.

Pomona's Football Warriors Win by 31 to 0 Score.

Covington, Voorhies, Wilson Pulverize Line.

Visitors Lose Their Quarterback in First Period.

BY PAUL LOWRY.
[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CLAREMONT, Nov. 13.—The line of the Arizona Wildcats was smashed here today by the plunging backs of Pomona College, the Sagehen football warriors winning by a score of 31 to 0.

The Wildcats lost Slonaker, their captain and quarterback, in the initial period when he was banged on the head and rendered sightless, and his departure from the field demoralized them. A substitute who didn't know the signals failed to improve matters, and the Arizona offense, which looked promising at the start of the contest when Slonaker ripped off a 20-yard run around end, vanished completely.

A BIG EDGE.

Pomona had a big bulge in the line, the forwards opening nice wide holes which clever backs like Covington, Voorhies and Wilson had no difficulty in waltzing through for gain after gain. Once through the line the Blue and White fairy-foots simply breezed away from the Arizona secondary defense birds as if they were standing still.

Pomona got away in the lead when Covington stood on the 31-yard line in the first quarter and smashed a place kick between the uprights from a difficult angle. A touchdown by Rich in the second quarter, two by Covington in the third and one by the same bustling person in the fourth period completed the Blue and White's toll of touchdowns. Covington kicked three of the goals and Voorhies one.

Arizona penetrated Pomona's forward defense but once for a first down, making her three others on Slonaker's 20-yard run, a successful forward pass for fourteen yards and a 12-yard run around end by Irvine on a fake punt formation. The only time the Wildcats had the oval in Pomona territory was when it was booted there.

Pomona had two other touchdowns in her grasp, but was held on the goal line by the stubborn defense of the Arizonans.

Pomona won the toss and Lynch kicked to Wilson, who ran back 10 yards to Pomona's 28-yard line. Covington got off a quick punt, which, with the roll, netted 70 yards. Slonaker made 20 yards from a fake-kick formation, but Arizona then fumbled twice in succession and a Blue and White warrior recovered the second bobble. It was Pomona's ball on the Arizona 20-yard line. Three line plunges netted no acreage, so Covington dropped back and bumped the ball over the crossbar from placement.

VOORHIES FUMBLES.

From the Pomona 47-yard line the Sagehen backs carried the ball to the Arizona 6-yard line, where Voorhies fumbled, and Slonaker recovered for Arizona. Manzo punted out of danger, and Wilson made 5 yards around end as the quarter ended.

The first play of the second period was a forward pass from Voorhies to Rich for 35 yards, resulting in a touchdown. It was at this juncture of the game that Slonaker was removed because he was unable to distinguish the players letting Rich run by him without making a move.

A 65-yard march by the irresistible Pomona backs brought the next touchdown. Pomona found the right side of the Arizona line weak, and Voorhies, Stover, Wilson and Covington plugged through for 10 and 15 yards a shot. Nearly all of the Pomona plays were aimed at short off tackle. With the ball on the 25-yard line, Stover made eleven through right guard, Wilson eight over right tackle, and after two or three more dashes Covington went over.

Another 65-yard parade down the field, featured by a scintillating dash by Voorhies for 27 yards resulted in the third touchdown, Covington going over and Voorhies being rewarded for his work by being permitted to kick a perfect goal.

Covington sped through the line on a criss-cross in the fourth period for 35 yards, but Pomona was held on the 2-yard line. A run back of a punt by Covington for 25 yards, a smash over tackle by Wilson for thirteen and a varied assortment of line plunges put the ball in a position for Covington to smash over.

After Slonaker departed from the scene of strife Hobbs was the only man in the Wildcat backfield who could gain an inch through the defense put up by the charging Pomona line. There was no particular star in the Blue and White's forward division. It worked like one man. Bruce Elliott gave his backs the best holes, but Baker, Bell, Cooper, W. Elliott, Robertson and Rich were there a million.

Lynch and Carpenter did good work for Arizona, and twice threw back the Pomona onslaughts on the Wildcat goal line. Wofford was on the receiving end of the only forward pass Arizona completed. The line-ups:

Pomona.		Arizona.
Rich	L.E.R.	Manlar
R. Elliott	L.T.R.	Smith

MINNESOTA TAKES RUN.

YALE SHUT OUT BY PRINCETON.

Tigers Roll Up Twenty-to-Nothing Victory.

Don Lourie Makes Sensational Run for Touchdown.

Mike Callahan Grabs Blocked Punt and Scores.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

PRINCETON (N. J.) Nov. 13.—Princeton's football eleven today defeated Yale for the second year in succession. In running up a score of twenty points, including two touchdowns and two field goals, against nothing for Yale, Don Lourie of Peru, Ill., Mike Callahan of Lawrence, Mass., and Stanley Keck of Greenburg, Pa., put themselves in the galaxy of Orange and Black heroes who have contributed sensational feats in defeating an ancient foe.

PRETTIEST PLAY.

Lourie made the prettiest play of the game just as the first half was coming to an end. Princeton had the ball for a first down sixty-one yards from Yale's goal. Keck dropped back from the line to the kicker's position and Lourie lay on the ground in front of him at the fifty-one-yard line as if to hold the ball for a place kick, Keck being particularly adept in that respect. Then ensued a surprise. Lourie received the pass perfectly from Capt. Mike Callahan, scrambled to his feet, circled Yale's right wing, dodged, sidestepped and straight-armed and crossed the last white line to the amazement of both the Yale team and the 50,000 spectators.

Princeton's cup of joy began to run over before the third period was less than two minutes old. Princeton punted on the first lineup of the half from its own thirty-yard line to Yale's twenty-yard line, where Thorne Murphy misjudged Scheerer's spiral and muffed it. As the ball rolled back toward the Yale goal, Mike Callahan, who beat his ends down the field, picked it up and sped across the Yale goal line for another touchdown.

KICKED GOAL.

Later in the third period Keck kicked a field goal from the thirty-six-yard line with Lourie holding the ball just as he had bluffed at doing before making his sensational run. Keck kicked both goals after the touchdowns.

The other Princeton score was a field goal by Murray on the first play on the second period; a drop kick from the thirty-five-yard line.

Twice Princeton attempted field goals unsuccessfully. A try by Murray in the first period resulted in the kick being blocked and in the fourth period Keck attempted a place kick from midfield at an angle, but the ball struck the cross bar of the goal post and bounded back to the field.

ONLY A FLASH.

Yale never compared with Princeton except for a flash in the second period when after advancing the ball down its own sixty-three-yard line to Princeton's twenty-two-yard line, it found its offense checked and tried for a field goal. Murphy made the attempt standing on his own thirty-yard line, but the ball was wide. This advance involved ten plays in which one short forward pass of five yards and two slices off tackle of eight yards each by the brilliant Kelley were features.

While the Yale stands stood up singing the hymn, "Bright College Years," which mark these classic gridiron contests, in victory or defeat, Princeton's undergraduates romped on the field for a snake dance to celebrate the greatest Princeton triumph over Yale, as regards size of score, since 1896, when Princeton made twenty-four points.

TOO EAGER.

The victory might have been more impressive had it not been for Princeton's over eagerness. The Tigers suffered eight penalties for a total distance of sixty-four yards, while Yale was not penalized at all.

Other statistics of the game add to the impressiveness of the Tigers' powerful offensive as contrasted with that of their opponents. In a total of forty attempts to advance the ball in scrimmage, Princeton made a net gain of 177 yards, excluding forward passes, while Yale in forty-one plays made but a net gain of sixty-nine yards. Princeton tried thirteen forward passes, four of which succeeded for a total of fifty-three yards. One was intercepted without serious damage to the Tigers and eight were incomplete. Yale tried ten forward passes of which three were successful for a total gain of twelve yards. Two were interrupted and five were incomplete.

ABOUT EQUAL.

In punting the two teams were about equal, averaging thirty-five yards until Scheerer came into the contest in the second half. His kicks averaged forty-five yards from the line of scrimmage and some of them gained even more distance through poor handling of Yale's men in the backfield.

Princeton's triple threat play, involving a man back in the kicker's position who can run, kick or pass, was particularly effective.

The use of this play on the first line-up after the kickoff at the opening of the game put Yale on the defensive on its own territory immediately and contributed largely to the fact that Princeton had the ball on Yale's side of the field most of the first half. Murrey, who started the game at fullback and was replaced by Scheerer, circled Yale's right wing from kick formation on the first Princeton line-up of the game and made a sensational forty-yard dash.

GAIN TWENTY-SEVEN YARDS.

Toward the end of the first period the same formation resulted in a gain of twenty-seven yards by a forward pass from Murrey to Garrity and put the ball in such a position that a field goal resulted at the beginning of the second period. In the third period Garrity made a twenty-seven-yard dash through the line with the Yale defense puzzled as it had been throughout the game by the triple threat. Another run by Garrity was good for thirty yards.

The Yale cohorts by contrast had little to awaken their enthusiasm by way of stellar performances. Kelly aroused hopes early in the game by his line-smashing but the distance gained was scarcely ever enough to make first down in one play and finally much of Yale's offense was spoiled behind the line of scrimmage.

Princeton today ended its 1920 football season in the most successful manner of any season in recent years. It has won every game but one, that with Harvard, which resulted in a tie. Line-up and summary:

Final: Princeton, 20; Yale, 0.

Oregon Tumbles Over University of Washington.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

EUGENE (Or.) Nov. 13.—The University of Oregon evened up its twenty-year football debate with the University of Washington today by defeating the Washington eleven, 17 to 0, in a clean-cut, well-played game in which Capt. "Bill" Steers of Oregon was the brilliant star. Steers not only scored the first touchdown with a spectacular 80-yard run on a returned punt, but he later booted over a drop kick for a goal from the 20-yard line and then, when his own mighty plunges had carried the ball to within striking distance, circled Washington's end for the final touchdown. He converted both touchdowns for goals and in the fourth period retired in favor of Reinhart, who also played a smashing game, putting the ball within striking distance on more than one occasion.

LEXINGTON (Ky.) Nov. 13.—Centre College overwhelmed the University of Kentucky here today, 49 to 0. Seven touchdowns were made by the visitors and Weaver, center, kicked all the goals. Brilliant playing by Quarterback "Bo" McMillan was a feature of the contest.

MAY CONTROL ALL LEAGUES.

Steps Are Taken to Have Landis in Full Charge.

Baseball Minors Approve of Judge's Selection.

Newly-Elected Official is Being Congratulated.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 13. — Steps to place every professional baseball league in the country under the direction of Federal Judge K. M. Landis, who yesterday was appointed a one-man commission to act as sole arbiter in major-league disputes, were taken today.

President John Heydler of the National League and other club owners conferred with a group of the highest officials in minor leagues over the proposed reorganization of control of professional baseball and, after listening to the major leaguers' explanation of the plans, the minors informed Judge Landis that they approved of his selection and favored coming under his power.

CALL ON JUDGE.

In the delegation which called on the judge were Mike Sexton of Rock Island, president of the National Association of Minor Leagues; John Farrell, its secretary; G. T. Maines, president of the Michigan-Ontario League; E. W. Dickerson, president of the Central League; W. W. Walsh, president of the South Atlantic League, and Walter Morris, president of the West Texas League.

Support of these men for the reorganization plan virtually assures its acceptance by the minor leagues, it is believed by baseball men here. Possibility that Judge Landis's powers might be given an international scope was seen by President Maines of the Michigan-Ontario club.

"We want to see you in charge of the leagues in Canada, as well as in the United States," he told the judge. "Your appointment is the greatest thing in the world for baseball and the good I know will result from it must not be confined to this country."

WAS DELIGHTED.

Judge Landis spent several hours today conferring with the minor leaguers and reading congratulatory messages. He was particularly delighted with several from enthusiasts saying they wanted the approval of the men in the bleachers more than that of the magnates.

"It's their game," he explained, "and we've got to run it the way they want it run."

The National League today appointed Garry Herrmann of Cincinnati, Barney Dreyfuss of Pittsburg and Charles Ebbetts of Brooklyn its committee to officially arrange with the minor leagues for them to come under Judge Landis's control. Clark Griffith of Washington, Frank Navin of Detroit and Connie Mack of Philadelphia were appointed to represent the American League. They will meet a minor league committee of six within a week or two in New York or Chicago. If the minor leagues officially approve the reorganization plans a new national agreement and rules governing the game will be drawn at a joint major and minor meeting, either in New York or Chicago, in December.

NEWS AT THE STATE CAPITAL.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 11.—Economy will be one of the principal issues of the 1921 Legislature, according to Will H. Fischer, director of the California Taxpayers' Association, who has been at the Capitol compiling data for the association's use during the next session.

Fischer says the association will support measures looking toward the reorganization of the State government in a manner that will reduce fast climbing expenditures without hampering efficiency. Charles A. Whitmore, a member of the State Highway Commission, predicts that a general reduction in the cost of road building materials will take place in California in the near future. The State Board of Health has requested the State Budget Board for $636,827 with which to combat tuberculosis in California during the biennial period, beginning July 1, 1921. The 1919 Legislature granted the board $200,000 to fight tuberculosis during the present biennium.

If this appropriation is given the board, the State will be in a position to pay counties a subsidy of $3 per week for each tubercular patient being cared for by the county.

State Librarian Ferguson, in his annual report to Gov. Stephens, declares the attention of the library has been turned toward the collecting of material bearing upon dramatic history and the motion-picture industry.

The report shows that during the past two years 25,755 books have been added to the library, making a grand total of 310,628 books in the various branches of the institution.

A conference on education under the auspices of the Federal Commissioner of Education will be held at the Capitol December 6. Mrs Catherine M. Cook, a representative of the United States Bureau of Education, is arranging for the conference plans.

California is one of the few States selected by the Federal commissioner for the conference There will be present representatives from Nevada, Arizona and California, including the governors, State superintendents of public instruction and superintendents and heads of educational institutions.

Sources of revenue to meet the new demands in education, the relation of education to wealth and public welfare and the changed social relations between the school and the home will be discussed.

Gloom is present among the employees in the offices at the Capitol because of the overwhelming defeat of the justices' salary increase amendment at the general election, November 2.

The employees were beginning to prepare the way for asking the 1921 Legislature for a salary increase, but in view of the action of the electors in voting against giving the judges of the Supreme and Appellate courts more money, they have lost heart.

THE American Merchant fleet on July 1 comprised 3404 seagoing vessels of over 500 gross tons each.

IRA VAIL HAS GOOD DAY.

BY AL WADDELL.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) Nov. 13.—Ira Vail piloting the old brown Philbran Duesenberg was fortune's favored protege here today. He won two events and $2700 in prize money. Vail first captured the 100-mile free-for-all in 1h. 30m. 25⅗s., then swept the mile track of all contenders in the Australian pursuit race.

A spectacular crash through the fence staged by the Bennett brothers in the Bennett special was the only accident of the day. Through some spin of Miss Fates's wheel both driver and mechanic escaped injury, but their car, a Marmon bearing the number 23, was wrecked and will not be in the lists tomorrow.

ONLY ACCIDENT.

It was in the twenty-first lap of the fifty-mile event. J. Thomas, in a hopped-up Chandler was in the lead. The Bennett brothers in their Marmon were rolling a close second on the back stretch and it looked as if they would pass the Chandler on the turn. There was a cloud of dust and the next instant the car had gone over the ditch and out of the grounds through the high board fence.

An ambulance started for the scene and mounted cops galloped across the infield, but before they could get really under way the brothers came through the hole in the fence and announced that they were O.K. by throwing their head gears in the air. Jerry Abbott sitting back of the Governor's box yelled touchdown. Everyone laughed, and the race went on. J. Thomas won with his Chandler.

Eddie Hearne, who registers from Los Angeles, was the whole show for just thirty-eight laps of the 100-mile event, then he had to give the Vail boy the right of way. In the first lap Hearne, at the wheel of Earl Cooper's famous old Stutz, ran out in front. T. Milton in a Duesenberg was lapped inside of thirty rounds with Vail following Hearne 500 yards in his rear and barely holding his own. Vail began to shorten the gap. In six laps he was on Hearne's flank and in three more he passed Eddie and rolled 400 yards out in front.

Before the dust was out of little Eddie's eyes Hearne began to come back on the Duesenberg and at eighty laps had cut the lead down to fifty yards, but something went wrong. He slowed down and Vail almost lapped him. Hearne stopped, lifted the hood and touched up the carburetor. He went back in the race with Vail two laps to the good. He was able to cut this down somewhat, but was flagged as second-place winner in an Overland.

Barney Oldfield was among the 15,000 spectators and paced the drivers in the big race in a yellow Marmon.

HARVARD EASILY VANQUISHES BROWN.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CAMBRIDGE (Mass.) Nov. 13.—Harvard substitutes easily vanquished Brown today, 27 to 0. The visitors scarcely threatened the Crimson goal, a single attempt at a field goal hitting a Harvard man half way to the goal posts. Nearly all play was in Brown territory.

WASHINGTON STATE BEATS OREGON AGGIES.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

PULLMAN (Wash.) Nov. 13.—Washington State College showed a marked reversal of form from last Saturday when it suffered a 49-to-0 defeat at the hands of the University of California by winning today from Oregon Agricultural College, 28 to 0. The victory gave greater satisfaction to the 2500 students and "old grads" who saw the home-coming day game, because the Cougars won it with a badly crippled team.

As a result of today's game Washington State adherents are claiming the Northwest conference championship. Jenne, star punter and halfback; Moran, another backfield man, and Roy Hanley, right end, all were out of the game today with injuries sustained last Saturday.

MONTANA VARSITY ANNIHILATES BOZEMAN

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

MISSOULA (Mont.) Nov. 13.—Completely outclassing their opponents in every department of the game, the Montana State University overwhelmed the State College team of Bozeman on Dornblaser Field this afternoon, 28 to 0, and again won the State championship. The Grizzlies scored one touchdown in each quarter of the game and made thirty-two first downs against two for the State College.

The Minnesota shift gained ground at will for the varsity with Sullivan, Kerschner, Barry and Adams plunging through for long gains, while several forward passes were completed for big yardage.

RITOLA CAPTURES CROSS-COUNTRY RUN.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—William Ritola, Finnish-American Athletic Club, won the national junior cross-country run of the Amateur Athletic Union here today. He covered the six-mile Van Cortlandt Park course in 32m. 43⅛s. Amesoli Patsoni, Haskell Institute, Kansas, an Indian runner of the American Olympic team, was second. Frank Zuan, also an Olympic competitor, quit during the first lap while in seventh position.

NORTHWESTERN TOO FAST FOR OPPONENTS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

EVANSTON (Ill.) Nov. 13.—Capt. G. Penfield's scooping of the ball on a Purdue fumble in the last quarter and running sixty-five yards for the second touchdown of the game marked the Northwestern 14-to-0 victory over the Boilermakers today in a Western Conference football game. Lane, the Purple's left halfback, made repeated gains for downs through enemy territory. Quarterback Macklin starred for the Purdue eleven.

STENGEL'S BALL NINE TO TACKLE SOX AGAIN.

Casey Stengel's All-Stars, featuring such big-league cracks as Bob Meusel, Irish Meusel, Johnnie Rawlings, Walter Schmidt, George Cutshaw and others, will meet the L. A. White Sox (colored) baseball team in the second game of their series at the Sox park, East Fourth and Anderson streets, today. "Spec" Meadows of the Philly Nationals will pitch for the All-Stars and Bullet Rogan will oppose him. The game is scheduled to begin at 2:30 p.m.

MICHIGAN GRIDDERS HUMBLE CHICAGO.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

ANN ARBOR, Nov. 13.—Michigan's football eleven humbled Chicago here today, 14 to 0. The Maroons, although fighting to the last, were unable to hold the Michigan backfield men at the critical moments of the game. After the first period, during which neither side scored, the Yost men were not in danger.

U. OF C. FRESHMEN DEFEAT STANFORD.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Nov. 13.—University of California freshmen defeated the first-year team of Stanford in their annual football match here today by the score of 38 to 7. The Stanford team scored in the third period when Judy made a touchdown after running thirty yards with a forward pass. Hodges, left half, starred for California, making four touchdowns.

CARPENTIER GETS A GLAD WELCOME HOME.

[BY CABLE AND ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

PARIS, Nov. 13.—Georges Carpentier, French fighter, arrived in Paris this evening from the United States and was enthusiastically welcomed by thousands of Parisian admirers, who gathered at the station to greet the returning champion. French boxing enthusiasts were out in force and hailed Carpentier as the coming champion of the world.

CORNELL OUTCLASSES COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

ITHACA (N. Y.) Nov. 13.—Cornell outclassed Columbia here today and won easily, 34 to 7. Columbia started with a determined attack and threatened Cornell's goal twice in the first period, but lost the ball on downs. Mayer, Cornell right halfback, was the individual star of the game, scoring twenty-eight of Cornell's points.

BRITTON-ABEL MATCH.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

ATLANTA (Ga.) Nov. 13.—Jack Britton, welterweight champion of the world, and Jake Abel, of Atlanta, welterweight champion of the A.E.F., have been matched to fight ten rounds to a decision here November 29. Abel's manager announced today.

THINKS LUMBER COST GOING UP.

Exchange Secretary Predicts Advance After Holidays.

Production at Supply Source Falls Behind Demand.

Retail Dealers Banquet and Hold Election Here.

Building costs, as far as the price of lumber is concerned, are likely to range higher instead of lower after the Christmas holidays, according to H. R. Riddiford, secretary of the Lumbermen's Exchange, who delivered the principal address yesterday at the annual convention of the Southern California Retail Lumber Dealers' Association at the Clark Hotel. Mr. Riddiford explained that while certain grades of lumber had been reduced in price in the last few months, further decreases could not be expected in view of the curtailed output from the northern mills from which this section draws its supply. Reduced output, limited transportation and high labor costs, he said, are the factors which govern the present lumber prices. He also declared that an unprecedented demand for new buildings throughout the United States is a big factor in keeping up building costs.

"I do not not look for, nor would I like to see the auction market in lumber which we had earlier this year, but I most certainly expect to see a much stronger market than at present," declared Mr. Riddiford.

DRIFT UNTIL HOLIDAYS.

"Taking everything into consideration, I look for matters to drift along as they are now until after the holidays, and then I expect an upward trend. Heavy eastern line buyers are now on the Coast with orders in their pockets, and when they get ready we will feel the effect of their purchases.

"The cost of lumber, however, should not be made to bear the blame for all the building cost trouble. I know of no other item on the building material list that has declined as has lumber. In California, lumber is only from one-fifth to one-fourth of the building cost. In the East it will run to 33 1-3 per cent of the cost. Even at that other commodities and labor are responsible for two-thirds of the expense."

In conclusion Mr. Riddiford said there is a great need now for a steady home building movement. "The housing problem will have to be solved soon," he declared.

PROGRAM FAR BEHIND.

"The annual requirement of the United States in housing is said to be approximately 450,000 dwellings annually. In 1918 only 20,000 were built, and in 1919 about 70,000. We are now more than one million houses behind. This condition must be remedied, and lumber will have to do its share."

H. A. Lake, president of the association, presided at the two sessions of the convention held yesterday. Frank N. Gibbs of Anaheim spoke on the subject of the retail lumber dealers' service to the community. The annual election of directors resulted in naming W. A. Bonestel of Ventura, E. L. Peery of Santa Barbara, C. W. Pinkerton of Whittier, Roy L. Sandefer of San Bernardino, J. M. Whitney of Huntington Beach, and W. A. Viney of Covina.

Woodworth Club, secretary of the Better American Federation, addressed the convention at the evening session. The concluding feature of the convention was the annual banquet at the Clark Hotel, at which 150 members and guests were present. W. A. Blanchard of Burbank was toastmaster.

ACCUSED MEN SAY CHARGES SPITE WORK.

Revenge by Discharged Book-keeper, Says Realty Promoter Under Fire.

The accusations made by State Realty Commissioner Riley against L. E. Grimm and A. M. Conard, promoters with offices in the Merritt Building, are based on information given Mr. Riley by a discharged and revengeful book-keeper, said Grimm yesterday. He says the accusations are false and that anyway the various companies promoted by the pair are not amenable to the laws of the State inasmuch as the land involved is outside of the United States and they are not selling any stock. He added that the stockholders are all relatives of Conard, president of the various enterprises, and that the companies are paying regularly on valuable lands they own in Mexico.

Mr. Riley's letter asking the grand jury to investigate the operations of Conard and Grimm has not yet come officially before that body as it has not been in session for a day or so. James Irving, foreman, said he will lay it before the body as soon as the latter convenes. Deputy Dist.-Atty. Stafford, in charge of the grand jury for the District Attorney, concurs.

The Times is in receipt of a telegram from Fred E. Reed, president of the California Real Estate Association, commending the action of Commissioner Riley.

CITES SICK WIFE AS EXCUSE FOR FORGERY.

CONFESSION MADE FOLLOWING ARREST, POLICE ASSERT. AUDIT BOOKS TODAY.

On a charge of forgery, Charles Poole, a book-keeper, aged 24, was arrested by Detective Sergeant Jarvis last night at his home, 1515 West Eighth street. He is held in the City Jail.

Poole is accused of having forged the name of the California Wholesale Company, by whom he was employed, to a number of checks and then having cashed them and converted the money to his own use.

According to Detective Jarvis, Poole confessed to the forgery and said that he believed the total amount he had obtained in this manner was in the neighborhood of $1000. But in extenuation, the book-keeper declared that he had cashed the checks to secure funds to pay the hospital bills of his wife. Mrs. Poole is still in a local hospital recovering from the effects of an operation, he said.

A thorough examination of the company's books will be made today to determine the extent of the asserted defalcation.

DISCOVERS CAUSE OF FALLING HAIR

Chicago Specialist Says Greatest Percentage of Baldness Due to Alopecia Pityrodes.

Prof. John H. Austin, over 40 years a bacteriologist, hair and scalp specialist, who now has offices at Hamburger's, says this scalp disorder is often mistaken for common "dandruff."

Alopecia pityrodes starts with a scaling of the scalp, sometimes slight, commonly called "dandruff," sometimes abundant — producing thick, grayish-white, dry or greasy scales—which leads to falling of the hair. This stage lasts from two to seven years, as a rule. At first, when the hair starts to fall, it is hardly noticeable, but as this ailment, "Alopecia Pityrodes," becomes more deeply seated, and as the microbacilli multiply, as they always do, the falling of the hair increases rapidly and in time the top of the head becomes entirely bald.

Prof. Austin has found that only the most powerful microscope can determine the exact trouble with which the hair and scalp are afflicted, and has proved that the use of mange cures, dandruff cures, hair tonics, vaseline and elixirs, is like taking medicine without knowing what you are trying to cure.

FREE MICROSCOPIC EXAMINATION of the hair and scalp—both men and women invited. Private Office, Second Floor Hamburger's, Hours, 10 to 12 and 2 to 4.—[Advertisement.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Admiral Coontz, chief of naval operations, will witness the first joint maneuvers of the Atlantic and Pacific fleets in Panama Bay and off the South American coast early next year, Secretary Daniels said today, adding that if possible he also would be with the fleets at that time.

At a point midway between Callao, Peru and Valparaiso, Chile, the fleets will separate, Mr. Daniels said, the Atlantic Fleet going to Callao for a week's visit and the Pacific Fleet continuing on to Valparaiso.

After the visits the fleets will join again and proceed to Panama Bay, where they will separate and proceed to their separate winter drill grounds for target practice.

The democratic tendency is in control, states Frank Vanderlip.

she exaggerates the importance of the militaristic and anarchistic elements in the Mikado's country. Perhaps she is wrong in her observation that the entire population there is becoming "pure Hooligan." But there can be no doubt that she describes symptoms that exist in some degree and that in any degree are dangerous both to Japan and to Japan's neighbors.

The very thing that well-nigh destroyed Germany is hurrying Japan to ruin, according to this American woman.

A CHANGED RACE.

"Twenty years ago," she wrote, "before the Russo-Japanese war, travelers returning from Japan and publicists describing the country and its people gave the world a picture that won admiration and friendship. Westerners were told of the wonderful gentleness and courtesy of the Japanese, of Mashido, their remarkable code of honor; of their beautiful filial devotion, their happiness and good faith, their orderliness, friendliness and cleanliness. The whole country was an artistic gem. A Japanese could not make anything ugly, any more than he could be impolite.

"But with the Russo-Japanese war came the change. From that time Japan was an altered nation. No longer did beauty hold her, no longer did courtesy reign. The nation's consciousness turned from the shifting colors and the shadows of the vapors on Fuji's crest, from building torii for the birds to build on, from thinking up ways to be kind to a friend—it turned from all this to the thought of impressing the rest of the world with Japan's importance.

"It is as though a gentleman suddenly became a bully who to the accompaniment of foul, shouted oaths makes everyone cower with whom he comes i ncontact.

"The picture is not overdrawn. The generation which has sprung up in Japan since the Russo-Japanese war is pure Hooligan. Three years ago, when I took up my year's residence there, these boys were everywhere, shouting that Japan was going to 'lick the world,' first to be a 'second England' to the colored races of the world and then to subdue the white people.

"They rioted at the drop of a hat—Waseda University had five days of it. They gathered in gangs, pushed ruthlessly through crowds and on trains, were loud-voiced and foul-mouthed and openly antiforeign, and at night they reeled about the streets intoxicated.

"This element is now Bolshevik, or rather anarchistic.

INDUSTRIAL SLAVERY.

"Twenty years ago there was no labor problem in Japan, as such. Workers labored or slept and rested as they pleased, and the chant they sang in unison as they toiled was happy.

"Now there are millions in Japan who virtually are slaves. They work guards who allow no one to come behind high walls, watched by armed or go, fourteen hours a day under overseers that drive them to the utmost of their strength. The problem of the woman worker is very serious, even engaging the attention of the government.

"Japan's governing class at this moment is made up largely of men educated abroad. The stings and slights they suffered personally—and all of them suffered so during all their time in every foreign country—have stirred them into false conceptions of life and to longing for revenge. These men are the military class. They thirst for blood, riches, power.

"Baron Nogi, of noble lineage and noble attainments for his country, and his good wife, with the beautiful, refined face, saw this change coming to Japan and committed suicide in protest. There is a small element in Japan that worships these two. Every day in the Tokio museum that is dedicated to them and that contains all their personal effects, there are silent crowds, showing that the spirit of old Japan is not entirely dead.

CULT OF VIOLENCE.

"Then there is yet another element—those who shrink from violent methods, but who think there is no other way for Japan. Her population is increasing by leaps, though birth control is publicly advocated. This population must be taken care of at any cost, the people of this element feel."

There is also the fact, this obverver states, that Japan is faced on one side by China and Russia and on the other by the United States—all giants that some Japanese statesmen insist will gobble Japan up unless she strikes first and hard and keeps the big fellows at her mercy.

"The government of Japan, moreover, has become timid," the letter continues. "It is very conscious of the fact that it is the last remaining absolute monarchy in the world. There has been no oppression by the government in the past. The Japanese have had no grievances.

"Yet if the armies should come home from the Asiatic mainland there would surely be a revolution, say members of the group that preaches force; the military must be kept busy in Siberia, Korea, Manchuria, somewhere outside of Japan. With the financial crisis—of a most serious character—too many anarchistic youths, a very trying and dangerous labor situation and these huge armies to be maintained, Japan has her hands about full.

LOOTING SIBERIA.

"Actions of Japan in Siberia make me think she realizes her desperate situation and the fact that she is without a friend among the powers of the world. She is indulging in the old methods of warfare—and in sorrow I see therein the beginning of destruction. She is looting Siberia. Word comes to me that 'every place that might be of interest or value to Japan is being held and exploited by her by armed force.'

"She has complete possession of the maritime province, which includes the wonderful city of Vladivostok, with its nearly half million population. She has all of Saghalien, Kamchatka and the lower regions of the Amur, through which all the rich produce of the interior must find an outlet.

"Japan has taken from the Russians all the fisheries. The Slavs cannot fish in Pacific waters without permission from the Japanese and that if obtained is worthless because of the treatment meted out by the swarming oriental.

"My information is that Japan has 500 ships plying between Nippon and Saghalien alone, taking not only fish but all the furs. Animals have been killed off ruthlessly. New Japanese enterprises have sprung up by the thousands. Three thousand workmen were recently sent from Japan to a single mine. Gold, coal and other minerals are be-

Election of Harding and Coolidge Means Era of Business Stability and Prosperity, Lower Taxes and Higher Prestige, Say Leaders Here.

BY THE WATCHMAN.

America is bound forward on a period of four years of business and industrial expansion and prosperity. The nation is rapidly passing out of the shadows of doubt and instability—the two dark elements that have pervaded the seven years of Democratic government at Washington — and with the utmost confidence may now look to a satisfactory settlement of its vexing domestic problems and to heightened prestige abroad. America, in short, has reached a turn in the long road of costly government blundering, of mistaken ideaiism carrying a weakening leaven of Socialism, of gross ignorance of and indifference to the needs of the great American business machine, and with the national political housecleaning that came with the election of Harding and Coolidge on November 2 a return to sanity in the administration of governmental affairs may be expected.

Thus is epitomized the belief of a number of leading Los Angeles business men, the heads of financial institutions and important commercial enterprises, in the meaning to the country of the recent overwhelming Republican victory at the polls, which brought to a close the much-discussed and widely criticised Wilson regime. In giving their views to The Times, these business leaders point to the emphatic character of this election victory as clearly indicating the confidence the people have in the Republican party to repair the serious Democratic mistakes, and by replacing inefficiency with efficiency at Washington quickly restore our national business equilibrium and insure the country its entitled prosperity. These men who so express their belief in the integrity of Republican leader-

NEED BASE HERE, SAYS ADMIRAL.

Urges Six-Million-Dollar Submarine Station.

Tells Also Strategic Value of Hawaiian Base.

Harbor Board Grants Space for Yacht Clubhouse.

A permanent submarine base is needed at Los Angeles Harbor, as an important part of the plans for the naval protection of the Pacific Coast, Rear-Admiral Joseph S. McKean told the members of the City Club at their noon luncheon yesterday, and he urged all citizens of Los Angeles to work hard to convince the members of the special Congressional committee which will visit this city soon, that Los Angeles will co-operate with the government in making the establishment of the $6,000,000 station possible.

Admiral McKean said that the waters off the harbor are ideal for the use of submarines and for mine-planting work, and that the proposed station here would form a necessary part of the Los Angeles-San Diego base for the Pacific Fleet. The other bases are Alaska, Puget Sound, San Francisco, and Balboa at the Pacific end of the Panama Canal. The rear-admiral pointed out the necessity of bases to naval operations, these including repair shops, docks for cleaning vessels, practice grounds, land barracks for marines and sailors, and every facility needed in maintaining a fleet. Present base facilities on this Coast, the speaker said, are inadequate for the entire Pacific Fleet, and they must be enlarged at once.

HAWAIIAN BASE ALSO.

"It was the right move to divide our naval forces," said the speaker, "into two great fleets, and Congress should now give us the money to keep our Pacific Fleet ready for war, for that is the way to prevent war. In addition to doing your utmost to help along the establishment of your part of the San Diego-Los Angeles base, every citizen should do his share to bring the establishment of a great base at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii. For if war comes, and we have an adequate base there, the people of Los Angeles will see and hear at first hand as little of it as it did of the European war. A base at Hawaii will make it impossible for a fleet to pass, and the Navy will guarantee you that the Army guns at the harbor will not be necessary except for target practice."

FOR YACHTING CENTER.

The Board of Harbor Commissioners yesterday laid the foundation for the establishment of a great yachting center at the harbor, by setting aside 4500 feet of ocean frontage on Terminal Island for the use of yacht clubs, and by granting the application of the officers of the Los Angeles Athletic Club for 1500 feet of this frontage for its clubhouse and for anchorage grounds. Frank A. Garbutt, speaking on behalf of the officers of the club, stated that the organization plans to ultimately spend at least $750,000 in the building of an enclosed breakwater and basin and for the erection of a magnificent clubhouse ten stories in height.

The expected opposition to the application of the officers of the Los Angeles Athletic Club melted away, when President William May Garland of that organization, Mr. Garbutt, John W. Mitchell and others stated that the club desired no exclusive rights to the water front on Terminal Island, but would welcome as neighbors the members and boats of the Los Angeles Yacht Club, the Los Angeles Motor Boat Club, and other yachting organizations. These are expected to likewise apply for water-front space adjoining the Los Angeles Athletic Club's property, which is to be leased from the city for thirty years at a nominal rental, and it is considered that within a few years the ocean frontage of Terminal Island will present a number of splendid yacht clubhouses and inclosed basins and anchorages for yachts, making it one of the yachting centers of the country.

WAR ON FALSE ALARM "NUTS."

Fire Chief in Campaign to Curb Excitement Makers; One Given Jail Term.

Fire Chief Scott yesterday declared war on "fire-alarm nuts" who ring in false alarms just to create excitement. Each time the department responds to an alarm the city must pay $100 in depreciation of property, time of men, etc. One day last week seven false alarms were turned in.

A man 22 years old was arrested last week by the flying squad of detectives which is aiding the chief in running down the false alarmists and was sent to jail for 100 days. The law fixes a maximum penalty of 500 days in jail for persons convicted of turning in false alarms.

The Fire Commission is backing up the fire chief in his campaign.

NEVER CUT A CORN

Besides Being Dangerous, It Makes Them Grow Faster

Cutting or paring a corn is always annoying, often painful and many times dangerous. Besides, it only makes the corn or callus grow faster.

The best way to remove corns is by painting them with Cactus Corn Compound. It stops the pain at once and in a short time the corns die and fall off. The remedy is painless, absolutely safe and positive in its results, and can be used in the privacy of the home.

A small bottle of Cactus Corn Compound costs only a few cents at any drug store and is sufficient to remove dozens of corns. Your druggist will refund your money if this safe and simple home treatment fails to give you satisfaction.—[Advertisement.

UNEMPLOYM NOT IN EV

Five Thousand Idle Special Causes; is in Common

The industrial shakedown which ffect upon local conditions, accordng to E. H. Hancock, district

Supt. Hancock said yesterday that f these men are machinists, cineextras, etc., and that many of em may drop back into their aces within a few days.

The number of idle men is not large as in pre war times, and subject to sharp variation. Supt.

Los Angeles now has a small group railroad machinists, shop men and rks, temporarily idle while the lroads unscramble the freight con-

The employment bureau assumes

UNEMPLOYMENT OF EAST NOT IN EVIDENCE HERE.

Five Thousand Idle Men Attributed to Special Causes; Only Real Excess is in Common Labor Supply.

The industrial shakedown which [illegible] to be affecting the working [illegible] in cities east of the Rocky [illegible], is having no noteworthy [illegible] upon local conditions, according to E. H. Hancock, district [illegible]endent of public employment bureaus for the State of California.

[illegible] that the men were let out [illegible] of a dispute over taking two [illegible] at once when they were entitled to a Saturday off and the Saturday fell on a holiday.

Supt. Hancock declares that wages have not been reduced to his knowledge except in the case of unskilled day laborers. In this line the reduction has been about 10 per cent. because of a small oversupply of help.

There is a brisk demand for carpenters, plumbers, plasterers and cement finishers and there probably will be all winter, it is said, unless the high cost of building materials checks construction work here. The shortage of domestics, which has existed since before the war, is easing up somewhat, Supt. Hancock says, but domestics are still hard to find, it seems. In July and August, according to the public employment bureau, the demand for help in all lines was about equal to the supply in this district, but an oversupply of unskilled labor appears to have developed since then.

GROCERS WILL DANCE.

Retail Association Members Invited to Entertainment Tuesday.

All grocers are invited to be present with their wives or friends at the "get-together" meeting, entertainment and dance which will be held on Tuesday evening at 236 South Hill street by the Southern California Retail Grocers' Association.

State Secretary Frank B. Connolly, who will be the speaker of the evening, will have a message important to everyone in the retail grocery business. Other speakers will be heard. There will be entertainers, chief of which will be Mlle. Olive Du Vall, interpretator of Egyptian and French dances.

After refreshments have been served there will be dancing. No tickets or invitations are necessary to people who are in the retail grocery business.

TO QUASH CHARGES.

Federal Attorney Agrees to Dismissals in Pass Fraud Case.

By agreement with the United States Attorney a stipulation was entered into yesterday for the dismissal of the pending indictment against P. H. Halbriter and Al Clark, who with a number of other defendants were charged with a conspiracy to defraud the government through the use of counterfeit railway passes. The formal order will be entered upon the return of U. S. District Judge Trippet from Fresno, where he is holding his November term of court.

This will dispose of all the defendants in the case with the exception of Harrison C. Cash and David A. Weatherby, father of Theodore W. Powell. Powell was the principal in the fraud, pleadeo guilty and is now serving a term in the Federal prison on McNeu Island.

It is stated that a thorough investigation has cleared Halbriter and Clark from suspicion of complicity in the fraud.

BRUIN SERVES AS WATCHDOG.

Circus Bear Hears Thieves and Scares Them Off by His Rumbly Growls.

The growls of a sleepy bear early Friday morning frightened two daring burglars from a tent of the Escalante Bros.' circus at Main and Chavez streets and saved the circus men several hundred dollars' worth of jewelry and some cash. The thieves escaped with a small quantity of loot, but were able to carry away only a small portion of the jewelry and other valuables they had stacked up in one corner of the tent.

According to the police, the bear was asleep in a cage a short distance from where the thieves were ransacking trunks and boxes. The animal, awakened by the noise, threw himself against the bars of his cage and growled, and the burglars fled in haste.

CHILD WELFARE WORK EXPERT COMING HERE.

THREE LOS ANGELES LECTURES AND ONE IN SANTA ANA LATE THIS WEEK.

Dr. James Mace Andress, an authority on child health and development, is to visit Los Angeles as representative of the United States Department of Education and the National Child Health Organization, and will deliver a series of free lectures under the auspices of the University of California Extension, three days of his time being devoted to meetings of parents, teachers and social workers in Southern California.

Arrangements have been completed for hearing Dr. Andress three times in Los Angeles, and once in Santa Ana. The meetings in Los Angeles will be held at 236 South Hill street, in the auditorium on the third floor, a general meeting having been called for 2 p.m. on Thursday. Two other meetings will take place at 5:15 p.m. Thursday and Friday in the same auditorium, this time having been selected as most convenient for teachers and social workers. Anyone may attend any of the meetings.

The, Parent-Teacher Association, the department of public health, the Alliance of Social Agencies, the department of public nursing and other groups are co-operating with the University Extension urging their members to attendance at these lectures.

Dr. Andress was previously head of the department of psychology and child study in the Boston Normal School, and his published books are considered authoritative. Among them are "Teaching Hygiene in the Grades," "Health Education in Rural Schools," and "Rosy Cheeks and Strong Hearts," a book of health fairy tales which will appear shortly through the Child Health Organization of America.

In Santa Ana the meeting is to be under the auspices of the Parent-Teacher Association. Mrs. Earl Morris, the loca lpresident, will have details in charge.

START SALESMANSHIP AND CREDIT COURSES.

Y.M.C.A. INSTRUCTORS OPEN NEW CLASSES TOMORROW AND FRIDAY NIGHTS.

New courses in credits and collections and salesmanship will open at the Central Y.M.C.A. tomorrow and Friday nights. Paul R. Smith, associate in the credit and collections department of the Union Oil Company, will deliver the first of a series of lectures on the subject of "Credits" tomorrow at 7:30 p.m. The first course will cover a period of twenty weeks, each lecture being followed by class discussions.

The new branch of educational work has been designed to meet the needs of book-keepers, accountants, credit managers, correspondents and others who desire more detailed information as to the legal and business phases of the subject. Mimeographed copies of the lectures are to be supplied to each student.

In addition to being in business in Los Angeles, Mr. Smith was for a number of years an attorney and acted as instructor in the law department of a northwestern university.

A second course in salesmanship will open on Friday evening at 7:30 o'clock in the Central Y.M.C.A. under the direction of John W. Hamilton of Pasadena. Thirty-six students are at present enrolled in a Y.M.C.A. course which opened early in October and the new series of studies will take care of a large number of incoming students who cannot be accommodated in the first class.

Fair-sized enrollments also are reported by Educational Director Goodcell in the advertising, accountancy, Spanish and public speaking courses, all of which are being given by the Y.M.C.A. in its special night school for business men and women.

SULPHUR SOOTHES UGLY, ITCHING SKIN

The First Application Makes Skin Cool and Comfortable.

If you are suffering from eczema or some other torturing, embarrassing skin trouble you may quickly be rid of it by using Mentho-Sulphur, declares a noted skin specialist.

This sulphur preparation, because of its germ destroying properties, seldom fails to quickly subdue itching, even of fiery eczema. The first application makes the skin cool and comfortable. Rash and blotches are healed right up. Mentho-Sulphur is applied like any pleasant cold cream and is perfectly harmless. You can obtain a small jar from any good druggist.—[Advertisement.

SAGE TEA KEEPS YOUR HAIR DARK

When Mixed with Sulphur It Brings Back Its Beautiful Lustre at Once.

Gray hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray and looks streaked, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundred-fold.

Don't stay gray! Look young! Either prepare the recipe at home or get from any drug store a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which is merely the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients. Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully, besides, no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, its natural color is restored and it becomes thick, glossy and lustrous, and you appear years younger.—[Advertisement.

MOTORING ARMY HITHER BOUND.

Angeleno Says Thousands of Tourists Are on Way.

Automobile Parks Full from Atlantic to Rockies.

Lack of Camping Facilities Here Given Emphasis.

"The problem of caring for thousands of automobile tourists due to arrive in Los Angeles within the next few months is staring the city in the face this minute," said Clarence Whipple, contractor of Huntington Park, yesterday on his return from a three-months' motor tour of the eastern coast.

He found from fifty to 200 automobiles in every motor park between the Atlantic Coast and the Rocky Mountains, and most of them are headed for Southern California, according to Mr. Whipple, who was bombarded with questions about camping facilities in and around Los Angeles.

"I told them Los Angeles has just one park with one small auto camp, well equipped to be sure, but accommodating only about fifty cars a night, so that parties have to move on in a week's time because of the demand for space," he reported tothe Chamber of Commerce.

At Denver the situation is quite different. Municipal authorities prepared for the motoring tourists on a wholesale plan. This summer a new camp was established on the outskirts of the Colorado city, accommodating 1500 parties a night, and next year it will be able to handle 3500 cars, providing gas, electricity, showers, laundries, stores and a motion-picture theater for the guests of the city.

"The automobile tourist season is on now in Southern California and the good roads in Colorado and Kansas, next best to California's, are attracting thousands to this section of the country," said Mr. Whipple. "On my way East through Missouri, I was asked to stay over night to tell the people of one town about the California good roads movement."

Figures for the first six months of this year show that 390 cars arrive every day in the State. The majority travel to Southern California, and Los Angeles alone receives 75 per cent of visiting automobiles.

Mr. Whipple stopped in sixty automobile camps altogether on his journey and in every camp was asked about Los Angeles, where nearly thirty campers have to be turned away each night in Elysian Park.

"Y.M." SECRETARIES OF SOUTHLAND MEET.

HEAR PLANS FOR DRIVE THIS WEEK TO GET CASH FOR FOREIGN WORK.

More than 100 Y.M.C.A. secretaries of Southern California gathered for their annual conference at the Boyle Heights Branch of the Y.M.C.A. Wednesday morning. Delegations were present from Long Beach, Pasadena, Redlands, Riverside, San Diego, Santa Barbara, South Pasadena, Whittier, Los Angeles and Orange county and from the University of Southern California Y.M.C.A.

Special stress was laid on the importance of work among high school boys. It was said that California leads the nation in work of this character, with 4000 boys enrolled in Hi-Y Clubs. The enrollment in Los Angeles alone is more than 500.

B. B. Wilcox, representing the international committee of the Y.M.C.A., who recently returned from a trip through Central and Northern China, announced details of the California end of the national drive for $800,000 to be used in the foreign work of the Y.M.C.A. The California quota has been placed at $60,000. A concerted movement will be made in this State this week to raise this fund. Arthur Rugh, representative of the Y.M.C.A. in China, is scheduled to speak in a number of Southern California cities.

Reports were made concerning boys' work by Ralph G. Cole; physical work, by Wfl A. Reynolds; general secretaries' problems, by H. O. Hill; assistant secretaries' work, by Capt. R. A. Goodcell, and county work problems, by Neil Locke.

SWELLDOM OPENING NEXT SATURDAY.

The formal opening of the "New Swelldom Beautiful" at its new location at Sixth and Broadway will be held next Saturday instead of yesterday as erroneously announced. The store will open at 2 o'clock next Saturday afternoon and guests will be welcomed until 5 o'clock. An orchestra will furnish music and living models will display the latest creations in gowns.

Another Big Fact About

emphasized in a big way

The absorbing story of the Ampico has been told to Los Angeles audiences in many impressive ways, through the featuring of this instrument with noted artists.

Friday night at Trinity Auditorium a new phase of the Ampico's more than human powers was revealed.

The unprecedented feat performed by the KNABE AMPICO in furnishing the pianistic support for the elaborate dance spectacle, "Music Visualization," by

Ruth St. Denis and Ted Shawn

with the RUTH ST. DENIS CONCERT DANCERS

gave impressive proof to the marvelling audience that there is no accomplishment possible for the living master which the Ampico in the Knabe cannot achieve with equal facility

The perfect manner in which the Knabe Ampico's reproductions synchronized with the intricate bodily movements of the dancers and the ideal accompaniments rendered by this instrument of glorious tone suggest but one more of the innumerable ways in which the Ampico in the Knabe proves itself an aid to the artist and student of dancing or music, as well as a source of enjoyment and culture in the home.

We invite you to hear the Knabe Ampico in our Ampico studios. Convenient terms of purchase may be arranged, if desired, and your present piano or player will be accepted in exchange.

A WRY FACE.

Eight barrels of whisky were found in a wagonload of hay on the way to San Diego the other day. The drivers explained that it was rye hay, but acknowledged the corn.

HAVING THE ITCH.

Possibly it is the ambition of the Philippines to become the Ireland of America. Manila may be telegraphing to Lloyd George to please send them a fleet to save them from the ravages of Uncle Sam.

A MERE TRIFLE.

Government revenue from the sale of soft drinks has been a little over $50,000,000 for the year. But what is $50,000,000 to a high-geared government? It would cost that much to take a census of the bootleggers.

THE BIG DOINGS.

President-elect Harding desires to be inaugurated without any pomp or glory; but Washington hasn't had a big show for some time and is anxious to hear the Marion band play. In such cases the Executive is apt to gracefully yield.

SAME OLD STORY.

Even Iowa is complaining of a shortage of houses. This seems odd, as it was supposed that most Iowans had sold out to move to California and would have to leave their homes behind. Must be some strangers moving in from the East.

WITHOUT PRICE.

A burglar broke into the boudoir of a Gotham society woman and stole a bottle of benedictine. The mere plunder of the family jewels would be as nothing to this dastardly exploit. Anybody can get a string of pearls, but a flagon of ancient benedictine must be priceless.

THE LADY COP.

The municipal administration in Boston has placed eight women on the police force and they will be especially charged with the task of clearing the commons of mashers. Whether the lady cops will use themselves for bait is not made known. It is hard to imagine a Boston feminine bluecoat doing vampire stuff.

SUCH IS FATE.

A service man who had won the Distinguished Service Medal and Croix de Guerre for taking a German machine-gun nest and chasing a flock of Huns across the Marne was shot for a rabbit while out hunting with some companions the other day. The Germans couldn't kill him by blowing him up with high explosives, but a spoonful of shot from a friendly gun wound up his career.

NO PARDON READY.

The Department of Justice is not unfavorable toward the granting of a pardon to Eugene Debs, but it is understood that the President himself holds the belief that there should be no pardon at this time. He holds that the words and acts of Debs were most flagrant at the time of commission and that the morale of the country in the event of another war would be undermined by similar violations. So it looks as if Eugene would continue to hold his cosy little cell for a while.

ON WHEELS.

On the North Side a man decided to build a home for himself and hire the workmen direct instead of having a contractor for the job. He found five carpenters to start with and on the first morning each man came in his own machine—and not one of them was a Ford. For a week the job was marked by the five high-priced cars that stood around it all day. The owner figures that if he should have the plasterers and plumbers there at the same time the place would resemble a parking station. The world moves—on rubber-tired wheels.

GREED AND GRAFT.

One New York contractor admits that he paid one of the union officials $30,000 for "strike insurance." It could be had by the month, the year or the job or for each of the trades concerned. If a builder tried to get along without strike insurance he was apt to have fresh labor troubles every day. Some walking delegate would find an excuse for leading his forces out. The ordinary worker under a bunch of grafting labor officials is the original human goat. But, at that, he is hardly entitled to any sympathy. He ought to know he is being milked.

THE VOICE OF WISDOM.

Elihu Root cabled from Europe while he was working over the plans for the international court that "a new deal from the beginning by abandoning the peace Treaty of Versailles is impossible and to attempt it would bring chaos and an entire loss of the results of the war and general disaster, involving the United States." The situation has not changed since, except that the League has been strengthened until it includes forty-five nations. Mr. Root says further: "The only possible course is to keep the treaty, modifying it to meet the requirements of the Senate reservations." Mr. Root is America's foremost specialist in international law and has ably served as Secretary of State. There will never be any lessening of army and navy appropriations or any permanent assurance of peace while America remains aloof from the League.

A STORM THAT HAS PASSED.

Wherever sovietism in any of its forms appeared as an issue in our late election it was defeated. So determined was the electorate as a whole to make no compromise with radicalism that every candidate who looked like a Bolshevik, talked like a Bolshevik or emitted a Bolshevik odor was beaten. There was a club waiting for the head of every Red that appeared above the surface. Even Milwaukee went patriotic. The voters of that city awoke to a realization of their late folly and elected a bona fide Republican to fill the seat in Congress from which Victor Berger was expelled.

Lenine has already been quoted as saying that the result is such as might have been expected from a country dominated by labor aristocrats. He blames the "benighted condition" of this country upon the millions of people who continue to work for wages and says that a workman who is saving a part of his pay to buy a home is a bourgeois at heart and is of no value to a proletariat republic. Condemnation from the lips of Lenine, however, has come to be regarded as an honor by those who have observed carefully the development of the soviet revolution in Russia.

Judging from the election returns, the American workman is not to be driven from remunerative labor by an epithet. He prefers being called a "wage slave" and bringing home a pay envelope once a week to thieving, starving and slaying as a citizen of a Red republic. The result proves clearly that, if the decision had been left to the laboring classes themselves, they would have refused to surrender the rights and privileges they now possess under American institutions in order to establish some form of Communist oligarchy. The result proves that the great majority of American workingmen have learned how to think. The public school system of our country is bearing excellent fruit; for in no other country in the world have the manual workers shown such a capacity for independent thought.

II.

IF THE working classes of Russia had possessed the education and the independent spirit of those of our own country the Bolshevist revolution would not have been possible. The American workmen were able to consider what the end might be before embarking on a Bolshevik experiment. They knew how to balance with the promises of the soviet agitators the actual results achieved in the countries where some form of sovietism was applied. They were well aware that the countries in which there is the greatest misery are those in which some form of the soviet experiment has been attempted. It is not true perhaps to say that all classes in this country have rejected radicalism, for, as the term class is used in Europe, there is but a single class in America. In a country where the poor think and the rich work hereditary class distinction is impossible.

Workingmen of great Britain have been influenced by the American rather than the Russian example. The labor organizations of the British Isles sent industrial commissions to visit both Russia and the United States. The commission that visited Russia reported a condition of starvation and misery, conscript labor and political autocracy. The commission returning from the United States told of steady employment of all desiring to work, of fabulous wages and of a condition of general prosperity. When the two reports were compared the British workmen, as well as their wives and daughters, decided that Bolshevism was no improvement over the wage system.

The reports of these two commissions are said to have influenced labor organizations of Great Britain not to attempt any general strike at this time. They decided that it was better to work than to starve, that a live Englishman was preferable to a dead Bolshevik. Two generations under self-determination and limited suffrage gave to the British workmen sufficient experience with political and industrial questions to enable them to detect the follies of sovietism.

III.

FRANCE has set an example since the close of the war that the workers of other nations would do well to emulate. Despite her exhausted condition la belle France has done more to restore the losses of the World War than any other country. There has been less loafing, less idle conversation and more honest labor in France and in Belgium than anywhere else.

Italy has suffered by reason of the fact that her working people are not as well educated as those of France, Great Britain and the United States and because they had less experience with self-government. The Italian proletariat was carried away for a time by the propaganda of the Bolsheviki. Councils of workmen were established and, at a given signal, the employees of twenty of the greatest industrial plants in the country drove away the managers and proprietors and took possession of the works.

Their action was applauded by the soviet emissaries and an attempt was made to start a similar revolt in Great Britain and the United States. But the experience of a few weeks proved to the Italian workers that they could not live without pay envelopes. They were not able to find a market for the things they produced, and the cost of production grew enormously. The Italian government adopted a weak policy of leaving the strikers to learn their own lesson by actual experience. The result was that the workmen soon gave up the factories, but they have retained the idea that they are more powerful than the government and that they can break the laws with impunity.

This flinching on the part of the Italian government before a threatening proletariat does not augur well for the future; for the proletariat is very likely to conceive the idea that its will expressed in mob violence is stronger than the government. It is possible that Italy will descend lower in the radical scale before the workers learn that mob rule, like a conflagration, can work vast destruction, but is without value as a constructive force. But the ultimate result will be a repudiation of sovietism.

Social and economic conditions in Russia are now admittedly intolerable. The blight of Bolshevism has checked production and the laboring classes are perishing by the tens of thousands because governmental and economic conditions are such that they cannot produce enough to keep body and soul together. Lenine and Trotzky seek to lay the blame on a foreign blockade. But it is plain to anyone mentally honest that, when the people of the richest agricultural country in the world are dying of hunger, there is something fatally wrong with governmental and social conditions. Russia has evidently reached the point where further existence under a soviet form of government is impossible. Conditions are so bad there they must shortly begin to mend themselves, and the result will be a repudiation of Socialism and Bolshevism and a return to the institutions of the western republics.

IV.

THE TIMES is well aware that there are hundreds of people right here in Los Angeles who are just awakening to the radical menace and who imagine that the world is going mad. But the clouds which they view in the heavens are fragments of the storm that has passed. There are fewer strikes now in the United States than at any other time since the signing of the armistice, and the result of the recent elections showed that the workers are wholly out of sympathy with radicalism.

There were doubtful days during the months immediately following the Russian revolution, periods when it seemed that the workmen of other nations were bent on self-destruction. But there are now signs on every hand that the mad wave of radicalism has passed. Bolshevik uprisings have been localized in Eastern Europe. They have been turned back at every frontier. The workers of the western nations have been warned by the experience of the communities where the soviets have secured a temporary ascendency and they are not seeking to exclude brains and capital from the organization of society.

There have been croakers and prophets of evil ever since the world began. There have been groups that were willing to wreck a government or a people in order to salvage the ruins. There have always been demagogues, self-seekers and charlatans. But the progress of civilization proves that these groups never remain long at the top. They perish of their own corruption and the world moves on. As far as our present civilization is concerned the Reds have had their inning since the World War ceased and have failed to score. A healthy conservative spirit is manifest among all the free peoples. Representative government has triumphed over soviet and Communist autocracies.

WHY GO TO CHURCH?

How to get the average man into a church is a problem with which preachers have wrestled ever since the Apostle's Creed became the standard of a Christian's faith. Sometimes the preachers have succeeded, but oftener they have been compelled to bow to the inevitable and be satisfied with a scattering of faithful, dotting the expanse of feminine millinery like an occasional island in a tropic sea.

All sorts of devices have been called into being to arrest the attention of the tired business man and the one who prefers to spend his Sundays under the family juggernaut tinkering the carburetor. Sometimes sensational topics have been announced, but the wary soon learned that these were only sugar-coated pills concealing a dose of real conscience awakener.

Beautiful music, alleged to be filled with power to sooth the savage, has been held out as a tempting bait, but the music which many men most dearly love to hear is the click of the golfing tools against the wee ball; the crack of the bat as some hero of the diamond slams out a two-bagger, or the purring of a forty-horse-power engine in perfect harmony with the universal scheme of things.

Some preachers have given up the job in disgust or despair, acknowledging that man is not per se a religious critter and extending priestly permission to each and sundry to go to hell in his own particular chariot.

Comes now a Presbyterian parson with a new vision. In his mind's eye he peopled his auditorium each Sunday with gallant knights and turned aside from communion with the world, the flesh and the devil a church full of novitiates every time the herald angels sounded the trumpet call to worship God.

This parson established his psychological foundation by announcing that his is a church where men go. He couldn't get 'em in to tell them this, or what was in store, so he had a lot of campaign literature printed which he succeeded in placing in the hands of several thousand men who had forgotten what a church pew looked like. He told them that he was going to talk about the fellows who are earthbound and who know no God, no sin, no future life. About those who are hellbound with no Christ, no cross, no second chance, and finally about the few who are heavenbound sans devil, sans death, sans future judgment.

Then he recited Theodore Roosevelt's nine reasons for attending church. Reasons carrying a punch in each count; reasons that any man will read just because.

The colonel told the world in his usual forceful manner that a churchless community is on the down grade; that church work and church attendance cultivate a feeling of responsibility for others; that there are enough holidays for most of us, but that Sunday is different because there are fifty-two of them. Therefore on Sundays go to church.

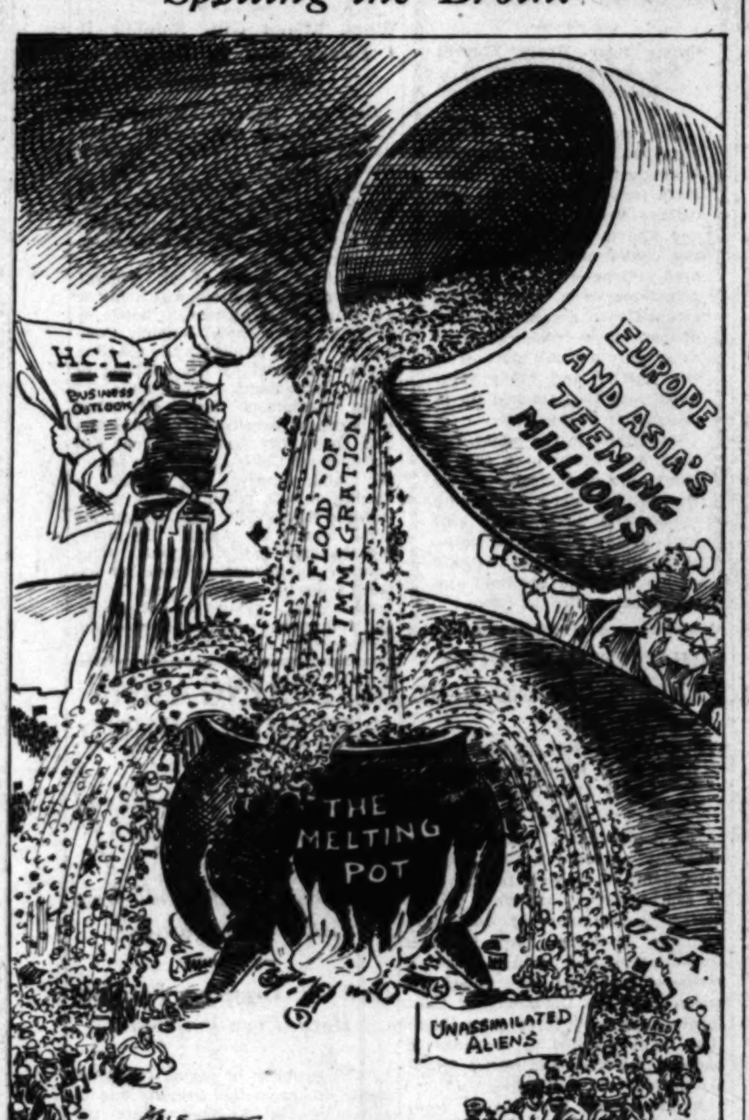
He pointed out the usual excuses. I know, he said, that one can worship the Creator in a grove of trees or by a running brook or in a man's own house, but I also know that the average man does not thus worship. If he does not hear a good sermon he will hear a sermon by a good man; he will listen to and take part in reading some beautiful passages from the Bible, and if he is not familiar with the Bible he has suffered a loss.

He will take part in singing some good hymns. He will meet and nod or speak to good, quiet neighbors. He will come away feeling a little more charitable towards all the world, even towards those excessively foolish young men who regard church going as a soft performance. He will show his faith by his works.

The Rev. Dr. G. A. Briegleb of the Westlake Presbyterian Church thinks this is good enough campaign material on which to rest his case. He professes the belief that the men of this city are religiously careless rather than unreligious or irreligious. He thinks there are enough men in Los Angeles to fill every church every Sunday, who are willing to show by example and precept that they still believe in a Divinity which shapes our ends.

The Times is inclined to agree with the doctor, and we hope his clarion call will find such liberal response that a veritable host will rise to join the wise men as Christendom once more in spirit and in truth journeys with them toward the Bethlehem manager wherein lay, on that first Christmas morning, the heart and hope of the world.

Spoiling the Broth.



FEELING FINE.

This old world is not such a gloomy place, after all. It might be worse. Of course, there are heaps of folks who are everlastingly wielding the hammer, but the hammer is more purposeful as a constructive tool than as a destructive weapon. As the good old bard, Silas P. Higgins, quaintly remarks in his immortal work, "The Passionate Plumber:"

"The world is filled with grief and woe,
But lets not lag behind.
Tho' skies be overcast, we know
The clouds are silver-lined."

Of course, there are people who make a specialty of worrying. They would worry if their wives were out with traveling men. They would grunt if they had lumbago. But if people who worry would set a particular time for it and not spread it over the day they would be surprised to find how short a period was really necessary. If a man would say: "I will do all my worrying from 7 to 11 of a morning," he would soon realize that he had time to spare and that, as a matter of fact, he could do all his necessary worrying while he was waiting for his bath water.

It is poor business for a man and his wife to both do their worrying at the same time. They don't save anything by it—in fact, they are likely to string it out. Two people worrying can start a fight where one would start a grin. Maybe the husband will open his breakfast with a streak of worrying about his note at the bank, but if the wife chips in and says: "Let the bank do the worrying. Did you ever hear the story about the chambermaid with the hare lip?" both of them will forget there is anything to worry about and the husband will start for the store whistling: "Stop Your Tickling."

The world had a gloomy face for a long time. There was a war to expiate and a peace to wrangle over. There was a political campaign to quarrel about and some strikes and labor troubles to help spread the misery. But most of it has passed over and the scars are healing. Crops are fine. Bread and potatoes are a bit cheaper and you can get a good nickel cigar for a dime. We are going to have a peace-loving League of Nations yet, and even the leagues in our national game are going to dwell together in amity. Outside of the one-man cars there isn't very much to trouble about and we can approach Thanksgiving Day in the real thanksgiving spirit.

THE CONSUMERS' LEAGUE.

This Consumers' League is elastic enough to admit almost anybody. Even the manufacturer, the merchant or the middleman call themselves consumers when they are at home with the family. If a man doesn't consume anything but cigarettes he is still a consumer.

Strange to say, the Consumers' League is largely a development of the organizations of producers. In California it is largely sponsored by the co-operative marketing associations that have taken care of the oranges, the raisins, the walnuts, the prunes, the beans and other notable California crops. The idea is that, if the co-operative marketing is good for the seller there is a chance to make it advantageous to the buyer. It isn't all a matter of price. The season, transportation and the magnitude of the crop are important factors.

Co-operation in food producers can be for the benefit of the consumer. It would create a policy of careful merchandising and not merely dumping. According to the specialist of the Consumers' League in San Francisco the secret of true co-operation among consumers lies largely in the elimination of waste in food-handling and in practical merchandising. The average grocer is not a profiteer, but there is apt to be too many of him. For instance, in the Bay City there are more than 1200 groceries, or one to about every seventy families. One good-sized store can readily take care of from 500 to 1000 families. On one street there are eighteen groceries within two blocks. It is hardly possible for one of them to adopt a real merchandising policy; there is too much duplication. The consumers are paying the overhead for those eighteen stores when two or three would suffice.

In co-operative marketing the producer can take care of all waste between himself and the wholesaler by having his own market system. But the consumer is the only person who can care for waste between the wholesaler and the consumer. He is the unfortunate one in a bad system. What is being developed and what is needed is a merchandising system whereby overproduction of perishable foods can be placed before the consumer at the least possible cost and yet without loss to the producer. The consumer is always willing to concede a reasonable profit to the producer, but he does not want to pay a fancy price for stuff that would otherwise be thrown away.

RIPPLING RHYMES.

BUSY MEN.

Some of us are gifted speakers and we make the welkin sound, fading all the lesser shriekers who may argue and expound; and our grace you'll be allowing when we come before you bowing—but the farmer with his plowing makes the old world's wheels go round. Some of us are famous fighters, with our guns and butcher knives; and a lot of us, as writers, buy the fodder for our wives; others on the stage are playing, through the lines of "Hamlet" straying—but the farmer with his haying is the man who saves our lives. Some have all their lives devoted to the well-known public weal, and in Congress, silver-throated, you may hear them ably spiel; and they have our admiration, our applause and adulation—but the farmer saves the nation when he feeds the calves their meal. Some are painting gorgeous pictures destined to a deathless fame, and, despite the critics' strictures, they will get there just the same; some are preaching public morals, some are gaining singers' laurels—but the farmer with his sorrels or his claybanks plays the game. And the farmer isn't yawping as he goes his dusty way, and we do not see him stopping, yelping for a six-hour day; when the early dawn is breaking he goes briskly to his raking, and his honest bones are aching when at night he hits the hay.

THE LANCER.

The Surgeon-General of the United States is so wise that he is positively Solomonical, judging by some profound advice he is issuing anent tuberculosis. Here it is, positively no one should miss it.

"Keep strong. . . . Never eat or drink anything that weakens the body."

That is not all the advice, of course, but it is crux of it. It is so sublimely simple and obvious. Now be sure you don't forget it. Keep strong. Brilliant, positively brilliant.

We observe that the London newspapers have spread the glad and important tidings that Hugh Walpole, novelist, "spends eight months of the year in his country cottage, writing, reading and contemplating the wonderful scenery." We are glad to hear this, especially after the hectic time he had in Los Angeles, where the poor chap ran out of money and could not contemplate anything but the unsympathetic attitude of bank clerks who insisted upon having the great man "identified." Identified, indeed. No wonder he later had such hard things to say about Los Angeles. Even a celebrity can get deucedly hungry while being identified in a distant city that has so many celebrities that they all look alike to bank clerks.

A new store has been established to cater exclusively for women. This is a news item. It was time the ladies got a look-in on the stores which, hitherto, of course, have catered chiefly to men. The new store ought to get quite a trade.

A New York show girl says Los Angeles men are easily fussed. Part of her professional duties just now is to walk down the gang-plank from the stage and powder their faces in the audience. Jolly job. She says New York and San Francisco men like it, but Los Angeles men squirm in dire embarrassment. This, of course, may be a knock or a compliment, according to taste. For my part I am relieved to hear our local masculinity can still blush. Maybe it is because we are still he-men enough to prefer to conduct our own pursuit. Or sensitive enough, exclusive enough to maintain that anybody's powder puff is no powder puff for us. The show girl calls it lack of courage. That, my dear, is not cowardice, it's modesty—an eminently desirable distinction.

We have heard a good deal about the shortage of men in Britain, but a court case has just closed in which a beautiful siren was given nine months for marrying 'em by the score, with a preference for those on active service, writing them all wifely letters and collecting all their pay. It was only when the necessary book-keeping and filing system proved too much for her that things went wrong.

Incidentally statistics show that while the girls are experiencing a bitter shortage of mates, widows are remarrying all the time. All of which would imply that the British, once dubbed a nation of amateurs, are now showing a marked preference for professional experience.

Even in Los Angeles, of course, we have noted a certain leaning towards widows, both varieties, and other men's wives. But it should certainly give us pause when a girl's best bet is widow's weeds. It must make a married man feel so insecure. Yet how are the poor girls to ever achieve that consummation if they never get a chance to break in? As bad as trying to break into the newspaper game or the theatrical profession—no amateurs need apply.

All the same, in my own profession, I must admit the aspiring amateur is a great test of endurance. As sure as any sweet young thing is extra nice to me I await the advent of a bulky manuscript, which she would be so grateful if I would just read and criticise and then be a dear old thing and introduce her to my nice editors. They are not always sweet young things, either. They will rope me in for a dubious dinner and execrable coffee, making me name my own date, which is a criminal social hold-up that leaves a chap no loophole of escape and ultimately, either produce a manuscript or plead for a special write-up or crave my influence to get them in the movies.

With the noblest intentions in the world I don't believe I have ever yet succeeded in starting any of these aspiring amateurs upon dizzy careers, and editors and theatrical producers merely doubt my friendship as a sad consequence of my fond efforts on the amateur's behalf. How on earth does anyone ever get into these professions? Politics seems to be the only one in which the aspirant is not expected to have any first-class experience and training. An inferior dinner and some inferior smokes can often win a political job for the rankest amateur, who thereby is qualified to help run a city or a State or the nation; but every other profession seems to have the poor amateur absolutely taboo.

THE LANCER.

NOT SO HARD TO PRONOUNCE.

The name of the new French Premier is no such jaw-breaker as it looks, since four out of seven of its letters are silent. M. Georges Leygues is plain George L-e-g.

One pronounces the first, second and fourth letters of the name. The third, fifth, sixth and seventh are mute. Facetious persons say there are enough letters left over to make another name; and others insist that he ought to pay a tax on the extra letters or give them up.

He could afford to pay, for he is very rich. He inherited the fortune of a great department store owner besides having a substantial one of his own, did Mr. "Leg."—[Paris Correspondence Brooklyn Eagle.

"It is not mere theory that the country's prosperity is largely dependent upon an efficient government at Washington," said Mr. Sartori. "We know that without confidence in our government we cannot expect healthy business growth. Right now, through an anticipation which dates back several months, we are feeling certain beneficial effects of the Republican victory. This, of course, is based on the confidence in the Republican leadership. I do not believe a Democratic victory would have had any such effect. The people are convinced that the Republican national victory means the practice of greatly needed governmental economies. Conditions may be expected to improve after the new Republican administration takes hold and begins to function. President Harding will greatly increase public confidence in his administration if he selects able, experienced men to fill his Cabinet. He has already shown himself open-minded on questions of public policy, and I believe that if he takes counsel with the right advisers his administration will be highly successful."

The factor most vital to the success of President Harding's administration and to the prosperity of the country generally will be his handling of the nation's foreign policy, in the opinion of Henry M. Robinson, president of the First National Bank of Los Angeles, one of the Southwest's great financial institutions. The significant note in the November Republican victory, in Mr. Robinson's view, is the feeling of confidence that now pervades the country, which he believes springs from the conviction that the Republican leadership will take the nation successfully through the trying period of business readjustment just ahead.

"We are already feeling the good influence of the Republican victory in restored confidence throughout the country," he said. "This is largely due to the belief that the new administration intends to give the nation a broadly constructive program of government. But, mind you, it must be broad and sufficiently elastic to fit the world's needs if the Republican leadership is satisfactory. Generally speaking, the outlook is for a long period of business activity in which the country, under wise stewardship, should go forward prosperously. There is, in fact, no reason why it should be otherwise in view of our tremendous store of surplus products awaiting disposal in the world's markets. Today we are the richest nation in the world. This season's crops have been the greatest in history. We have vast stories of wheat, cotton, wool, packing products and other staples, and the world needs them.

"We cannot, however, remain isolated and expect to prosper as we should. Our prosperity is too closely linked with international conditions for us to find safety in remaining apart from the great international fields, as much as certain politicians argue to the contrary. America can only move forward because the rest of the world is doing likewise. Our part in the great work of international rehabilitation must be faithfully performed under the new administration at Washington."

MERCHANT'S VIEWPOINT.

The viewpoint of the merchant is expressed by W. E. Chamberlain, manager of A. Hamburger & Sons, who foresees in the Republican victory assurance of early relief from the burdensome system of taxes and surtaxes placed by the Democratic administration on American business.

J. G. Bullock, head of the great Los Angeles department store, which bears his name, is another leading merchant who is emphatic in saying that underlying the return of the Republican party to control of the national government is a feeling that it foreshadows certain prosperity. He sees few clouds on the business horizon—none that need cause anxiety—and expresses himself as certain that the nation under its reborn Republican leadership will ride forward through the greatest period of business and foreign trade expansion in history.

"The country, as was expected from the pre-election signs of a Republican victory, is rapidly settling down to a basis of confidence. This is exactly as it should be. I believe we are fully justified in assuming that the new Republican administration will provide economies that will substantially cut the cost of government and eventually find reflection in our taxation," he said.

W. M. GARLAND.

The investment and development sides of the realty field, both in California and the nation, will soon feel the beneficial influence of the Harding and Coolidge victory, according to W. M. Garland, head of the realty firm of W. M. Garland & Co., who, by reason of his former position as president of the National Association of Real Estate Exchanges, is able to view the changed situation from the understanding of nation-wide needs. He contends that lack of confidence in the Democratic administration, dating from 1913, was largely responsible for the subsequent contraction in the real estate field and the material falling off of property investments.

FROM BOND MEN.

Had there been a Democratic instead of a Republican triumph on November 2, we would today be figuring on serious reverses in the arena of American business, in the view of David P. Babcock, manager of Blyth, Witter & Co., bond and investment brokers. The renewal of confidence which has lately swept through the country, Mr. Babcock holds, is directly traceable to the national satisfaction over the great Republican victory.

Similar views are expressed by Edgar S. Dulin, member of the Blankenhorn-Hunter-Dulin Company, bond and investment brokers, who also emphasizes the rising note of confidence as the greatest element in insuring a prosperous term with the country under Republican management.

The Guest in Your Home

"The Ornaments of the House Are the Friends That Frequent It"

The above quotation expresses the warm hospitality a real host and hostess feel toward the guests in their home. Knowing that so much of the pleasure of their friends depends on the hospitality and "home feeling" their home expresses, especial thought should be given to the furnishings of the guest room.

Do the furnishings of your guest room reveal the pleasure and cordiality you feel toward the visitor in your home?

If careful thought has been given to the selecting and arranging of the furnishings of your guest room, it will express all the comfort, beauty and convenience you wish it to impart.

The Chippendale bedroom suite, illustrated above, seems particularly suitable for the guest room. Its strong, beautiful structural lines, the mellow tone of exquisitely burled walnut from which it is built, suggest the graciousness and art of a hospitable home.

Correct and beautiful furnishings eloquently speak of the character of the home and unfailingly reveal the taste, refinement and spirit of the home-maker. The beauty and workmanship of this suite is representative of all the home-furnishings to be found in this store.

BAZAAR TO AID YOUNG MOTHERS

Crittenton Home Semiannual Sale Comes Thursday.

Many Booths Planned; Musical Program for Visitors.

Eighty-one Babies Cared for in Nursery in Year.

The semiannual bazaar and musical arranged by the board of directors of the Florence Crittenton Home will be held at the home, 234 East Avenue 33, next Thursday afternoon from 2 to 5 o'clock, and during the afternoon the nursery, which now shelters eleven babies, will be open to inspection by the visitors.

Many booths and tables are being prepared for the sale, and a musical program, which will include songs by Mrs. Grace Hammond, coloratura soprano, and violin selections by Mrs. Theresa Holbrook Winslow, with Mrs. Bell Holbrook as accompanist, is being arranged by Mrs. J. Willard Edgar. General arrangements are in charge of Mrs. Eugene Cohn, chairman of the Bazaar Committee, and Mrs. F. E. Shaw, chairman of the auxiliary.

One table will offer articles made by inmates of the home, and will be in charge of Mrs. S. Silberberg and Mrs. M. Block. This will carry fancy work, aprons, dolls and many novelties. Mrs. Bessie McMullen, Mrs. George Brown and Mrs. Ella Horner will be in charge of the booth where tea and home-made cakes will be sold, and Mrs. Edna Newmerkle will dispense doughnuts at another booth. The handkerchief table has been assigned to Mrs. F. E. Shaw, Mrs. J. Saunders and Mrs. J. B. Smith; the fancy articles table to Mrs. Diana Hunter, and the miscellaneous table to Mrs. S. C. Bierbower.

There will also be a special baby booth, in charge of Mrs. Henry M. Hurd and Mrs. J. H. Hopkins.

During the last year, according to the report for the past twelve months submitted to the directors on the 8th inst., by Mrs. Henry M. Hurd, secretary of the home, the institution has been occupied by a total of eighty-one babies, of whom eleven are still there in the nursery. Seventy-six young mothers have been cared for at the home during that same period, many of them mere school girls, and some as young as 13 and 14 years of age.

Though the Florence Crittenton Home is licensed by and under the supervision of the State Board of Charities and the State Board of Control, it does not receive financial help from the State, city or county, and has no endowment, but is supported by voluntary contributions. Money-raising "drives" have never been held on behalf of the home, but every year the Woman's Work Auxiliary holds two bazaars, like that to be given next Thursday.

The inmates are taught sewing, cooking, nursing and the feeding and care of babies, and a training school for nurses in maternity work is maintained at the institution under the supervision of a staff of five physicians.

JEALOUS EVEN OF OWN CHILD.

Arrival of First Baby End of Happiness, Wife Says in Divorce Court.

"He has always been insanely jealous of our own children; he became jealous after the arrival of the first baby," Mrs. Etta J. Green testified yesterday in her successful suit for divorce from Absolam Green, to whom she was married twenty-two years ago.

Mrs. Green also told Judge Willis that her husband was so jealous of the attentions of a young man to their daughter that the young people finally eloped to Santa Ana and were married there.

MEXICO PARTY COMPLETE.

Unless some member of the Chamber of Commerce drops out of the excursion party to Mexico, there will be no more vacancies. The limit set on the number was 125 and reservations are full, according to the foreign trades department of the chamber.

On Thanksgiving Day the party will leave Los Angeles in a special Pullman train with baggage car and diner. It will stop first at Chihuahua, for four hours only. Another stop will be made at Agua Caliente, for three hours, and then the party will continue to Mexico City, where it is due to arrive the 29th inst. It is to stop at El Paso on the return journey, to begin December 5.

Los Angeles will receive widespread publicity through this unusual venture, as reporters for city and eastern newspapers and representatives of motion-picture syndicates will accompany the party. Data on the business and agricultural production of Los Angeles are being prepared in attractive pamphlets to be translated into Spanish and distributed in various cities on route for the information of publishers and business men of the sister republic.

Entertainment for Los Angeles's most representative manufacturers will be extended through various organizations and individuals.

ON VISIT FROM ENGLAND.

Mrs. Edwin Cawston of Surrey, Eng., reached Los Angeles yesterday with her two children and is at the home of her mother, Mrs. M. P. Doran, 672 South Bonnie Brae street, where she will remain for a visit of about six months.

A Hundred Thousand Dollars' Worth of Men's Shirts to be Thrown on the Market at Manufacturer's Cost

We have just taken over a manufacturer's entire stock of Men's fine Shirts at a price, in round figures, of One Hundred Thousand Dollars.

The purchase so far as we know is the largest of the kind ever made by any firm west of Chicago, and with one exception the largest ever made anywhere.

The price we paid represents a reduction of Thousands of Dollars from actual cost of production.

The manufacturer made this great sacrifice in return for a Hundred Thousand Dollars in cash.

The shirts will be sold to the public at less than present cost of manufacturing.

They will be distributed in the greatest campaign of Shirt Selling ever seen in Los Angeles. The word Greatest is used advisedly. We are not given to superlatives in expression and this is the first time in years that the word Greatest has appeared in an announcement by this firm.

Full particulars of the manner in which the shirts will be distributed will be announced, in a day or two, as soon as plans are completed.

In the meantime it can only be said that the prices will prove astounding—absolutely astounding.

Buzzing of Cabinet Bee and Legislature Organization Plans Enliven the Political Field.

POLITICS.

THE WATCHMAN.

[illegible] OF POLITICAL THOUGHT AND ACTION.

By the Sentry on His Beat.

The Cabinet bee, of course, is humming a lively tune in the bonnets of quite a group of notable Californians who desire to put President-elect Harding right in building the structure of his administration. This, I take it, is as it should be, for it is a State that came through with campaign sap and votes as we did, it is hardly to be expected that there should be a dearth of first-rate material for Cabinet advisers. Moreover, the new Republican executive could hardly ignore the compliment paid the State by President Wilson in putting Franklin K. Lane in a star position at his round table.

While the time is not quite ripe to put forward the name of a Los Angeles man for the Cabinet honor, I hear that friends of Albert Lindley of Stockton, a brother of Dr. Walter L. Lindley of Los Angeles, are boosting him for Secretary of Agriculture. Recent articles in the San Francisco Chronicle and Stockton Independent have put him in the running for this job. Mr. Lindley is the owner of a 1200-acre ranch in the delta section, near Stockton, and is described as a real "dirt farmer" with some practical ideas about a "back-to-the-soil" movement. The newspapers quoted credit him with having the backing of Will H. Hays, Republican national chairman, and Fred W. Upham, national treasurer. In the recent campaign Mr. Lindley served as collector of campaign funds in charge of the thirteen States west of the Rocky Mountains. He was formerly secretary of the State Board of Agriculture.

State Senator Charley Lyon, I am told, has been carded as temporary joint chairman of the Southern California delegation by a group of the delegation which foregathered last Friday at a luncheon given by the Association for the Betterment of Public Service. Assemblyman Henry W. Wright of Pasadena is the choice of the same group for Speaker of the next Assembly. Mr. Wright is also favored by Gov. Stephens. This programming, of course, is in advance of the regular caucus of the entire delegation, which will be held later. It merely indicates the drift of a coterie that has its own notions about how the line-up should be arranged, and it is hardly conclusive in view of the fact that the steering arrangement will follow the will of the coming caucus. Assemblyman Elmer P. Bromley's name has been posted for secretary of the delegation, with Vernon Hoagland, who was connected in the campaign with the Betterment Association, as assistant secretary.

I am told that a movement has been started among local Republicans to urge the retention of Col. Carter as Collector of Internal Revenue. The thought advanced is that this office should not figure as a political football, in view of the importance of keeping an efficient man continuously on the job. It so happens that the Collector of Internal Revenue comes into possession, in line of duty, of many private facts concerning the affairs of individuals and business concerns. While these facts are in possession of an officer of the government they are, of course, held inviolate. Those who favor Col. Carter's retention question the good sense of making them the property of a succession of collectors, as would be the case if this office were subject to a political turnover. They also contend that Col. Carter has filled the post with satisfaction to the community and has proved himself a tactful and reliable public officer.

Gossip connected with the impending change in the office of the Collector of Customs of Los Angeles names Mrs. Clara Shortridge Foltz as a possible successor of Collector Elliott. I am giving this as it comes to me. Mrs. Foltz herself assures me that she has no ambitions to fill public office, though several of her friends have lately insisted that her political services to the women of California entitle her to such a reward. They point out that her particular capabilities are admirably suited to this office, and I dare say her name will be suggested when the time arrives to fill the present Collector's official shoes. The idea of a woman handling this job, I must confess, has not heretofore occurred to me, but I see no special reason why it should not be, providing she has ability and business temperament.

Congressman-elect Van de Water tells me he is making a systematic study of Southern California legislative needs with a view to putting forward certain constructive measures in the next Congress. His selection by the Ninth District voters is one of the election results that apparently has given general satisfaction. He will go to Washington with a sound business viewpoint, intent on giving his best service, and, unless I miss my guess, will not waste the time of his constituency playing personal politics, which, as it happens, was Mr. Randall's pet weakness. Few men have entered public life carrying more confidence than the Ninth District has reposed in Mr. Van de Water. This fact, I have no doubt, will inspire him to do the kind of work that will fully justify his election to a seat in Congress.

Straws in the wind point to an organized movement to push Supervisor Dodge's name for Mayor of Los Angeles when the time rolls around, a few months hence, to select runners for that office. His close friends have dropped hints to me recently that such a possibility is by no means remote; and while I am not a party to the plot, so to speak, yet if Col. Dodge's big vote in the primary Supervisorial race is to be interpreted as a pointer to what he would do in the coming Mayoralty campaign, I'll say that he would make lively running for his opponents, whoever they may be. Doubtless he will soft-pedal the idea at this juncture, if his friends press him for a revelation of his inner thoughts, but a few months hence we may find him in a receptive mood. One thing upon which there is general agreement is that the City Hall headship invites the talents of a high-class business man.

Withered and Paralyzed Bodies Regain Normal Size and Use. Read ☞

Reduce or Increase Your Weight to Conform to Your Height

Twenty Years of Reshaping Bodies

By teaching a simple yet scientific method which establishes perfect co-ordination between the physical and mental forces, by teaching people how to assimilate their food properly. How to breathe correctly, how to bring the blood to all parts of the body. How to bring into action all muscle tissue without gymnastics or dieting. What has been done for victims of paralysis (see column to right) whose wasted and shrunken parts were developed to normal size and use, can more readily be done for those who are in an ordinary condition of health. If those, once unfortunates can, through my teaching, become strong of body, regain the use of their paralyzed parts, surely you can do what they did in a shorter space of time.

Without gymnastics or diet these reductions and increases in weight were made by persons under my teachings:

REDUCTIONS

BEFORE		AFTER	Time
Height 5 ft. 4 in.	Weight 190 lbs.	Weight 146 lbs.	4 Months
Height 5 ft. 2 in.	Weight 175 lbs.	Weight 133 lbs.	5 Months
Height 5 ft. 5 in.	Weight 205 lbs.	Weight 159 lbs.	6 Months
Height 5 ft. 1 in.	Weight 168 lbs.	Weight 130 lbs.	4 Months

INCREASES

BEFORE		AFTER
Height 5 ft. 7 in.	Weight 115 lbs.	Weight 130 lbs.	2 Months
Height 5 ft. 9 in.	Weight 129 lbs.	Weight 150 lbs.	3½ Months
Height 5 ft. 11 in.	Weight 142 lbs.	Weight 163 lbs.	4 Months
Height 5 ft. 2 in.	Weight 104 lbs.	Weight 115 lbs.	2 Months

Many of these pupils at the beginning of the lessons were out of proportion—some had more weight above the waist line, others were heavier below.

The equal distribution of the weight is accomplished through my system of teaching.

Twelve Lessons Completes a Course

You will have acquired the knowledge as it pertains to your particular needs. You will be able to execute instructions without fatigue, without any strain on your organs. Fortify yourself against disease; build up your physical forces—it spells peace, contentment and happiness.

Twenty Years of Success

as a physical educator teaching hundreds of the best families of Chicago, Pasadena and Los Angeles have been taught how to become strong—stay well—and always remain at normal weight.

Prominent physicians and laymen speak highly of the splendid results attained by my teachings. To those interested credentials will be shown that will positively remove any doubt they may have as to my skill and my ability.

Telephone or write for appointment. Will explain my method of teaching to anyone interested. No obligation incurred.

Telephone 60515 or Broadway 6300.

MILTON H. BERRY
PHYSICAL EDUCATOR
401 Merritt Bldg. 8th and Broadway

The names of the cases cited below will be given to anyone who is interested. These cases are reported for the purpose of showing that corrective methods of physical education when properly taught can develop or reduce any part or all parts of the body. The inactivity of a person who is paralyzed in certain muscles often means the accumulation fo fatty tissue in some other parts of the body.

In accomplishing the results indicated it was necessary first to remove the fatty tissue and build up the wasted muscle tissue. What victims of infantile, and other forms of paralysis can accomplish by corrective methods of physical education, others who are overweight and underweight can do even more readily and without gymnastics or vigorous exercises. Miss Murphy's and Mrs. Griffin's names are used because of the wide publicity given their cases.

COMPLETELY PARALYZED IN BOTH LOWER LIMBS FOR FOUR YEARS.

The case of Miss Lulu Murphy attracted the attention not only of physicians in Des Moines, but also many prominent physicians in the Middle West who stopped over at Des Moines for the purpose of examining her. All had diagnosed her case as one of transverse myeolitis in the lumbar region, and had pronounced her incurable. Nothing was left undone to try to aid her. Ten of the leading physicians of Des Moines thoroughly examined Miss Murphy in the presence of representatives of the press, and pronounced her absolutely incurable. At the time Miss Murphy came to my attention her limbs, both as to motion and sensation, were completely lost. After she had been under my instructions for four and one-half months, she left the Methodist Hospital walking as anyone else would walk.

Commenting on this case the Iowa Medical Journal, date of July 15, 1903, concluded with this paragraph:

"Whether the conditions will remain permanent or whether there may be a relapse is a question for time to decide. A month has passed since the patient was discharged. She has shown every indication of improvement, rather than of retrogression."

SCHOOL TEACHER MT. PLEASANT, IOWA, PARALYZED IN ONE LIMB THIRTY YEARS.

A well known school teacher residing at Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, had used crutches for thirty years on account of one of her limbs being paralysed as the result of infantile paralysis when a child. Under my teaching this limb was increased in size 2 1-2 inches below the knee and 4 1-2 inches above the knee. She had been under my instructions for five months. Instead of walking with crutches as she had done all those years, she was able to walk with the aid of an ordinary cane.

ENTIRE BODY PARALYZED AS A RESULT OF TYPHOID FEVER.

A prominent young lady of Des Moines, Iowa, attended by one of Des Moines' prominent physicians, after convalescing from typhoid fever, gradually developed paralysis first in her lower limbs, then in her arms and other parts of her body. The young lady was placed by her physician under my instructions and after three months, had entirely recovered.

INFANTILE PARALYSIS LEAVES CHILD WITH CROOKED BODY.

The thirteen year old daughter of a prominent Chicago architect was afflicted with infantile paralysis which later developed a lateral curvature of the spine. The muscles on one side of the body had become so weakened and wasted that in a regular position her body looked like the letter S. Her life lines were entirely out of alignment, one hip and one shoulder being higher than the other, and with her right limb paralysed it was with the greatest difficulty that she was able to move about. This was one of the most difficult cases ever undertaken in my experience. The greatest medical men of the eastern states had seen and examined this child. None gave any hope for her recovery. After two years under my instructions this young lady's body had developed into a straight, strong body, weighing thirty pounds more than she did before beginning the instructions. Today she is a talented literary woman.

MERCHANT OF DES MOINES RECOVERED HIS SPEECH AFTER ACCIDENT CAUSING PARALYSIS OF THROAT

A prominent Des Moines merchant met with an accident by being run over by an automobile, the wheels passing over and paralyzing the muscles of his throat. This caused him to lose his power of speech. He was also unable to take solid food and his neck had shrunk from 15 1-4 to 12 inches. After seven months under my instructions this gentleman, as most anyone who lived in Des Moines can testify, regained his power of speech and returned to normal condition. The muscles of his neck were developed to their normal size.

COMPOUND FRACTURE OF THE ANKLE.

The case of Mrs. Griffin was sent to me by the late Dr. J. B. Murphy, Chicago's famous surgeon. This case was reported in the leading medical journals and lectured upon by Dr. Murphy before numerous medical societies. Mrs. Griffin had a compound fracture of the ankle and after removing the plaster cast it was discovered that the entire motion of the ankle joint had been lost. This condition is known to the medical world as ankylosis. After four months of instruction Mrs. Griffin had regained the ferfect use of her ankle.

SEEKS HELP IN DISEASE FIGHT.

City Health Department Asks Reports from Public.

New Study Course in Schools Will Check Sickness.

September Births Came Close to Doubling Deaths.

Co-operation of the public in the work of the City Health Department is earnestly asked for in the department's monthly bulletin, published under the direction of Dr. L. M. Powers, health commissioner.

Communicable diseases always increase when the schools reopen in the fall, the bulletin says, and cases not reported are those which spread the contagions. Prompt reports to the health department, when suspected cases are not under the care of physicians, will greatly reduce the amount of sickness in the city by making preventive measures possible, it is declared.

HEALTH CLASSES LAUDED.

The bulletin lauds the fact that classes in health education have found their way into the schools, and says that because of the large number of foreigners here, and of persons who do not read newspapers, education of much of the public in health matters must be begun through the agency of the children.

Vital statistics compiled for September show that in that month the number of births here was 993, as against 579 deaths from all causes. Tuberculosis caused eighty-two deaths, with cancer next with sixty-three, and organic heart diseases third with sixty-two.

TESTS NEGATIVE.

Careful watch was kept here in September for possible introduction of the plague, and 239 rats, the acknowledged carriers, were tested, but all tests gave negative results.

The city's milk supply was safeguarded by inspection of 18,280 cattle during September, 1212 dairies and milk depots were examined; 1731 samples of milk were subjected to bacteriological examinations and 264 samples of milk and cream were subjected to chemical analysis.

Housing and sanitary inspections during the month resulted in orders for improvements in 2761 cases, and all of these orders, except four, were promptly obeyed. The four reluctant cases resulted in arrests and eventual compliance with the law.

PAPER DRIVE FOR ORPHANS TOMORROW.

Native Sons and Daughters to Continue Charity Which Was Begun Decade Ago.

For ten years the Native Sons and Native Daughters of the Golden West have been finding homes for homeless children, without regard to race, creed or color, and in that time nearly 2000 unfortunates have been given into the care of fathers and mothers.

To help finance this charity work a paper drive will be conducted for ten days, beginning tomorrow, when an opportunity will be afforded to get rid of all old newspapers, magazines and books.

Home finding for homeless children, as carried on by the Native Sons and Native Daughters, has the approval of the State Board of Charities, of social workers and of the many foster-parents and children who have been mutually benefited. No institutinal home is conducted, the purpose of this charitable work being to keep the children out of such institutions and to have them adopted into private homes, where they become one of the family and are protected and educated.

Every penny received is judiciously spent in the cause for which collected. Neither the child that is found a home nor the home which is supplied a child is taxed a cent.

It is for the benefit of these children that the Native Sons and Native Daughters are about to have a ten-day paper drive, in charge of a committee of which Irving Baxter is chairman and Mrs. Anna L. Adair is secretary. Boxes for the receipt of all old books, newspapers and magazines will be found in Pershing Square. If not convenient to take them there, tie in bundles, telephone 568396 and the committee will send for them.

PRESBYTERIANS MEET IN TWO CHURCHES.

Simultaneous meetings of the Presbyterian Social Union will be held tomorrow night at Immanuel Presbyterian and First Presbyterian churches, instead of at Immanuel only as first planned. Dr. Samuel S. Palmer, mderator of the General Assembly, will speak at both meetings and banquets will be served to those who make reservations tomorrow morning.

Dr. John Willis Baer will be toastmaster at Immanuel and Dr. Robert Freeman of Pasadena at the First Church. Rev. Joseph A. Vance of Detroit will also speak at both meetings. The program will be practically duplicated at the two banquets. The change in arrangements was made to accommodate the large number of persons who have indicated a desire to be present.

COMPLAINS OF FORCED TRIP EAST.

Husband Wants Divorce from Wife Who Got Order When He Did Not Pay.

The fact that a requisition was sometime ago obtained by Mrs. Anna C. Metcalf from the Governor of Minnesota for the return to Minneapolis of her husband, George F. Metcalf, formerly a well-to-do business man of that city, for failure to pay for the support of their adopted daughter, is set up as cruelty in Mr. Metcalf's divorce complaint, which was on trial before Judge Taft yesterday. The case will be resumed Tuesday.

In her cross-complaint Mrs. Metcalf, who came from Minneapolis to fight her husband's suit, declares there is another woman in the case. She sets out that this woman lived in Minneapolis and when Mr. Metcalf came here in 1917, she later arrived in Los Angeles and lives in the same neighborhood.

Mr. Metcalf obtained an interlocutory decree of divorce here last June. Mrs. Metcalf, who asserts she was taken by surprise by the action, had it set aside.

In 1913, Mrs. Metcalf sued for separate maintenance in the Minneapolis court and Mr. Metcalf asked for a divorce in a cross-complaint. The Minneapolis court found that his accusation of cruelty was not true and that he was guilty of desertion. Mrs. Metcalf was awarded $50 a month maintenance and $10 a month for the support of the child.

TO GIVE STAG DINNER.

Union League Club will Open New Quarters Next Week.

On Monday evening of next week the Union League Club will formally open its new clubhouse at 255 South Hill street with a stag dinner for business men. Several short addresses will be made, and the guests will then be taken for a tour of inspection of the building, formerly the Y.W.C.A. home, which is now being remodeled at a cost of about $40,000.

The Union League Club, already the largest political organization of its kind in the city, plans to increase its membership by 1500 by a campaign among Republicans here. When the campaign is concluded it will be the largest political club in the West.

Features of the remodeled building will be a Spanish court, a roof garden, many bedroom suites, dining-rooms, swimming pool, a gymnasium and a theater which will accommodate 500 persons.

BANDIT MURDER IDEA SPOILED; MAN ALIVE.

The possibility that Ivan Slavich of San Francisco had been murdered and his automobile stolen by the unidentified bandit who killed Constable H. E. Glidden of Lancaster and then was himself killed was eliminated yesterday when Sheriff Cline received information that Slavich was seen in San Jose after the car was stolen. The report to the Sheriff indicates that Slavich reported the theft to the police at San Jose and thereafter left for Chicago. Information received by the Sheriff yesterday failed to establish the identity of the bandit who was killed.

THE ESKIMO HAPPY IN HIS ICY HOME.

The Eskimo in his native haunts knows not toothache. Though he lives in an ice hut and pillows his head upon a block of ice that would cost $1.40 in Wichita, the unwashed citizen of the Arctic land does not catch cold in his molars. Stefansson, the Arctic explorer, has made some interesting observations of the dental health of the Eskimo, and this is what it comes to.

But as soon as the Eskimo takes to eating the food of civilization, his teeth begin to decay, bringing upon him the numerous ills that follow in the train of dental decay, the explorer finds.

The native of Santa Claus land would be more afraid of a tooth brush than of the most belligerent polar bear. Tooth paste, probably, would kill him. He has fine teeth, and consumes great quantities of meat. His teeth serve him for tearing and grinding the muscular bear and walrus flesh for many years. He never saw a dentist, and if you should tell him that a pain in the left shoulder calls for the immediate extraction of at least two teeth, he would lock you up in a hoosegow made of ice.

It seems a pity to break in upon this toothacheless world of the Far North with our civilization and our oil of cloves. What profiteth it an Eskimo to gain the whole world of Hegel, Kant and Einstein, and lose his own teeth? Is it doing the Eskimo justice to take him and his family out of their igloo, dress them up in broadcloth and Philippine lingerie, and feed them on cream puffs and damnation? Rather let us go to the Eskimos as seekers after light and let him preach to us the true theory of why this yellow man has white teeth, while this white man has yellow teeth.—[Wichita Eagle.

ONE MAN BUILT CASTLE.

Ferdinand Cheval, a postman in Hauterives, France, is the builder of one of the strangest palaces in the world. As a young man he saw a series of pictures in a book of oriental stories, and he was struck with ties of the oriental castles and palties of the Oriental castles and palaces, with their towers, minarets, highly ornamental windows, doorways and arches. He began gathering stones of various colors and types in his after-working hours, and to read books on the art of masonry. He also talked to workmen and watched them at their tasks.

He began to build in front of his little frame house a palace of weird design. He is now 80 years old, and his dream creation is complete. It has all the towers and turrets and arches and scrolls that he desired. He gathered millions of pebbles and stones, used 4000 bags of lime and cement and spent 67,500 working hours on it. It is eighty-five feet long and forty-five feet deep. The money used came in at first from his small savings, but as the palace grew tourists visited it in hundreds, and he obtained a goodly revenue from their hands. He hoped to be buried in it, and erected a monument in the main hall, but local authorities forbade his burial there for reasons of public health.—[Detroit News.

NEW BUILDINGS FOR DISCIPLES.

Christian Church Board in Program of Expansion.

Majority of Present Edifices Regarded Inadequate.

Conference of Young People Here Next Summer.

BY C. F. HAYDEN.

A program of expansion and advancement along special lines has been adopted by the State Board of the Christian Churches of Southern California. It includes the location of new churches, the erection of adequate church and Bible school buildings, evangelistic work within the churches and a broadening of the activities and scope of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor. It is a program well calculated to arouse the zeal of church workers and to interest the community at large.

The board as organized for the coming year is as follows: C. C. Chapman, president; J. G. Warren, vice-president; W. F. Holt, treasurer; R. W. Abberley, C. A. Cole, E. F. Daugherty, S. J. Chapman, R. M. Cooper, W. F. Richardson, E. O. Thomason, M. H. Fagan, J. B. Stoker, George P. Taubman, J. A. Schreck, C. A. Buffum and Joseph Crall.

The general plan of the organization is to divide the work into departments. Dr. C. R. Hudson, recently elected as secretary of the State board, will be the directing head of the activities. Dr. Hudson was for several years pastor of the Pomona Christian Church where he built up one of the largest and most efficient churches of the denomination in the State. Dr. Hudson brings to the field many years of experience in successful church work and the advantage of long and searching study of church methods and organization. Ambitious though the program is, Dr. Hudson has strong faith in its realization and he has the backing of an exceptionally strong and able board.

The work of the department of evangelism will be undertaken with the view of recreating the spirit of evangelism in the church membership. Special meetings and study conferences will be held to this end. The first conference will be held in Pomona for four days during the first week in February and plans for evangelism in the churches will be discussed. Evangelist Charles Reign Scoville and four co-workers will begin a series of meetings in Pomona at that time. Later Mr. Scoville and his team of evangelists will hold meetings at a place to be designated by the State board.

TO BUILD NEW CHURCHES.

The department of new congregations will survey the field, consider requests for new churches, consult with the superintendents' council and arrange for new congregations where they are needed. This branch of the work, as well as most others, have heretofore been handled directly by the board.

The department of church erection will play an important part in carrying out the program, for it is proposed to equip every church that is strategically located with buildings large enough and sufficiently equipped to function efficiently. Of the eighty-five churches in Southern California, Dr. Hudson says, only about half a dozen have adequate buildings. Not one of the Los Angeles edifices is regarded as adequate.

To provide for the large number of expensive plants that will be required it is proposed to create a building fund of gradually increasing size and for which $50,000 to $100,000 a year is to be appropriated. Dr. Hudson's plan is that the State board shall substantially assist in financing new buildings for churches which have been surveyed and found to be well located. As an example, if a church can raise $25,000, he believes the State organization should contribute $25,000 as a gift and $25,000 or more additional as a loan. In that way adequate church plants can be provided on a scale to not only enlist the enthusiastic support of its members, but to interest the communities in which they are located.

FOR YOUNG PEOPLE.

The department of religious education will endeavor to hook up the Bible school departments with the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor. Dr. Hudson regards this branch of the work as very important, as the young people receive their impressions in Bible school and find opportunity for expression in Christian Endeavor work, the two branches combining to fit young people for active church work and even leadership in church affairs. As a part of the work of this department a young people's conference will be held in Southern California next summer. It will last ten days, be attended by 300 to 500 delegates and its sessions will be under the leadership of national experts.

To further the work of the department of stewardship the board has joined with the northern board in employing George B. Bradford of Sacramento as regional stewardship secretary to develop the resources of congregations. Four-day institutes will be held in the various churches and an effort will be made to secure pledges of a definite proportion of income from all church members.

Other work by departments includes budgets and appropriations, missionary education and life recruits, publicity and literature.

BURBANK WILL VOTE ANYWAY.

Annexation Proposition to be Balloted on Tomorrow Despite Litigation.

The Burbank Board of Trustees, through B. B. Fisher, City Treasurer, announced yesterday that the town will go ahead and vote on annexation to Los Angeles on Tuesday of this week, despite the fact that a petition for an alternative writ of mandate to prevent the election is now pending before the Appellate Court. J. W. Fawkes is trying to halt the balloting on the ground that the advertisement thereof is technically faulty. The Trustees say they are willing to take a chance on their election being subsequently declared illegal, inasmuch as to postpone it now would be playing into the hands of the enemy. There will be a mass meeting on the subject at the Victory Theater, in Burbank, tomorrow night, at which William Mulholland and others will speak.

Good Judgment After Eating

Giving the Stomach the Alkaline Effect by a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet is Worth Remembering.

You cannot, as a rule, say in advance that this, that or the other food will cause indigestion. Experience has taught most people that even mince pie fits snugly at times while at others a glass of milk raises hobs with the stomach.

One good rule to follow is the preventative measure of taking one or two Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after meals. You thus avoid gassiness, sour stomach, heartburn and such distresses due to indigestion or dyspepsia. These tablets also help to digest the food by giving the stomach the alkaline effect to offset acidity; they relieve the distress when the mince pie or milk should be more than a match for your digestive powers. Get a 60 cent box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at any drug store and note how nicely they seem to calm the stomach when it feels all upset.—[Advertisement.

WEEK OF PRAYER TO START TOMORROW.

Y.M.C.A. HERE TAKING PART IN NATIONAL PROGRAM; SPEAKERS CHOSEN.

Dr. James A. Francis, pastor of the First Baptist Church will open the week of prayer service, which is to be observed in Los Angeles as a part of a national activity by the Y.M.C.A. tomorrow at noon, with an address on the value of prayer at the central Y.M.C.A. The meetings will be less than an hour in length with community singing, a short devotional period and a twenty-minute address.

The Y.M.C.A. has as its speakers for the week, the following ministers of Los Angeles: Dr. Carl S. Patton, Dr. J. W. Brougher, Dean William MacCormick, Dr. Herbert Booth Smith and Dr. E. E. Helms. The presiding officers for the meetings are to be Dr. Charles A. Warmer, Harry O. Hill, M. A. Hollabaugh, Ralph Atkinson, B. B. Wilcox and John W. Hamilton.

Special music for the entire week is being provided by L. C. Dodelan, choir leader and a number of singers from local churches. Robert R. Harkness, writer of sacred songs and accompanist of the late Charles M. Alexander, evangelist, will assist in this program.

At the University of Southern California a special series of meetings will be held under the direction of J. W. McGinnis, executive secretary of the student Y.M.C.A. At the East Ninth street, colored branch, an all-night prayer meeting is planned to close the series of meetings that will take place in the evenings throughout the week. The meetings will be addressed by seven of the best-known colored ministers of the city.

SEARCH FOR WOMAN.

Officers Hunt House Maid Who Vanished Two Weeks Ago.

Police detectives and investigators from the District Attorney's office yesterday began a search of the city for Mrs. Bertha Ione Harrington, 35 years of age, who mysteriously disappeared two weeks ago from the home of W. A. King of 1001 Magnolia avenue, where she was employed as a maid. Investigations by the officers brought to light the fact that Mrs. Harrington was last seen at Second and Hill streets at about 9:15 a.m. October 31.

According to Mr. King Mrs. Harrington left his home to visit friends and never returned. She left all her clothing and belongings in his residence and said she intended to return the same night.

YORK PLAN.

a landlord has in- rent more than 25 per for the year previous, set up as his defense demanded by the "unreasonable, oppressive and unjust." The final decision as to what is a just rental is then placed in the hands of the court, which is given broad discretionary powers in fixing the rent, with the law setting as a standard that anything more than 25 per cent increase from year to year tends to show oppression.

(2.) Ejection of tenant is made costly and difficult under almost any circumstances.

(3.) Burden of proof that the tenant is objectionable, when summary eviction is sought by the landlord, is placed upon the landlord.

(4.) The tenant may make application for a stay up to nine months, and the judge may grant it, at his discretion, provided the tenant puts up the rent for the period in the proper form.

The New York plan is in effect from April 1, 1920, to April 1, 1922. Under it there have already been a number of appeals to the courts. The tenants have a strong association which employs a staff of attorneys and the landlords are similarly entrenched. As a rule the courts have held for moderate increases. In a number of cases the landlord who sought to double his rent has been allowed only 10 per cent more than was charged for the preceding year.

WISCONSIN PLAN.

The Wisconsin plan has resulted in the appointment of rent arbiters in the various cities, with a provision for an appeal on any ruling to the commission. The Milwaukee arbiter, W. H. Bender, has reduced rents in forty-four cases submitted to him and has made informal and satisfactory adjustments in scores of other cases.

By contrast with some of the trebled and quadrupled rents in Los Angeles, it is worth noting that the most extreme reduction which the Wisconsin arbiter has made was to cut a $75 demand down to a $35 rental on property which had been bringing $30 a month for the previous year. The average of excess rent demanded in all the cases formally passed upon in Milwaukee has only been $12. There have been some sky-rocketing cases, as in that of the man who demanded $75 for a place, which the arbiter judged to be worth $35, but in other cases the increases in excess of what was judged to be fair have been so slight that the average throughout the cases submitted has shown only the $12 excess referred to.

There are those who plan to put still more teeth into the Wisconsin plan. These changes are primarily for the purpose of eliminating the unfairness which can now be worked against the tenant who appeals to the arbiter and wins, and then, by way of punishment from his landlord, is told to get out. The revisions will probably make it possible for the tenant who successfully appeals to the arbiter against an extortionate demand to hold the premises for a period of a year.

MILLION VISIT BIG WOODS.

The automobile habit in Southern California has increased the number of visitors to the big woods in the Angeles Forest Reserve from 100,000 to posibly a million annually, in the opinion of Inspector Charlton, in charge of local forest reserves.

To accommodate these pleasure-seekers, the Forest Service, assisted financially by a number of local agencies, is continually opening up new camping sites. One of the most important of these, just thrown open to the public, is known as the Berry Flat camp site. It is three and a half miles above the mouth of San Gabriel Canyon. The Automobile Club of Southern California has contributed several thousand dollars for the fitting up of the place.

Four miles above this camp, on the North Fork of the San Gabriel, the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce has fitted up a camp and local automobile dealers have contributed to the establishment of a camp in the Bear Lake country.

Orange county authorities have established a camp in Trabuco Canyon, in the Cleveland Forest Reserve, and the Redlands Chamber of Commerce has opened a site in Mill Creek Canyon, at the control on the Bear Valley Road.

Wife Gets Back Her Diamonds but Loses Her Husband.

After raising money on the diamonds of his wife, Mrs. Hettie A. Hughes, to pay the expenses of a trip to San Francisco, Arthur L. Hughes subsequently wrote her a note on the back of one of his business cards, she testified in Judge Willis's court yesterday. She was granted a divorce.

The note read: "You may have your diamonds by calling on me. I have nothing against you, but I do not want you."

Later the diamonds were returned to Mrs. Hughes's attorney, it is stated.

Mrs. Hughes charged both desertion and cruelty. She was awarded alimony of $60 a month. Mr. Hughes earns a salary of $500 a month.

Venetian Glass

OUR assortment of Venetian glass is the most complete on the Pacific Coast. It was personally selected by Mr. G. F. Ghisi, in Murano, the little island birthplace of Venetian glass, across the laguna from Venice.

There is everything for the table—compotes, candy dishes and jars, candlesticks, fish bowls, water sets, flower centers, baskets, quaint trees of glass and vari-colored birds. Also complete sets in stem ware in colors of ametista, verdolino, cristallo-irise — in the quaint old Venetian shapes.

The perplexed Yuletide shopper finds here a notable assemblage of gift pieces that are unique, though in many cases of very moderate cost.

It is so satisfying to know of a place such as this, where one's gift requirements have been so delightfully anticipated.

Deep Unrest Among Mikado's People Considered Grave.

SAYS JAPANESE ARE NOW NEARLY PURE HOOLIGAN.

Woman Observer of Nipponese Trend of Thought for Many Years Past Views Situation as Serious.

ing produced heavily under the exploiting hand of Japan. Oil is being madly searched for and some of a very superior quality has been found. Timber, too, is paying its rich toll to the Land of the Rising Sun. It is literally streaming to the mainland coast, whence it is quickly taken to Japan."

ABOUT ATROCITIES.

Atrocities have been committed by the Japanese in Siberia, this witness avers, adding this description of the "milder, civilized methods:"

"First, the Japanese disarm the inhabitants, then they take possession of all the wells, all the houses, all the food and everything else. You must get their permission to leave a place. Perhaps you get it, but when you reach the next town the Japanese there do not honor it and you are sent back. Suppose a resident of Los Angeles wanted to go to Glendale and couldn't!

"One town held an election. The men who were elected disappeared. An innocent proclamation they had made was ordered revoked by the Japanese. When the Russians refused to revoke it and all stayed indoors for a couple of days, machine guns were placed at all the street corners and the inhabitants were ordered to come forth. If they did not, they were hunted like rats and bayoneted."

DAILY STRIKES.

Further light on the labor situation in Japan is furnished by a letter in evidence in the Superior Court from a Japanese firm in Kobe, offered in evidence in the Superior Court here a few days ago during a civil trial. The firm wrote with reference to a shipment of buttons:

"By the influence of world-wide democratic, or rather I.W.W. movements, laborers in this country got very uncontrollable. Idleness and strikes have been almost their daily routine doings, continuing even after the armistice of the war. Coupled with these, the financial stringency caused closing up and reorganization of factories, short supply of materials, of machines and tools, also lockouts of mills against strikes have been frequent, occurring up to last June since long ago. These hindrances choked up the channels of our collection of goods, of course on buttons, too, which have been entirely out of our control."

MUNITION PURCHASES.

Japan's activity in transporting Asia's minerals, timber and food to the land of the Rising Sun have led to statements that her former status as a country ill prepared for war, because of lack of raw materials, is rapidly being overturned. In her exploitation of Asia is seen a strengthening of the hands of the militarists, as well as those of business leaders.

Of even more direct significance, according to freely expressed opinion abroad, are Japan's purchases of war munitions in England and France, as disclosed in press dispatches.

Alarmist reports in reference to these munitions purchases have recently been circulated in England. So Baron Hashali, new Ambassador of the Mikado to the Court of St. James, was asked the other day if an armed clash between Japan and the United States is possible.

"Credits are unobtainable and war is impossible," was his reply.

But at virtually the same time, American newspapers were publishing statements that Japan was buying large quantities of shells, powder and other fighting materials from English and French makers, that Japan had placed orders for sixteen new war vessels, that more than a million dollars was to be spent for new fortifications on Tokio Bay and that other extensive naval and military expenditures were being made.

The Tokio fortification plans were announced a few weeks ago by Premier Hara to the Munitions Commission of Japan. At the same time the Premier stated that the Mikado's government was canvassing mines, railways and shipping lines, with a view to co-ordination and control in "the event of an emergency." So far as dispatches from Japan show, he did not indicate his opinion as to the probability of "an emergency" arising or as to its possible nature.

The sixteen war vessels were ordered as a part of a program calling for the completion of eight great battleships and eight huge battle cruisers by 1927, and for a large number of other craft.

Moreover, if various reliable witnesses are to be believed, Japan is spending large sums to build a wall of fortifications between the United States and the Philippines. Congressman Dyer, who recently made an extended trip to the Orient, stated last Thursday that continental America is being cut off rapidly from communication with the Philippines and all the Far East "by gigantic fortifications now being erected on the Caroline, Ladrone and Marshall islands, formerly owned by Germany, but awarded to Japan by the Peace Conference." He characterized the island of Yap, also in Japanese hands, as "the keystone of American trade in the Pacific."

There is, however, more or less general agreement on the part of competent people who have been on the ground that Japan does not want war now, that she is apparently in no condition to engage in hostilities and that her military leanings hold no immediate danger. But there is sharp division of opinion on the matter of her preparations. Mr. Vanderlip brought back from the Mikado's country a reassuring message, an assurance of peace. But his observations are attacked on the ground that his visit was carefully stage-managed by the Japanese, that he saw and heard precisely what they intended he should see and hear and that real conditions in some cases escaped him.

WORSHIP OF SWORD.

It is pointed out that the Japanese as a people have for centuries worshiped the cult of the sword, have honored the samauri and have extolled the bloody code of the fighting man. And they have not changed their mental traits so easily as they have shed native for Western dress, it is asserted. Theirs, according to men who disagree with Mr. Vanderlip, is the best disciplined army in the world, beside their worship of militarism that of Germany pales, and symptoms of revolt against army control are all on the surface and tolerated partly to conceal the empire's real purposes and hopes.

Further, it is stated that the country's leaders do not forget that Japan's really powerful position today has been won entirely by the sword — her wars with China and Russia and the prestige they gave. When the Mikado entered each of these conflicts, the rest of the world believed his course was highly dangerous for his nation. But Japan had prepared carefully and calculated her chances, and when she struck it was with an assurance of success that she realized, if others did not.

More preparation now is going on, say those who mistrust the "Prussians of the East," and when Japan is strong enough, when Asia has been far enough exploited, whenever the Mikado's advisers can see the chances of success on their side, they will take up the sword again.

This is difficult for many people to believe. But not all Americans credited, in 1913, the fact that Germany for forty years had steadily prepared to crush France, England and Russia.

The comparatively quiet reception given by Japan to the California alien land law, just passed by a smashing majority at the polls, has not caused any change of front by those who assert there is danger in the Nipponese situation. It is pointed out that Japan blustered and bluffed in 1913, when the original anti-Japanese land law was adopted in California. Then, after the law was a fact, Tokio calmed down at once. But there was no real relaxation of the effort to force full recognition of Japanese equality and opening of Japanese opportunity in the western world, and it is asserted that there will be no relaxation now.

The California law is only an incident, it is declared, and the same battle for Japanese expansion will be fought wherever another issue arises. Question seems to exist only as to when, if ever, the battle will be taken from the field of diplomacy to that of arms.

In view of the freedom with which Japanese hostility, military preparations and other elements of the situation were discussed before the California election, ground for gratification is seen in the vote on the anti-Japanese law. Aside from any question as to the merits of the measure, the wisdom of which is questionable, its purpose is widely recognized as just and its ratification at least nails down the incontrovertible fact that the people of this country are not in any degree overawed; that, fully alive to the uncertain elements in Japan's attitude, they have chosen to assert freely their lawful, sovereign rights.

In quite the same spirit, there are Americans in numbers who feel that, admitting the situation holds dangers, it is Japan that should stop, look and listen.

The United States, the most powerful nation on earth, has nothing to fear from any collision with any power.

Aged, Wrinkled Faces Easily Rejuvenated

An aged face is often only a mask to a comparatively youthful person. Beneath is a countenance young and fair to look upon. It's a simple matter to remove the mask. Ordinary mercolized wax, to be had at any drug store, gradually absorbs the worn-out surface skin; in a week or two the user has the loveliest pinky white complexion imaginable. An ounce of the wax usually is sufficient to complete the transformation. It is put on at night like cold cream and taken off in the morning with warm water.

This remarkable treatment is invariably effective, no matter how muddy, sallow or discolored the complexion. Freckles, moth-patches, liver spots, pimples, blackheads and other cutaneous blemishes, naturally vanish with the discarded skin.

To remove wrinkles and flabbiness, here is a recipe that cannot be too highly recommended: Powdered saxolite, one ounce; dissolved in witch hazel, one half pint. Use as a wash lotion.—[Advertisement.

OLD-TIME COLD CURE—DRINK TEA!

Get a small package of Hamburg Breast Tea at any pharmacy. Take a tablespoonful of this hamburg tea, put a cup of boiling water upon it, pour through a sieve and drink a teacupful at any time. It is the most effective way to break a cold and cure grip, as it opens the pores, relieving congestion. Also loosens the bowels, thus breaking a cold at once.

It is inexpensive and entirely vegetable, therefore harmless.—[Advertisement.

It's Easy to Put On Flesh

All you have to do if you are too thin and want to put on several pounds of solid "stay-there" flesh is to take a five-grain tablet of Blood-Iron Phosphate with each meal. This builds up the nervous system, enriches the blood and thus enables the vital organs to assimilate the flesh building, strength-making elements of your food which now largely go to waste. Folks who have tried it state they not only put on flesh but that it also almost invariably increases their strength, energy and endurance. You can get enough Blood-Iron tablets for a three weeks' treatment of the Sun Drug Co. or any other druggist for only $1.50 and it's so uniformly successful that your druggist, a man you know, is authorized to refund your money if you don't like it. Better get a package today and begin to get stronger and healthier, as well as better looking.

with the city electrician and the fire department, Detectives and Smith plan a against business and establishments which electrical work done by handy men and other mechanics instead of by competent electricians, thus exposing the plants to fire and the lives of hundreds of persons to danger. An inspection of apartment-houses will be included in the campaign. In a number of these the officers say they found that copper coins have been used in places of fuses, thus leaving the wiring no protection at all.

The evidence uncovered by the officers who investigated the Coast Envelope Company fire is said to show that a number of fuses used on the motors and in the general wiring were of what is known as the "refilled" type, containing wires much stronger than safety demands, with the result that they failed to "blow out" at critical times—a purpose for which they were designed. In addition to that, the wiring box in the basement, it is stated, shows that one of the fuses there was "bridged over" with a copper wire much stronger than needed, and in violation of the law. When the wire was "shorted" it burned out and one end of it struck the wire next to it, making an arc that melted the quarter-inch steel box and started the fire, the officers say.

GOVERNOR MAY DANCE.

Expected to Attend Guard Regiment's Ball Thanksgiving Eve.

Gov. Stephens is expected to attend the regimental dance to be given by the members of the Los Angeles Infantry regiment at the armory Thanksgiving Eve.

The event will mark the completion of the Los Angeles Infantry Regiment and its acceptance by the State and the War Department.

Preparations for the dance have been handled by a special committee of the advisory board, of which Capt. James C. Doorley of Co. L is the chairman.

SERVICES TOMORROW FOR RELIEF WORKER.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock at the First Christian Church at Eleventh and Hope streets for Mrs. Leonard G. Thompson, wife of the Rev. Leonard G. Thompson. Mrs. Thompson was active in relief organizations here, having been secretary for the Near East Relief, secretary for the Southern California Christian Sunday-schools, and the chairman of the executive committee of the Interdenominational Summer School of Missions. She was also a member of the Christian Woman's Board of Missions of Southern California.

ACTORS AND STRONG MEN WILL FIGHT.

Cinema Stars and Leaders Among Pugilists Going to Raise Christmas Funds.

A program with a genuine punch to it—in fact, a great many punches—will be the benefit entertainment to be given next Friday night in Trinity Auditorium when local lights of the cinema will engage in battle royal with stars of the pugilistic world in order to provide funds to give the poor kiddies of Los Angeles an honest-to-goodness Christmas dinner.

This all-star, knock-down-and-drag-out fight, which will include twenty-four rounds of boxing and ten rounds of comedy, will be given under the auspices and direction of the Southern California Child Welfare Service, an organization unexcelled in its efforts toward bringing joy and comfort to the needy children of the Southland.

Charley Murray, who will be master of ceremonies, says that there are to be no soporific preliminaries whatever, but that every number is to be a main event.

Among the cinema and ringside stars who will participate in the program will be Joe Rivers and Leach Cross, the latter promising to be as cross to Rivers as lies within his gentle nature. Tom Mix will engage in a mix-up with Kid McCoy and the affray will be no kidding affair. There will be no "Bull" in the tussle that will follow Tommy Ryan's flash of a red flag in Bull Montana's face and Young George will do his best to convince Bert Colima that he is not so youthful as his name implies.

Other bouts will be staged between Chris Jordan and Monty Wolgast, Dannie Edwards and Marshal Booker, Bobbie Dunn and Slim Summerville and Charley Dorety and Larry Semon. Tickets for the entertainment will be on sale by Bebe Daniels and Ruth Roland next Monday afternoon at the Alexandria Hotel and also at Dyas's sporting goods store.

MAYOR'S SECRETARY BACK.

KNOCKED BIBLE ABOUT.

Husband Would Not Read It, Says Wife, and is Granted Divorce.

Her husband knocked a copy of the Bible out of her hand when she tried to get him to read it in the hope that it would influence him to change his ways, Mrs. Edith Demille told Judge Willis yesterday in her testimony in a divorce suit against Paul Henri Demille.

"Get a divorce if you want to; go ahead with it. I am only human," Mr. Demille, a civil engineer, told his wife, she said.

The couple were married on June 11, 1917, when Mr. Demille was in the Army and located at Fort Bliss, Tex. Mrs. Demille says she soon received letters from friends which made her suspect that her husband's conduct was not all that it should be, and that she later verified some of the charges. She was granted her divorce.

STILL SEEK IDENTITY.

Think Lancaster Bandit May be Arizona Killer.

Sheriff Jack Harrington of Flagstaff, Ariz., wired Sheriff Cline yesterday asking for a description of the bandit slain near Lancaster Tuesday after he had shot Constable Glidden. He stated that Martin Schwab was murdered near that city on April 15, 1920, and robbed of a Chandler car. A reward of $2400 is offered for the arrest of the murderer in this case. The yellow car, however, that figured in the Lancaster shooting was an Oldsmobile.

William Bodirsky of the Hotel Marly, San Francisco, wired Sheriff Cline yesterday that he would be able to identify the army clothes of Ivan Slavich, owner of the repainted bandit car, as he was supply sergeant in the same company in the Army of which Slavich was a member.

Funeral services were held yesterday for Constable Glidden, whose body was cremated at Rosedale Crematory.

MUCH GOOD WOOD LEFT NEAR HERE.

Five Million is Value of Merchantable Cut Growing in Los Angeles Reserve.

More than 1,000,000,000 feet of merchantable timber, worth now about $5,000,000, is standing in the Angeles Forest Reserve, according to T. D. Woodley, assistant district forest ranger in charge of the reserve timber sales, who was in the city yesterday consulting with Supervisor Allen. The local reserve contains far more timber than the other two national forest segregations in Southern California, the Santa Barbara and Cleveland reserves having a stand of about 350,000,000 feet each.

It will continue to be the policy of the Forest Service to sell the bulk of the merchantable timber for local uses, and the heavier timber to the general commercial trade. The quantity and value of the timber in the reserve is increasing every year, says Mr. Woodley, because of the forestry department's conservation policy, which forbids the denuding of mountain sides and which permits the cutting of only ripe or overcrowded tracts.

Court May Give Early Decision in Raisin Case.

It is understood that early this week U. S. District Judge Bledsoe will deliver his opinion on the motion of the California Associated Raisin Company of Fresno to dismiss the bill of complaint pending against the corporation charging violation of the Lever law. The opinion is now being prepared, and is expected not later than Tuesday.

The original complaint set out asserted violations of this law, but on a hearing to show cause why the company should not be enjoined from further operations, a stipulation was agreed to by the terms of which the corporation was allowed to proceed during the raisin grape season under agreement to change its plan of operations to conform with suggestions by Special Asst. Atty.-Gen. Atwood.

With these changes made, the California Associated Raisin Company asked that the bill be dismissed. Long arguments were heard, and it is with this motion that the decision of Judge Bledsoe will have to deal.

Former Minister, Negro, Becomes Habitual Thief.

Burglary assumed the nature of a habit for Clarence Adams, a negro and a former minister, it was disclosed yesterday in Judge Craig's court when he appeared for sentence. Adams pleaded guilty to stealing a typewriter from the office of the Western Malleable Casting Company.

Evidence showed that later he returned and carried away a ton of iron. Pig by pig, it was stated, he carried it away on different nights until he had acquired the ton, which he is said to have sold.

Judge Craig sentenced the defendant to San Quentin for from one to fifteen years.

Horses that Carry Bedouins.

Have you any musical friends? If you have—the real kind—I want to have them play for you the nocturnes of Chopin, so that you can tell me what happens in their twilight. They are the pallid, patient twilights of a northern land, perpetuating themselves in time prodigiously like the six months' polar day which they adjoin. Yet despite their geographical isolation, there is sometimes the fragrance of tropic flowers there, the spreading leaves of equatorial plants of an antique decorativeness, and the flash of fine Moorish blades. Sometimes that varitinted constellation called the Southern Cross shines in upon them and the nights have a purple blackness. And occasionally one hears—far off—the swift beat of horses' feet, not horses of the North, but such as carry white-draped Bedouins across the deserts of Arabia.—[Edna Worthley Underwood in "Letters from a Prairie Garden."

EIGHT WILL BE HELPED.

Local Disabled War Veterans Listed for Vocational Education.

Eight disabled war veterans in the district of the Los Angeles office of the Federal Board for Vocational Education have been approved for training under the Rehabilitation Act. By their reporting at the board's offices in the Wilcox Annex Building, at Second and Spring streets, arrangements will be made whereby they will receive a minimum of $100 per month for support while they are learning new professions or trades. The men whose applications have been approved are Frederick C. Acres, Harry E. Chaves, William T. Green, John McNellis, Robert A. Parker, Carl I. Meeker, Charles H. Shertzer and James H. Williams.

MUST PAY AUTO VICTIM.

Woman Loses in Damage Suit Brought by Man Who was Injured.

A jury in Judge Wood's court yesterday brought in a verdict of $2000 in favor of the plaintiff, Harold Frater, in his $22,370 damage suit against Mrs. Alice Belle Munn, for injuries the former received, growing out of an automobile accident near Duarte on February 7, last. Mr Frater is a telegraph operator. He charged Mrs. Munn was negligent. She set up as a defense that he was to blame for the accident.

SMALL BUSINESS.

Attempt to Explain Infinitesimal Measurements.

What does the average person visualize by the term a ten-thousandth part of an inch? Said person might smile and say there is no such thing. It would not be missed off the end of a yard stick, might be the contention. Yet as certain as little drops of water go toward the making of an ocean, so would an inch disappear entirely if one continued to chop ten-thousandth parts of it away.

The same would be true if one were to divide the ten-thousandth part by ten and make it a one-hundred-thousandth part of an inch. To most minds an inch is small enough and any smaller dimension is hardly to be reckoned with. Yet as small as it is, if it were possible to slice an inch into one-hundred thousand parts and slice off each part as rapidly as one can deal playing card from off a deck, which is about four a second, six hours, fifty-six minutes, and forty seconds would elapse before the last one hundred-thousandth of an inch was sliced off.

In order that one may get a better idea of a hundred-thousandth part of an inch, or even a ten-thousandth part of an inch, let one place one's imagination to the eye piece of a compound microscope, under which there is a filament of some substance a ten-thousandth of an inch in diameter, side by side with a human hair of average size. Seen through the ordinary microscope, the hair would look about the size of a lead pencil. Yet the ten-thousandth of an inch filament, magnified to the same extent, would appear about as thick as the human hair.

There are two firms, one in this country, and one in Sweden, that make standard blocks of various lengths which they guarantee to be of exact size to within a few millionths of an inch. Either firm will upon special order, furnish blocks within one-millionth of an inch variation from true size.—[Alfred Longville in Scientific American.

CHEAPER TO MOTOR THAN EAT.

The motorist gets more for his dollar than he did in 1914. Take it from the cold, merciless statistics of the United States Department of Labor that dinner for the family takes 170 per cent more from the motorist's bank roll than in 1914.

He remembers the 253 per cent increase in the cost of clothes worn by his family and suddenly recalls that he paid 231 per cent more for the last household furnishings than he did six years ago. With these memories still rankling, this motorist goes to the garage and orders a new casing and he finds the price is the same as he paid last year.

"Wazzamatter, haven't tires gone up?"

"Only 37 per cent since 1914," replies the garage man, "but at that they're 33 per cent cheaper than in 1910."

As the car rolled smoothly out on the highway he turns to his wife, who from the seat beside him is doing most of the driving without handling the wheel:

"Doggone, Emily, motoring is cheaper than eating."—[Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Charge Three Made Assault With Weapons.

Miller Cooper, A. M. Cooper and Frank Dewar, the latter two deputy sheriffs, were indicted by the grand jury yesterday on charges of assault with a deadly weapon upon Arthur Valentine, a negro, on May 31 last. The indictment charges that the Cooper brothers had a controversy with Valentine and others on the beach near Topanga Canyon and that the Coopers ordered the negroes off what they said was their land and part of the Cooper ranch.

In a fight that is said to have followed the three are charged with using two loaded rifles, a shotgun, a revolver and a sap stick, or police club.

The County Civil Service Commission had previously heard the facts and exonerated the three concerned. The indictment was returned before Judge Willis, who fixed bail at $500 each.

Dependability

costs today demand the same quality in men and tools alike—dependability. Delays due to inexperience or defective equipment cannot be risked. Wages and material prices are such that each crew must know to a certainty that top efficiency can be kept up until the bit strikes pay.

Maximum results in drilling depend on one most important factor—the greatest possible flow of power from engine to band wheel. It is in the certain delivery of such power that O & G Inner-Locked Belts have become so favorably known throughout the Oil country, as well as in serving as a guarantee against all commonly known belting troubles.

O & G Inner-Locked Belts are free from troublesome "come and go" and keep everlastingly on the job. By reason of their trouble-proof construction, O & G Inner-Locked Belts cannot separate as some belts do. The inner plies are locked both within and to the outer casing which completely covers them. It is this inner and inter-locking which holds the fabric firm in every inch of belt. This, together with the formula of Mineral Compound which impregnates every particle of the belt, is the main reason for the rugged strength and long life which have made O & G Inner-Locked Belts famous.

The rough and ready business of oil drilling gives no chance to "nurse" equipment. Unlike the clean, dry engine and machine rooms of modern factories, Oil drilling is done practically out of doors. Belts must run under blistering sun, cold winds, hard rains, sleet, snow and mud. In plain words, they have to stand the "gaff."

Throughout the Oil country, wherever drilling records are known, the belts that have never failed to deliver the greatest horsepower, the longest service, carry the heaviest loads easiest and always run uniform, regardless of hard condition, are O & G Inner-Locked Belts—the standard of dependability.

Increasing Interest Marks the Final Day of the Six-Days' Garment Sale

—We are bringing to a close, Monday, the most notable garment sale that the Third Floor has ever presented.

—And, if low pricing on much-to-be-desired merchandise is a criterion the final day of this garment event should prove fully as important as that remarkable first day in which we were unable to supply the needs of all who desired to participate in the savings.

Two Great Garment Groups
$23.75 & $34.75

Suits
Coats
Dresses

Suits
Coats
Dresses

—ded in each group garments of such a surprising character that active selling should begin with the opening of the store.

—Hundreds of garments are here—garments of the better sort—garments priced in such a way that women everywhere, within call of this announcement, should be interested.

Suits at $23.75

—A surprising lot of new fall models, serge, silvertone, velours, mannish mixtures and suited cloths.

—Belted, rippled, flared, plain tailored and straight line suits with plain and fancy silk linings.

—Sizes are 14 to 44. Several higher priced lines grouped for a surprising feature at $23.75.

New Dresses at $23.75

—We've added many more new fall dresses for this final day of the garment event.

—It will take pages of description to give all the details. Suffice to say that here are dresses of serge, satin, tricotines, taffetas, embroidered, beaded, frilled, tucked and lace trimmed.

—The demanded shades are included in sizes 14 to 44. Away less at $23.75.

The Coats at $23.75

—Have been substantially underpriced. Several lines grouped from regular stock and lowered.

—Silvertones, velours and plush, in full or short length models. Some full silk lined. Others partly lined.

—Belted models, flared, embroidered and those with large collars.

—New shades are included as well as blue, black and brown.

Notable Grouping of Coats, Suits, Dresses at $34.75

—Space is too limited to cover all the details regarding these garments. All are greatly underpriced—some from regular stock coupled with those from Eastern purchases.

Coats at $34.75

—Are of silvertone, Bolivia, plush, velour and broadcloth, full length, short or three-quarter length.

—Full and part lined.

—Some collars embroidered, others with rows of stitching. Browns, navy, Bolivia, Nanking, as well as black, full size range, 14 to 44.

Wonder Dresses, $34.75

—Surprising part of it is that such dresses can be offered for so little. Tricotines, taffeta, satin, kitten's ear crepe in the demanded shades. Here are beaded, embroidered, frilled, tucked and puffed blouse back and straight-line models. Prices have been remarkably lowered. Sizes 14 to 44.

The Suits at $34.75

—Garments of a higher order.

—Suits of tricotines, serge, velour and mannish mixtures. In belted, flared, pleated, plain and semi-tailored and braid trimmed models as well as embroidered and fur trimmed garments.

"Fine Feathers Make Fine—Hats," We Believe You'll Agree When You Behold These

Ostrich-Trimmed Hats at $12.50

—Feather trimmings are in more ways than one outstanding features of this season's smart hats; and this group of hand-made models we are showing on Monday are charming examples of what very attractive creations may be evolved from rich Lyon's velvet, satin, maline and metallic cloths combined variously and effectively with fluffy ostrich plumage.

These Are Copies of French and Eastern Pattern Hats

—They are especially smart for afternoon and evening wear; for theater or dinner dress-occasions.

—The shapes vary all the way from clever little turbans and off-face effects, to large portrait hats with gracefully drooping brims.

—The ostrich is used in numerous interesting ways; for instance, the plumes are draped at the left or right of the brim; or their long silky fronds form a fringe which give an attractively soft line to the brim-edge.

Many New Shades Are Represented

—In both light and dark effects, including black. The plumage either matches the body tone of the hat, or [illegible] suitably with it.

Odd Rugs and Carpets

"The Boy Who Reads is Father to the Man Who Succeeds"

—It is because of a firm belief in this adage that many Publishers, Booksellers and Public Libraries have co-operated in the inauguration of —which will be observed in Los Angeles as elsewhere from November 15 to 20.

Children's Book Week

—We want mothers, fathers and teachers—every one in fact who is interested in children and believes in them—to help spread the slogan

"More Books In the Home"

—Have you ever stopped to think of the spirit of service that lies in books, and how important it is that an early love of them should be inculcated in your children?

—First of all, and perhaps most appealing from the standpoint of the child, there's the absorbing interest in the story itself—the delight of finding out "what happens next"—the joy of following Alice into Wonderland, or the Swiss Family Robinson through their various thrilling adventures. The stimulus to the child's imagination—the highest of the mind's three faculties—can hardly be overestimated.

Then There's an Ethical Value—

—in such books as "Bailey's Hero Stories" or Mrs. Muloch's "Little Lame Prince." Children love such books for the stories themselves, but who can tell how far their ideals of patience, unselfishness and courage have been instilled into childish hearts?

Animal Stories

—so beloved by little folks, incidentally teach love for dumb beasts and an interest in their habits. Books involving classic mythology—such as "Stories of the Wagner Operas" (Wheelock) have a decided cultural value; while at the same time they are very popular with children for the sake of the fairy stories involved.

Now Is the Time—

—to begin a library for your child; and so provide him with a worthwhile interest which shall continue throughout his life—Teach him to take care of his books, and when he is old, he will not depart from it."

A Graduate of the Los Angeles Public Library

—will be at The Broadway during the first three days of Children's Book Week—on November 15, 16 and 17—in order to give expert advice on choosing books for children of all ages and varying tastes. For quick and easy selection by those interested, there will also be found in the book section during that week, books especially recommended by the Los Angeles Public Library as being suitable for children.

The Broadway is Prepared to Do Its Part —through its well filled stock of juvenile books at prices that are exceedingly moderate. We and all other organizations interested in Children's Book Week, invite your co-operation.

MUSICAL.

FIRST POP CONCERT.

PHILHARMONIC WILL PLAY COLORFUL PROGRAM.

The first popular concert will be played by the Philharmonic Orchestra this afternoon at Philharmonic Auditorium. Walter Henry Rothwell will conduct.

The program contains both new and favored numbers. The "Rakoczy" march from "The Damnation of Faust," by Berlioz, Scenes de Battel, a brilliant suite of ballet gems, by Glazounow, the two solo numbers to be sung by Lillia Snelling—"Amour Viens Aider," from the opera "Sampson and Delilah," and the Page's Song, from "Les Huguenots;" Dubois' entra Acte from "Rigaudom," a light and charming orchestral number; "Serenade a Mabel," by Godard; "Cosatschoque," by Dargomijsky, the Russian composer, and the repetition of Wagner's Prelude to "The Mastersingers."

Long Beach Festival.

Music Week in Long Beach will begin tomorrow, it is announced.

A committee of the leading musicians are working with the local community service organization in the endeavor to focus the attention of the people of Long Beach on music for the entire week. The plan is part of the program of the national community service organization along the line of the development of community music in the broader sense.

Alexander Stewart, special representative for community music in California, has been assigned to Long Beach temporarily by the National Community Service to assist.

There will be programs every day during music week, commencing Monday evening with a community sing in the municipal auditorium, in which the community chorus, L. D. Frey, director, will participate.

Tuesday evening the music department of the public schools, Joseph Leeder, supervisor, will give a demonstration of the class work in music in the Long Beach schools.

Wednesday and Saturday evenings concert programs will be presented in the auditorium by the Choral-Oratorio Society, Clarence Krinbill, director; the Women's Lyric Club, Mrs. Emma Green, director; the Musical Art Club, Conrad Mills, director; the Women's Music Study Club, Mrs. Claude Z. Anderson, president, and the community orchestra, L. D McCoy, director.

Verna Mae Abbott,
Clever 4-year-old toe dancer.

Thursday evening patriotic music will be featured under the direction of the various patriotic organizations of the city, one of the events to be an old fiddlers' contest.

Sunday, at 4 p.m., in the auditorium, there will be a community festival sing of the old hymns of the church, under the direction of Clarence Krinbill, in which the congregations of the various churches will unite.

Monday evening, November 22, the music memory contest will take place, with the performance of the twenty-one selected compositions, with which the Long Beach people have been asked to familiarize themselves during the past three weeks. Prizes are offered to those who correctly name the compositions and composers.

The Long Beach Municipal Band, Osa Foster, director, will give special concert programs, featuring the music memory contest selections during the week. There will be an organ recital in various churches every day at 3:30 p.m., given by prominent organists of the city.

A census of the musical resources of Long Beach is being taken in which answers to 150 questions regarding musical development in the community are being gathered.

Miss Burch Soloist.

Miss Mabelle Burch, the young coloratura soprano, who has sung with success to Grauman's audiences will make her last appearance for some time in Los Angeles today, filling her second engagement as soloist with Grauman's Orchestra. Sid Grauman presented Miss Burch several weeks ago with the orchestra at a Sunday morning concert, and at that time she received an ovation. Miss Burch is now in even better voice than on her former appearance.

The orchestral program includes "Tannheuser" overture, the Andante from Tschaikowsky's Fourth Symphony, Godard's Canzonetta, selections from Offenbach's opera, the "Love Tales of Hoffman," and "Southern Roses."

Mischa Guterson will conduct.

Pasquale Amato,
Italian baritone, singing on Philharmonic course.

Organ Program.

C. Albert Tufts, foremost local concert organist, announces among other organ dates, a complimentary recital at the Second Church of Christ, Scientist, Thursday evening. Among the novelties to be played will be several unique Christmas carols and noels. He also promises the Third Choral of Cesar Franck, which is probably one of the most transcendental of all modern organ compositions.

Following is the program:

"Alla Handel" (Fugue)	Guilmant
Allegro	Handel
Romance	Sibelius
Gavotte in E	Bach
Choral in A minor	C. Franck
"Three Kings"	Tufts
"Musette"	Mailly
"Jesu Bambino"	Yon
Marche Joyeuse	Tufts

Violinist in Recital.

Ruth Hall, violinist, gave the first of a series of recitals at her studio last Sunday afternoon. Miss Hall is a pupil of Christian Timner, and was last heard in public at a concert with Clarence Eddly at Stanford Hall Palo Alto.

Abbott School of Dancing.

La Verna Abbott, the 4-year-old daughter of the directress of the Abbott School of Dancing, performed a toe dance at a recent performance given by the school at 845 South Figueroa street. The small children of the school are rehearsing daily for a program of ballet dancing, to be given soon.

In Concert at Ebell.

Nell Lockwood, contralto, and Homer Grunn, pianist, will present a program at the Ebell Club tomorrow afternoon. This will consist of Indian songs and piano compositions, some of which have been written by the pianist.

Hollywood Community Chorus.

Ruth Bullard, violinist, who has appeared in concert with Sembrich, will be the soloist at the meeting of the Hollywood Community Chorus, at the high school Tuesday evening. Hugo Kirchoffer will conduct.

MacDowell Club.

The MacDowell Club of Allied Arts, will meet the 22nd inst., at the Ansonia Apartments. The program will include the showing of art exhibits and various musical selections. Ella Buchanan, sculptres, will show several of her works. Edward Weston, well known for his pictorial photography has arranged a review of prints, Milton Munroe, specialist in Batik work, has some samples of his art placed at the disposal of the club for the evening.

The musical program will offer F. Manon Ralston, composer and pianist, who belonged to the piano department of Wellesley College. Miss Ralston has spent three summers at Peterborough, the former home of MacDowell, where she wrote some of the piano composition. She will play for the club.

Anthony E. Carlson, basso, is to sing several of his own songs. Cello solos by Paul Wismer, will complete the program.

The date selected for this meeting has a double significance to the lovers of MacDowell and of American art, November 22, being the birthday of Mrs. Edward MacDowell.

Van Den Berg Recital.

Brahm van den Berg, pianist, will appear at the Glendale High School, Wednesday, in response to many requests by the students with whom he is a favorite. In addition to the program which he has prepared he will improvise for them upon a suggested theme.

Mr. van den Berg has also started his pupils' criticism class, which meets once a month at his studio. His program at Glendale will include:

Ballade (G Minor)	Chopin
"The Indian" (An Impression)	Stockhoff
Polka	Rachmaninoff
"The Eagle"	MacDowell
Nocturne No. 2	Chopin
"La Campanella"	Liszt
"Serenade"	Blanchet
"Concert Etude" in G Flat	Moszkowsky

Philharmonic Concert.

The Philharmonic Orchestra, Walter Henry Rothwell, conductor, will give its first popular concert this season tomorrow afternoon at Philharmonic Auditorium.

The program selected by Mr. Rothwell embraces popular numbers and two new compositions, at least they have not been played by the Philharmonic, Glazounow's Scenes de Ballet, and Dubois's Xaviere, Entr'acte Rigaudon. Godard's "Serenade a Mabel" from Scenes Ecossaises, will give Henri De Busecher, who created such favorable comment at the first symphony concerts by his remarkable mastery of the oboe, an opportunity to further display his ability.

Mme. Lillia Snelling, contralto, will be the soloist. Her four years as one of the leading contraltos of the Metropolitan Grand Opera Company, New York, and her several tours as soloist with the St. Louis, Boston and Philadelphia orchestras are an assurance of her vocal qualifications, it is believed.

FORMS PRIVATE CLASS.

Vincent Jones, head of the harmony department of the U.S.C. college of music, is having—in addition to his class at the college—a private class largely composed of teachers, who are studying the Alchin Harmony Method. Jones is also on the faculty of the California university, extension division.

WIN LONDON ART LOVERS.

Louisville with Gabrilowitsch's Orchestra, and received some of the best notices of his career. Of him the Westminster Gazette says in part: "It was not necessary to go further than his playing of the great 'Passacaglia' by Bach to realize that his performances were remarkable alike for the grasp of structure which they showed and the clearness with which all the details were brought out, as well as for the extraordinary volume of sound which he extracted without losing the quality of his tone."

Without exception the New York, Louisville and Toledo critics have commented upon Donohue's playing with something more than a considerate interest, and Krehbiel has spoken of him as one of the most interesting young pianists now before the public. He will play here before his return to New York in January.

Of the difficulties confronting the American musician, Donohue, with the majority, regrets the commercial element in his art. That a musician must have something more than talent to "get on" here seems undoubtable and while Donohue calls himself "lucky" and has an undeniable Celtic charm and lightness of humor, he is no exception to the oft-repeated rule of the American instrumentalists—"we haven't quite a fair chance."

Maud Reeves Barnard,
Who is to sing at Gamut Club Wednesday night.

GAMUT CLUB SOCIAL.

Bel Canto Club to Present Choral Numbers.

The Gamut Club will present its monthly program of entertainment next Wednesday evening. The event will be for members and their guests, and will be held in the club auditorium.

Joseph Dupuy, conductor of the Orpheus Vlub and a member of the board of directors of the Gamut Club, will be in charge of the program, given by the Bel Canto Club, an organization of young women singers.

The Bel Canto Club with a membership of forty has been singing for three years. It is similar in its aims and efforts to the Orpheus Club.

The program Wednesday night will consist of twelve numbers, including solos, quartets and ensembles. The club will be assisted by Maud Reeves-Barnard, mezzo-soprano, and Paul Wirthschaft, baritone. May Orcott, who has delighted on previous occasions, will be accompanist.

The Gamut Club is making a serious effort to popularize higher forms of music, being particularly interested in choral work.

SINGER IS IDEAL CONSERVATIVE.

Theo Karle Tells of Sacrifices That the Tenor Voice Demands.

BY EDWIN SCHALLERT.

It is rather universally granted that the use of the editorial "we" is a sign of a highly intelligent conservatism. The responsibility implied so much greater than when one employs the arrogant and, at the same time, apologetic "I." Nor is it easy to call a bluff when it suggests the support of mass, rather than doubtful serenity of isolation.

Theo Karle, the tenor, who is to be soloist next Sunday, with the Lyric Club, isn't the kind of musical artist whose sincerity you would ever doubt for a moment. He wouldn't be guilty of bluffing himself, let alone anyone else. He's earned his way to the front among American recitalists by dint of unflinching perseverance. He's gained increasing fame in opera and concert the past seven years, and he started with only eight tones in his voice. Yet—

Theo Karle,
Soloist with Women's Lyric Club.

He is the one singer I have ever met who persistently, during a conversation extending over a period of an hour and a half never referred to himself professionally as "I" once. It was always a "we." First I thought he was talking about his wife, who was a gifted pianist, and himself; then I thought it was his accompanist he was including. And finally—

After I had seen him furtively wipe off his spoon on his napkin (in the Alexandria grill,) and noticed the wedding ring on his finger, and heard him mention that he was born in Perry, Iowa, I decided—in view of the remarkably convincing opinions he voiced regarding music—that here at last was the ideal conservative. And I resolved, besides, that there are two things in the world which should go hand in hand and they are conservatism and tenor singing.

The reason will not be broadly apparent until I explain, perhaps. Or rather until Mr. Karle explains, which he does in a very logical and practical manner, much as a banker would talk about his business affairs.

The crux of his explanation is that he sacrifices anything—and I mean by this those trafling idiosyncrasies and customs—we call habits for his art. For instance, he has an overmastering taste for candy and gratified it when he earned his first money. Then he found it disturbed his vocal apparatus and he quit it. He used to be a fiend for cigarettes, but he dropped those likewise.

"They also accused me of drinking a great deal of beer at one time," he said smiling. "But that was rather unfair. I never did. That was a habit I didn't have to eliminate.

"My teacher, Edmund J. Myer, wrote me a letter some time ago and asked me whether I had been imbibing too freely in beer, whether my voice had broken nine times on a high C, whether I had failed to fill several engagements.

"It's strange what stories they will spread around concerning you while you're on tour. There was nothing to any of this. I have never missed filling a concert engagement in all the seven years I've been singing."

And then Mr. Karle tapped the wood twice on the adjoining pillar.

"But I feel this way about a tenor voice," he continued. "It isn't the natural voice of a man. It's a freak. Consequently it requires more care. You can't risk spoiling its fineness. The basso can 'brb-rum-br' along through a number and nobody will notice the difference. But a tenor has too much legato and pianissimo singing to risk anything which may harm the texture of his voice and its quality because he needs these absolutely and entirely.

"Caruso is an exception, of course. He smokes incessantly. But Caruso is an exception to all rules. How many have tried to imitate him—tried to break on a high C, for instance—and failed utterly, and even lost their voices from the effort. Caruso meanwhile has gone on singing better every season."

Conservatism was no doubt an early heritage with him. "Running true to form, I was born of respectable, but impecunious parents," he remarked. "My father lost his money in the panic of 1893. Everything I have accomplished in my singing has been the result of my own efforts.

"But let me say that I really had no intention of becoming a singer until I came to Seattle. Fate really guided me into the profession. If my father hadn't died we should not have come West. Nor should I have met Mr. Myer, who had happened to come to the Pacific Coast for his health, and started me on my career.

"My first experience in opera was in Seattle—

"Yes, the company in which Mme. Sprotte was interested," he said in reply to my question, which concerned the well-known resident song artist, Anna Ruzena Sprotte. "This is a memento of that experience," and he showed me a watch, inscribed with the greetings of the Standard Grand Opera Company, season 1914-15.

"I used to carry a large watch that belonged to my father. Once at rehearsal I dropped it on the floor, and at this catastrophe I remarked to Mme. Sprotte that some day I was going to secure a thin watch that wouldn't make so much noise when it fell.

"After the final performance in which I sang, the opera 'Martha,' Mme. Sprotte came before the curtain of the theater

"'Vonce, Mr. Karle drop his vatch on the floor,' she said, and he says to me, Mme. Sprotte, some day I put this big vatch avay and I get me a tin vatch. And so, ve in de companee, ve say he is a good boy and ve give him a tin vatch now.'"

But I can assure you that it is a very attractive gold timepiece—even if it is a "tin vatch."

Mrs. Aaron Schloss, president of the California Federation of Women's Clubs, will be a guest of the Ebell Club the 29th inst., and will preside at the State Board meeting which is to be held this month in Southern California.

Miss Alice Paul, national chairman of the Woman's party, has issued a call for a convention to meet in Washington, February 15 to 19, to decide whether the Woman's party, now that it has attained its object, universal woman's suffrage, shall continue as a political group, taking up new work or shall go out of existence.

Mrs. Frank Dyal Parent, chairman of Americanization, presided at the meeting of the Inglewood Woman's Club Wednesday when Dr. George Davidson delivered an address on "Americanization" before a large gathering. John A. Van Pelt, baritone, sang a group of patriotic songs, accompanied by Mrs. Hazel Haas Van Pelt, and the community singing was led by Mrs. L. M. Frey.

Mrs. Samuel A. Barron, president of the Inglewood Woman's Club, entertained the members of her excutiv board at luncheon Monday, covers being laid for twelve.

Mrs. Frances Wyant, aunt of President-elect Harding, presented an autograph of her nephew to the Woman's Club of Sawtelle and it was sold at auction for a goodly sum during the "Festival of Days" that the club held last week, when there were booths representing each day of the week, with articles for sale appropriate to that day. An entertainment was the feature of each evening. On Friday Miss Middlekauf's dancing class gave several numbers and the Santa Monica Elks' band gave a concert.

Mrs. William Pigott (Dorothy Rochfort) who has sold some 200 scenarios, spoke before the Woman's Press Club Tuesday from the photoplay writer's viewpoint and her husband, who is editor of "Screencrafters," spoke to the members of the club in an informal way concerning the productions and the mechanical side of the photoplay.

Helen Jean Christie Tent, Daughters of Veterans, will meet Thursday at 8 p.m. All members are urgently requested to be present, as nomination of officers for the coming year will take place.

TAKE STOCKINGS AS FEE FOR ADMISSION.

A pair of stockings for a poor kiddie is to be the price of admission to the all star musicale which the Philanthropy and Civics Club will give the afternoon of the 23rd inst. at the Elks' clubhouse. The program will be furnished by well-known artists, including Mme. Henri Winfield, lyric soprano, formerly with the Metropolitan Opera Company; Helene Morgan, a local pianiste of note; and Anton Dahl, a former Russian court pianist, who will appear in court costume.

December 11 has been set as the date for the Christmas jinks of the club.

At last Tuesday's meeting Mrs. H. A. Cable gave an interesting talk on "Aftermaths of the Election." Next Tuesday, following the luncheon, Miss Gertrude Darlow of the city library will give a talk on "Current Novels and Magazines."

CLUB MEMBERS ENJOY RECITAL FROM BIBLE.

A crowded house greeted Lillian Burkhardt Goldsmith, Tuesday, when the Pasadena Shakespeare Club heard her in her dramatic recital, the Book of Job. Her appearance was anticipated with pleasure and no less gratifying was the surprise of Mrs. W. F. Thurston's talk on "The Trend of the Modern Magazine," and her review of "The Simian World" by Clarence Day, Jr.; for Mrs. Thurston, a prominent member of the Friday Morning Club, is one of the most refreshing literary critics in club circles of Los Angeles county.

The art and travel department of the club met at 10 a.m. with Mrs. J. H. Pearman presiding. It was at this hour that Mrs. Thurston was introduced and Miss M. Winifred Rouzee spoke before the Bible section on "The Fulfilled Prophesies of the Bible." The luncheon speakers were Miss Mary Wallace Weir and Miss Katherine Davis of Los Angeles, both speaking of the conditions in the Near East.

This Tuesday the drama department meets at 11 a.m. to hear Mrs. Philip Stone read "The Will," by Sir James M. Barrie; Leslie D. Henry will be the luncheon speaker. His subject is to be "Educational conditions in Australia and the United States." Charles Brandon Booth, son of Maude Ballington Booth, will speak in the afternoon on "Prison Reform."

"INDIVIDUALS" ISSUE BLANKET INVITATON.

The Individuals' Club will have a frolic at the home of Mrs. Robert W. Edgren, 545 Cypress avenue, Thursday evening, at which time, according to the announcement, all talent is to be utilized for the diversion of the ensemble, gang, crew, party and riotous gathering of usually decorous and Puritanical individuals "out on a lark," eager to promote the happiness and welfare of fellow members and friends.

"If you, or indulgent friends, and envious neighbors," says the announcement, "suspect yourself of having some gift, however latent, bring it with you for this fanfare of fancy, fun and frivolity; failing, which, risk the iri of an indulgent chief whose dismay may be softened by sympathy that though heaven has blessed you with ability, the devil has sifted the emery of self-consciousness in to hinder your speedier unfoldment in individuality, incidentally depriving your friends and this meeting of your gracious contribution.

"If you cannot sing, try to play, without apology. ('My life is not an apology, but a life.') If you can recite, dance, or tell a story, 'Be not like dumb driven cattle, have a heart for any fate.' Assert your individuality, and right to live and be alive and—at this party.

"Seven forty-five p.m. is the hour. Wear what you please and thus assert your individuality. Garvanza car to Cypress avenue, second house from corner, beyond clump of trees. Climb the steps and walk in. Welcome await you, bring a friend or two if you wish, and they shall be our friends, too."

Dr. Ernest Crutcher is president of this society and Miss Amy Herbert is secretary.

LUNCHEON GIVEN FOR LEADERS AT COMPTON.

Charming was the luncheon of the Pathfinder Club of Compton when the members assembled Tuesday in honor of the president and board of directors of the Los Angeles district C.F.W.C. The room was attractive with its glowing chrysanthemums of yellow, the club color.

After the luncheon Mrs. H. A. Chaffee, president, introduced the district president, Mrs. Sidney Thomas Exley, who spoke on "Thrift," offering practical suggestions for thrift in an interesting way. The chairmen of the departments briefly outlined the plans for the district work and told what had already been accomplished this club year.

For the November club meeting an admission fee of a jar of fruit and a glass of jelly will be asked of the members who are also requested to bring any cast-off clothing or household articles for division among the charitable organizations in Los Angeles.

NEW SOURCE OF RUGS.

The Albanian Weave Is Serviceable and Comparatively Cheap.

A new type of rug, brilliant in coloring with gorgeous sunset tints, thick, soft, durable and moderate in price, is ready for some enterprising Americans to introduce into the rug market. This is the hand-woven rug of Albania. A time is certainly coming when the Albanian rugs will grace thousands of summer cottages and bungalows in America.

Not so soft and light as the Navajo blanket, these rugs are twice as thick, twice as durable and many times warmer. Made to last for generations they are "just the thing" for the front porch or damp tent floor and their striking color combinations command them to the holiday atmosphere of the vacation home. Water cannot hurt them. The man who seeks an extra rugged blanket to add to his camping kit need have no fear of sleeping in the rain under an Albanian rug, while the enthusiastic canoist has a canoe mat par excellence.

Where a fine Bokhara carpet takes months in weaving and sells in America for hundreds or thousands of dollars, depending on its size and quality, the Albanian blanket rug can be woven in a few weeks and its cost in America, if the rug be eight by five feet, would range between $30 and $100.

When purchased from the weaver in Albania, a native rug would never cost more than $10 and the average rug can be had for less than $5.

The American Red Cross Commission for the relief of Albania has found in many instances that it was cheaper to buy native rugs for distribution to the needy than import American blankets. In many Red Cross hospitals and dispensaries scattered throughout that impoverished country, the bright-hued rugs, woven by peasant women of the hills from threads spun by hand on ancient spindles, make warm covering for the beds of the sick.—[Kansas City Star.

Danderine is "Beauty-Tonic"

Immediately after a "Danderine" massage, your hair takes on new life, lustre and wondrous beauty, appearing twice as heavy and plentiful, because each hair seems to fluff and thicken.

Don't let your hair stay lifeless, colorless, plain or scraggly. You, too, want lots of long, strong hair, glistening with beauty.

A 35-cent bottle of delightful "Danderine" freshens your scalp, checks dandruff and falling hair. This stimulating "beauty-tonic" gives to thin, dull, fading hair that youthful brightness and abundant thickness. All drug counters sell "Danderine."—[Advertisement.

TELLS CAUSE OF INDIAN TROUBLE.

Nationalist in London Gives Interview.

Says Dominion Government is Wanted.

Declares Hindus and Moslems Are United.

BY CLAIR PRICE.

[SPECIAL FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, Nov. 1.—The restlessness of India has been manifested vaguely by various troublings of the political waters in London for some time, and the recent sudden cancellation of the Prince of Wales prospective trip to Delhi lends support to widespread suspicions of serious unrest in the country.

The Prince's health is the reason assigned in the recent Royal proclamation for the temporary abandonment of his Indian trip, and the substitution of the Duke of Connaught in his place.

So serious a symptom of Indian unrest is not to be regarded lightly. Indeed, any unrest in such a vast unit of the British Empire as the Indian Empire is in itself a cause of the gravest concern. In order to lift a corner of the curtain, which conceals India from the rest of the world, I have recently interviewed Mohamed Ali Bey, head of the Indian Khilafat Delegation to London and a leading Indian nationalist.

What he tells me must of course be regarded as Indian nationalist propaganda, and this interview should be read in the full light of that fact.

What gives it importance, however, is the fact that he speaks as the mouthpiece of a very wide section of Indian native opinion. What Mohamed Ali says is what literally millions of Indians are saying today, and as such it is of the very highest importance.

"The Indian National Congress voiced a demand in its annual meeting at Amritsar last December for Dominion Home Rule for India," Mohamed Ali said. "The December meeting at Amritsar was the largest meetings we have ever held There were 6000 accredited delegates present, and a total attendance of over 20,000.

"The congress was distinctly conciliatory in its resolutions, but it is a vivid proof of the trend of things in India that the very leaders who urged moderation at Amritsar are the leaders who have since been driven into the fold of the extremists."

MODERATES CARRY POINT.

The only split at the congress was that between the moderates and extremists, the former, led by Mr. Ghandi, carrying their point.

"Events since the congress adjourned, however, so have affected India," Mohamed Ali alleged, continuing "That Mr Ghandi, the moderates' leader, has been driven into the arms of the extremists."

The program of co-operation with the British government, which Mr. Ghandi succeeded in passing at Amritsar has proven hopelessly impracticable, and Mr. Ghandi himself is now the leader of that nonco-operation movement, which I have mentioned as having taken effect throughout India on August 1.

"The British government in India itself has rendered co-operation with it impossible to any self-respecting Indian. This has become so obvious that on August 1, a hartal was proclaimed throughout India to inaugurate nonco-operation with the government.

"A hartal is a period of mourning during which all work stops. That of August 1 was rigidly observed throughout the Indian Empire. With the exception of hospital services and work connected with food distribution, not a wheel turned anywhere within its mighty boundaries."

DIFFICULT TO VISUALLIZE.

It is difficult to visualize what this means. There are in India approximately 300,000,000 people, or three times as many as there are in the United States. Can you imagine a general strike of all labor over an area three times as vast as the United States?

"The hartal was proclaimed to mark the breaking of British pledges to India on two separate counts.

"One was Britain's pledge to maintain the integrity of the Turkish Empire and to maintain the holy places of Islam under the sovereignty of the Sultan-Caliph.

"The other was the pledge given us repeatedly in the Allied war aims, i.e., that of self-determination for India.

"Our resentment at the breaking of these pledges was aggravated last winter by the repeated massacres in the Punjab, culminating in the atrocious shooting at Amritsar, in which over 2000 unarmed Indians were killed or wounded.

RELIGIOUS GAP BRIDGED.

"The Congress was not alone in the ordering the hartel and the policy of non-co-operation which it inaugurated.

"For the first time in Indian history, the gap between Hindus and Moslems in India was bridged. The Indian Moslem League stood by the National Congress throughout the developments which led to non-co-operation, and the two are now standing together in complete union.

"It may be said that there are three religious gradations in India, viz.: The Hindus, of whom there are about 217,000,000; the Moslems, of whom there are about 66,000,000, and the Sikhs, of whom there are about 3,000,000. Heretofore the Moslems have stood alone in Indian political matters.

"The reasons are like those which usually obtain in the East; they feared the domination of the Hindu majority and the consequent split between the Hindus and the Moslems is that which has made British rule possible in India. The split no longer exists.

TWO DEMANDS.

"The policy of non-co-operation voices two demands on which immediate action by the British government is essential. These are the recall of Baron Chelmsford, the Viceroy, and the impeachment of Sir Michael O'Dwyer, under whom the massacres in the Punjab took place.

To back up these demands, four stages of non-co-operation with the British are to be observed.

The first stage, which began on August 1, consists in the return to the British authorities of all honors, and titles conferred by the British authorities, and the resignation of native members of governing bodies.

The second stage, which has not yet been called for, is the resignation of all native members of the Indian Civil Service.

The third stage is the resignation of native members of the army and police forces.

The fourth stage is the refusal to pay taxes to the British authorities.

DON'T WANT SEPARATION.

"At present, although thinking Indians have been driven to extremism and have been compelled by the British government itself to adopt a policy of non-co-operation, we do not desire separation from Britain. We demand that the principle of self-determination be applied to us, but as a free self-governing and integral part of the British Empire.

"Our present demands are for dominion home rule in the fullest sense. But if we cannot save India within the British Empire, we shall not hesitate to withdraw from the Empire. Whether we remain within the Empire depends at present on the British government."

TREE GROWS ON TOWER.

First Appeared on Indiana Courthouse in 1871.

A tree growing on the Courthouse tower has given Greensburg, Ind., the name of "The Lone Tree City," relates the Washington Star. The tree first appeared in 1871 and has weathered the storms of nearly forty-nine years. It is still alive and vigorous, leading out in the spring with other trees and waving its branches at a height of 110 feet from the ground.

This tree is really one of the world's wonders. There is only one other place where there is anything of the kind and that is on an old mill in Scotland, near the birthplace of Robert Burns. Whenever a passenger train goes through Greensburg the windows go up and the heads are thrust out. There is much craning of necks to see the Courthouse tree.

Joseph Moss, a druggist, of Greensburg, says that in 1875 a photographer by the name of J. H. Matthews took a picture of the tree and sent it to Queen Victoria of England. The photographer received a letter of acknowledgment, with the Queen's signature. There were seven trees in all appearing in the early '70's on the tower, and an eighth in 1900. The last did not live long. Four of the original trees were removed, as they threatened to injure the masonry. All the remaining trees died except one. It is a soft maple. From where the tree grows out of the tower to the furthest branch or twig is sixteen feet. From where the tower begins to slope it is filled in solid with broken stone and mortar, and yet the roots are able to penetrate it. The Courthouse was built in 1856, and the mortar used at that time was not as compact as that which is in use today.

Just how the tree has lived for nearly half a century is quite a mystery.

—from a subscriber's letter.

THE LETTERS OF SOPHIA.

[Mrs. Antrobus, formerly of Sydney, Australia, writes home about us]

Los Angeles, Nov. 11.

My dear Millicent:

I have just received your letter which took nearly a month to come. And I observe, my dear, that while you were politely interested in all my comments anent women's clubs and customs, and politics, you evidently feel that if I have failed to meet the cinema stars and haunted the studios, I have missed all that really matters. And, of course, I do appreciate that as we generally have at least half a dozen American films running in Sydney, all made in Los Angeles, you naturally visualize this amazing city as one large whirling picture show. And so it is in a way, for it is not at all unusual for them to film exciting scenes in the streets, and if you don't happen to see the camera, it is most confusing.

I saw an awful tussle with the police one day, in which the officer seemed to be getting the worst of it, and you know what a solemn duty we Britishers regard it to aid the police. I was shocked to see the public standing around gaping, but offering no assistance. "My good man," I said to a husky bystander, "surely it is your duty to assist that policeman to arrest that man." "It sure ain't," grinned the creature, "them's only a bunch of movies." It was most embarrassing.

However, my dear, you will be glad to hear that I visited the Goldwyn studio one day, and actually saw them making Gertrude Atherton's new picture. Gertrude Atherton, you know, is one of California's famous authors, and such an interesting woman. The scene was laid in a San Francisco hotel in 1868, and was so quaint. I fell straight way in love with the leading lady, a Miss Mabel Julian Scott, who upset all my ideas of picture actresses by appearing essentially a gentlewoman. She wore the old-fashioned voluminously draped skirt with the old "dress improver," like that portrait of your dear mother as a bride. Oh, the dignity of those gowns—I felt positively indecent in my modern skimpy short skirt, although, of course, my dear, you know that I am most conservative in my styles. All the same, beside her, I must have looked like a ridiculous flapper of fifty.

There were a couple of ultra fashionable modern dames visiting from New York, who had rather awed me before I saw Miss Scott, but after that it seemed impossible that they could maintain any dignified social standing, although I was informed that they are really "society" dames, and were only visitors to the studio like myself. One of them was the wife of a millionaire of national reputation, but I certainly mistook her for a cinema queen.

Well, dear, I was so interested to discover that the actors required soft music played for them during the making of the scene. Mrs. Atherton says they are so temperamental that they need these aids to emotion. So directly the camera begins to click a bell rings and the music is started, the director keeps up a running fire of instructions and comment, and it looks so queer to see everybody begin to act, sometimes making up conversation, but mostly silent. They take the pictures under a fierce artificial white light, which makes the people without the proper make-up look utterly ghastly.

In another set, as they call it, a Mr. Litson was filming a boy story which called for a dozen exuberant youngsters. They were all so full of animal spirits that it was difficult to know when the film fight was over, for they kept right on long after the camera stopped. This Mr. Litson wore an air of infinite patience and is obviously replete with maternal instincts.

But what really interested me most was a line of little cubby-hole offices set apart for the famous authors to work in — for all the world like cells. Each contains a desk, straight chair and an armchair, the latter evidently for relaxed cogitation. Leroy Scott, an author of several "best sellers," was occupying one, but looked very much as though he wanted to play truant like a naughty schoolboy. And I observed that no matter how famous they are, they all stand in respectful awe of a gentleman called Jackson. This person's duty is to make interesting news for the newspapers, and they are all just so much publicity material to him. He will make them bare the story of their lives for the benefit of any newspaper person, and lines them up meekly to utter smart sayings, just like nice little marionettes. He pulls the string and they talk obediently. One often hears them speak at the women's clubs, and I suspect that this Mr. Jackson hires them out for publicity purposes.

A curious thing about this picture industry is that so many English people are in it — actors, directors, editors, writers, etc. Even the casting director, the person who selects the actors, was an Englishman—and can't you imagine what a dizzy time he has?

The shops are all getting so Christmassy, and I will confess to just a hint of homesickness. But Christmas cards, my dear, are just as fatuous and unoriginal here as anywhere else. They even have those same private printed ones, you know those snobby ceremonious things, designed to indicate exclusiveness, with the same trite "season's greetings" for everyone. People are so warm-hearted and friendly here that I can't quite reconcile them with that sort of thing. And they tell me they have commercialized Santa Claus, so that every store has one and the children write him letters asking for their hearts' desire, which must be very embarrassing for the parents.

But one thing they have commercialized I entirely approve of, and that is politeness. Oh, my dear, the young persons in the stores are so nice mannered as a rule. They tell me the stores have classes to teach the girls patience and courtesy, and even put on little plays showing how to deal with exasperating customers. Just to show you how democratic they are, some department-store girls produced one of these plays at a woman's club, aided by the club women, and as it reflected ridicule on some kinds of women shoppers, showing how very aggravating they can be and what peculiar patience and sweetness a really tactful shopgirl must exude, it was quite a good lesson for all of us.

A thing that would amaze you here is the miles and miles of wonderful roads. Why, my dear, our best Australian road would be considered a bad one here. They glisten across the country in shiny black ribbons. No wonder everybody just has to have a car. And every few miles there is what they call a "service station," where they sell oil and petrol and other necessities. You know, we pay four shillings a gallon for petrol in Australia and can only get that at remote places—but it is only one shilling and three-pence here and seems to be laid on like water. Yes, my dear, you are quite right, I shall be driving my own car very soon; one hardly feels properly clothed without one here and I shall be by no means the only middle-aged matron dashing around in high style. Such a wide variety of nice young men are trying to sell me their special make just now and take me for "trial trips"—it is quite fascinating to have them all "psyching" me. That means working their applied psychology on me, because, you know, "salesmanship" is an exact science and an applied art and all that sort of thing. The trouble is, three of them have me successfully psyched so far and as they are rivals my indecision is appalling. I can't possibly afford to buy more than one, yet I tremble for my strength of mind.

Au revoir, dear, I am just off for another trial trip, and in a silk sweater which I am afraid my contemporaries at home would consider much too gay, especially as it matches my stockings. Oh, yes, I am getting very Americanised.

Yours affectionately,
SOPHIA ANTROBUS.

A message from Prague states that a method has been discovered of making more difficult the passing of forged bank notes, says a Copenhagen correspondent of the London Telegraph. The invention consists of imbedding in the paper on which bank notes are printed quantities of fine steel and nickel particles. One of the simplest and most important laws used in the theory of electricity and in its every-day applications, is Ohm's law. This law states, practically, that the resistance of a metallic conductor, at any given temperature, is constant. At a Washington meeting of the American Physical Society, a paper was presented on this subject. It appears that Ohm's law holds exactly as far as the use of modern instruments and methods can determine.—[Popular Mechanics Magazine.

The windmill has not been generally found available for the generation of electricity, because of the irregularity of the air currents, but this disadvantage has been overcome by the arrangement of a Swedish inventor. Instead of being directly connected to the dynamo in the usual manner, the mill-wheel shaft is geared to a hoisting device, which serves to elevate a two-ton weight to the top of a fifty-three-foot steel and wood tower. When the weight reaches the desired height it is released and as it falls actuates the dynamo, which is mounted on a bracket at the apex of the tower with the mill wheel. A storage battery and switchboard are housed in the lower portion of the tower.—[Indianapolis News.

THE REGENERATION OF A SNOB.

Basil King's Latest Novel, "The Thread of Flame," is a Searching Analysis of the Worth-while Things That Make Up the Sum of Life.

THE THREAD OF FLAME. By Basil King. Harper & Bros., New York.

Basil King's most recent novel is the story told in the first person of a man, an art connoisseur and a Bostonian, who had always lived the easy and pleasant life of his kind. Urged into the French ambulance service by his wife before America entered the war, his experience resulted in his losing all memory of his past life.

When we first meet him he is awakening after a prolonged sleep, to find himself sharing a steamship berth with another war victim, a young American who has lost his sight in the service. How he got there, who he is, what has happened to him he knows not.

"Of being young and vigorous, a touch on my body was enough to give me the assurance. The assumption of having plenty of money was more subtle. It was a habit of mind rather than anything more convincing. Certainly there was nothing to prove it in this cabin, which might easily have been second-class, nor yet in the stuff of my pajamas, which was thick and coarse. I noticed how, as I turned in my bunk, that it rasped my skin unpleasantly. With no effort of the memory I could see myself elegantly clad in silk night clothing fastened with silk frogs; and yet when I asked myself when and where that had been, no answer was accorded me. . . .

"What I chiefly found disturbing was my general environment. I couldn't understand this narrow cabin, these provincial foreign clothes. While I was sorry for Drinkwater's blindness, I disliked the coarseness of contact with one I regarded as my inferior. I am not saying that I took this situation seriously. I knew I could extricate myself from it on arriving at New York. The element in it that troubled me was my inability to account for it. What had I been doing that I should find myself in conditions so distasteful? Why should I have wanted to obliterate my traces? It was obvious that I had done it, and that I had done it with deliberation. Being somebody in the world, I had made myself nobody, and for that I must have a motive. Was it a motive that would confront me as soon as I had become somebody again? That I should have lost the sense of my identity was bad enough in itself; but that I should appear in a role that was not my own, and with a name I was sure I had never borne, was at once terrifying and grotesque."

We do not read far into the book until we see that it is far more than a mystery story, or even a study of the loss of identity. Its value lies in the keen study of the slow transformation of a snob by hard experience, the struggle for existence, association with the ruck of mankind.

A new world was revealed by such people as Lydia Blair, who avowedly intended to be an adventuress and who used atrocious slang, but was the kindest soul alive; by the crusty-surfaced landlady, Miss Flowerdew, who expected all men to make trouble, but cared for the blind Drinkwater like a mother; by the Floater, "who administered the favors and meted out punishments" at Creed and Creeds, where Soames

Children's National Book Week

All over the United States this coming week special attention is going to be given to what children are reading.

The books that boys and girl read during the impressionable years of their lives is of importance beyond all calculating.

Children need sane, wholesome books that will make them happy.

A child may start his own library at little cost. And the pride he takes in his very own books!

Robinson's has reprints of the books for children which are deservedly popular, in cheaper editions.

And then there are the handsomely illustrated editions in a wide range of prices.

The head of the Children's Department of the Los Angeles Public Library will be at Robinson's on Monday and Wednesday, from 2 to 5. She will help parents with suggestions for children's books as holiday gifts and aid the children in choosing their own books.

BOOKS ON NATURE, HISTORY, TRAVEL FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.

THE DREADFUL CAVE. By James Willard Schultz. Houghton, Mifflin Company, Boston.

When it comes to stories of honest-to-goodness Indians comporting themselves in true savage fashion, told as boys demand, no one can quite equal James Willard Schultz. The very title of this latest addition to the somewhat lengthy list of the work of this author should make any boy sit up and take notice. Caves, Indians, pirates and hidden treasure are four things that can be depended upon to whet any boy's appetite for the written page. Here we have at least two of these elements in one book.

But there is more than an exciting story in "The Dreadful Cave." It tells of a young brave, Black Elk, and weaves into the telling so much of Indian lore as to leave with the reader valuable information. Most lovers of Mr. Schultz's work know that he lived for years with the Indians and was adopted into the Blackfeet tribe. The first-hand knowledge he thus gained gives his stories of Indian life and adventure a weight of authority that adds greatly to their value. Mr. Schultz writes distinctly high-class fiction in his books for boys, as well as in those intended for older readers.

LITTLE FOLKS TRAMPING AND CAMPING. By Anna Blunt Morgan. Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Company, Boston.

A book that gives a remarkably large amount of information about birds and their ways, retaining the interest throughout by weaving it all in story form. An uncle of a group of children offers a prize to the child seeing the greatest variety of birds during the summer. The story relates their happy times and the funny troubles they get into on their tramps and in their camp trying to win the prize. A book that should help to develop in children a love of birds and bees and butterflies and outdoor life in general.

THE BOOK OF BRAVERY. THIRD SERIES. BEING TRUE STORIES IN AN ASCENDING SCALE OF COURAGE. Collected and recounted by Henry Wysham Lanier. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.

In this third book of the series, Mr. Lanier carries out his fine idea of a book which through heroic incidents, told largely by participants in them or by eyewitnesses, runs the scale of every type of bravery, beginning with that of the cornered rat—the man who fights with infinite courage because of his desperation. The field covered by this volume is suggested in the titles of its six parts: "All in the Day's Work," which describes acts of courage performed in line of duty, such as that of the mail rider, the cowboy, etc.; "Crusaders, Missionaries and Holy Wars," which tells of brave deeds done for the sake of religion; "Valor and Magnanimity," which relates to the knightly deeds of such men as Sir Philip Sidney, the Cid, etc.; "Courage of Mind and Character," one of those episodes occurs in the Serbian retreat; "Moral Courage," one of whose heroes is the man in California who first dared to refuse to fight a duel; "Dying and Living for Others," which among other stories tells of the founder of the leper settlement at Molokai; and, finally, "The Courage of the Cheerful Failure."

GIRL HEROINES IN FICTION. By Inez N. McFee. The Thomas Y. Crowell Company, New York.

The author of "Boy Heroes of Fiction" has singled out six girls, famous in fiction, and retold their story in popular narrative style. The list includes Little Dorrit, the daughter of the gloomy Marshalsea debtor's prison; loyal, impulsive Maggie Tulliver, who was constantly "putting her foot into it;" faithful little Ellen, who had to make her way in the "wide, wide world;" Epple, the weaver's mischievous, golden lass; Cosette, the abused girl of the French tavern, rescued by an ex-convict, and that most pathetic of all figures, Little Nell. The editorial work of selection and condensation has been excellent, and the book is well illustrated and printed. As to the value of such condensation there may be a question. Many librarians and parents prefer to have their children take Dickens, George Eliot, Hugo and the others undiluted. This is all very well, but for young children and for those who find the older authors dull and so refuse to read them, such a book as this has its value. And there is to be considered the inspiration for the reading of the longer story when once the interest is roused by such a book as this.

BOY HEROES IN FICTION. By Inez M. McFee. The Thomas Y. Crowell Company, New York.

A book similar in plan and purpose to "Girl Heroines in Fiction" by the same author. Here we have the stories of seven well-known boys in fiction. Stevenson is represented by two of his sprightliest characters, David Balfour and Jim Hawkins; Dickens by two, Oliver Twist and David Copperfield; and there is a newcomer, Jim Davis, from Masefield's spirited tale of the Kentish smugglers. The stories are told largely in the language of the original author, and the work of selection and condensation has been well done.

US AND THE BOTTLEMAN. By Edith Ballinger Price. The Century Company, New York.

A pleasing story told with happy spirit is this account of the adventures of two boys and a girl at the seashore. "It began with Jerry's finishing off all the olives that were left, 'like a pig would do,' as Greg said. His finishing the olives left us the bottle, of course, and there is only one natural thing to do with an empty olive bottle when you're on a water picnic. That is, to write a message as though you were a shipwrecked mariner, and seal it up in the bottle and chuck it as far out as ever you can."

The quite unlooked-for results of this play are woven into a story that is warranted to hold the interest of the average girl or boy of ten or twelve.

THE SPARTAN TWINS. By Lucy Fitch Perkins. Houghton, Mifflin Company, Boston.

A new book of this famous series is always sure of a warm welcome. Lucy Fitch Perkins knows how to write for children, how to fascinate and instruct them at the same time, and so there are many children who eagerly await each new book of the twin series and add it to their collection with supreme joy.

Since the appearance of "The Dutch Twins" some ten years ago, over a third of a million copies of the series have been sold and many children have been made happy by the doings of Kit and Kat, Taro and Take, Pierre and Pierrette, and the other small members of this famous international family that now comprises: "The Italian Twins," "The Cave Twins," "The Spartan Twins," "The Mexican Twins," "The Scotch Twins," "The Eskimo Twins," "The French Twins," "The Irish Twins," "The Belgian Twins," "The Japanese Twins" and "The Dutch Twins."

For a girl or boy of seven or eight, up to twelve or fourteen, no parent will go astray in selecting one or more of these delightful books for Christmas.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S HISTORY OF THE PILGRIMS. By William Elliott Griffis.

A history of the Pilgrims which emphasizes the historical background of their life. It is not a book for young children, but rather for the thoughtful girl or boy who has studied United States and possibly English history and who revels in history, as some children do.

The author relates fully and clearly the events that led the Pilgrims to flee from England to Holland, and then to come to America. He depicts the conditions by which they were surrounded and influenced, and lays strong emphasis on the principles and the motives that carried them across 3000 miles of stormy sea to form a commonwealth in the wilderness.

To make the book more distinctively a young people's history, Dr. Griffis has given prominence to the things that must have been seen by the Pilgrim boys and girls, or that could not have failed to interest them keenly. There are chapters, for instance, on "Fun and Play in the Old Home," "A Girl's Life in Merrie England," "Brewster, the Boy Traveler," "Bradford, Boy Hero and Typical Pilgrim" and "Capt. Miles Standish and His Little Army."

THE COURTSHIP OF MILES STANDISH. By Henry W. Longfellow. Houghton, Mifflin Company, Boston.

A story that has a strong appeal to children as well as to old-fashioned adults is "The Courtship of Miles Standish."

In this new edition published in honor of the tercentenary celebration of the landing of the Pilgrims, Mr. Wyeth has made a series of paintings and decorations that illustrate the story with a masterly skill. A story which will always live, superbly illustrated in full color by one of the greatest of American illustrators, this holiday edition promises to be one of the most artistic and appropriate gift-books of the year.

NUOVA: THE NEW BEE. By Vernon Kellogg. Houghton, Mifflin Company, Boston.

The tale of Nuova's adventures is as absorbing as though the characters were humans instead of bees. Children and grown-ups will enjoy it, not only for the charming story, but also for the fascinating and authentic glimpses it gives of life in a community of bees. Delightfully illustrated in color by Milo Winter.

THE YOUNG CITIZEN'S OWN BOOK. By Chelsea Curtis Fraser. The Thomas Y. Crowell Company, New York.

A book that describes in an entertaining way for boys how the various branches of our government are managed. Starting with "A Visit to the National Capital," we have a peep at the outer crust of Washington, so to speak—its fine avenues and stately official buildings. Next comes a brief sketch of our scheme of government, how it arose and why it took the form of a republic. The third chapter takes up the territories and dependencies of the United States. The fourth treats of the rights of citizenship, showing what inherent rights are guaranteed under the Constitution. Other chapters deal with political parties and their platforms; party organization and the machinery of political conventions; woman suffrage; registration and voting; city and rural government; State governments; and finally the various departments of the Federal government and foreign representation.

GLINDA OF OZ. By L. Frank Baum. The Reilly & Lee Company, Chicago.

The title page of this new "Oz" book explains that herein are related the exciting experiences of Princess Ozma of Oz and Dorothy in their hazardous journey to the home of the Flatheads, and to the magic isle of the Skeezers, and how they were rescued from dire peril by the sorcery of Glinda the Good. That the story will delight all children goes without saying. There are now thirteen Oz books, the complete list being as follows: "The Land of Oz," "Ozma of Oz," "Dorothy and the Wizard in Oz," "The Road to Oz," "The Emerald City of Oz," "The Patchwork Girl of Oz," "Tik-Tok of Oz," "The Scarecrow of Oz," "Rinkitink in Oz," "The Lost Princess of Oz," "The Tin Woodman of Oz," "The Magic of Oz," and "Glinda of Oz."

RECENT FICTION.

THE VANITY GIRL. By Compton Mackenzie. Harper & Bros., New York.

Another novel concerned with the poor but ambitious beauty who goes on the stage as a chorus girl, makes a hit, marries an earl and continues to carry all before her.

The girl in this case is Dorothy Lonsdale, whose real name was Norah Caffyn. Her father was a quite impossible subclerical character, master in his own house and in an "establishment" he kept up elsewhere, who made life very trying to his spoiled and selfish daughter and so furnished her with the motive to leave home. As an answer to the question, why girls leave home, the first few chapters of "The Vanity Girl" meet every requirement.

The striking change in character which Dorothy's marriage with the empty-pated and rather vicious earl brought about, making her an ornament to society and a sensible, unselfish woman beloved by everyone, mother-in-law included, is as astonishing as it is commendable.

Altogether the story is one that will probably be accepted by Mr. Mackenzie's admiring friends with the cordiality accorded his previous work, but it is in no way either a great or striking contribution to literature. The fact that Sylvia Scarlett, Mr. Mackenzie's old-time heroine, again appears in this book will add to its popularity. The pictures of stage life, while not altogether new, are not without interest.

WUNPOST. By Dane Coolidge. E. P. Dutton & Co., New York.

A story of mining in the West. The hero is a miner, trustful and so easily cheated out of his claims. His experience teaches him to look out for his own interests, with the result that he secures and retains another claim which means success and happiness for him. A pleasing love story combined with rapidity of action make this an enjoyable book of a sort.

ALL WOOL MORRISON. By Holman Francis Day. Harper & Bros., New York.

The story of a public official who sets out to secure the rights over the water power for the people. Of course, the political ring fights him to a finish and, of course, he comes out triumphant. There are enough complications to keep the interest at a high point, and the love interest is live enough to serve its purpose. It is a book that will give the average reader several hours of enjoyable reading.

THE LURE OF THE MANOR. By Gertrude Griffiths. Duffield & Co., New York.

A romance with an oddly attractive sentimental background, quite devoid of sophistication or modernity. Just such a story as our less critical forebears read in the middle of the nineteenth century and even up to the eighties or nineties. Its hero is an English nobleman, its heroine a sweet young thing not yet seventeen, and its lady villain as beautiful as she is ruthless. But there is a glamour over it all, a sense of romance, a genuine sentimental appeal that makes it of more than passing interest. Those who seek diversion from the hard realities of life, who have learned to seek romance in books when it is lacking in reality, will read and enjoy this book, which may described either as a survival or as a recrudescence.

DAISY ASHFORD: HER BOOK. By Angela Ashford. George H. Doran Co., New York.

This is a collection of the remaining "novels" by the author of "The Young Visiters," together with "The Jealous Governess." The preface is by Irvin S. Cobb, but it is doubtful if even this boost will create any great interest in the collection. The book is much larger than its predecessor, but that naive quality, that freshness and charm which made "The Young Visiters" such a success are lacking or present in only a minor degree.

We wonder if the public hasn't had enough of infant literature served for adult readers. A book of the sort now and then may be refreshening, but it is a style that soon palls. All of which is not to say that "The Young Visiters" was not worth while; it was, but that doesn't mean that we must have more. Enough is as good as a feast, and better in this case.

A RESOURCEFUL WOMAN.

Wife—John, I must have some new furs.

Hub—Sorry, my dear, but the car needs new tires, and we can't afford both.

Wife—Very well, get the tires, and we'll spend the winter at Palm Beach.—[Boston Transcript.

AS E. W. HOWE SEES THEM.

THE ANTHOLOGY OF ANOTHER TOWN. By E. W. Howe. Alfred A. Knopf, New York.

This is a little book that can be opened anywhere and read at odd moments. What strikes us as unique is that the picture presented is one that either enlists our sympathy or arouses our antipathy toward the subject. For instance, let us open the book at page 113. The caption of the essay, chronicle, narrative or whatever you may care to call it, is "Henry Wulfburger." "What citizen of this town," asks the author, "is most highly spoken of? Henry Wulfburger, the iceman."

Well, we are naturally curious to know what "Old Ed" has to say about the iceman, so we find that Henry "is so polite and capable that no one can get his customers away from him. He isn't very good looking and not a fastidious dresser; but he delivers ice promptly and puts things back in the refrigerator as he found them."

Now we are very sure that there is not a housewife in all the land who if she read this would not immediately become obsessed with a secret wish that she lived in that town and could have her ice supply furnished by Henry Wulfburger, for if there is one bane of the housewife's existence, it is the iceman.

Now for the reverse of the picture. Turning to page 122 we find the heading, "Milt Sayer." Of Milt he says: "People used to say that Milt Sayer was naturally mean and that his father was mean before him. The Sayers have lived here ever since the town was started and the very old men say that Milt's grandfather never paid any attention to city ordinances either. City ordinances are interesting mainly to regulate strangers, anyway, and Milt Sayer took pleasure in violating them. In fact, that was about all the pleasure [illegible] never went [illegible] trade for [illegible] noy his neighbors."

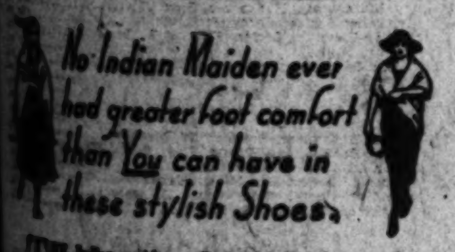
When your feet ask for Arch Preserver Shoes!

AT NIGHT when you go to your room, hurrying to get off your shoes so that your poor, tired feet may get relief, then is when they are asking for ARCH PRESERVER SHOES. For when you wear these wonderful shoes your feet do not tire needlessly, and do not annoy you. You will realize a new foot vigor—more than mere comfort!

The ARCH PRESERVER SHOES are modish—offering you every desirable shape you wish. You are always well dressed in ARCH PRESERVER SHOES.



No Indian Maiden ever had greater foot comfort than You can have in these stylish Shoes.

THE Indian maiden walked with her feet on the ground. That is the way nature planned. But style demands heels, and heels mean the raising of the rear of the foot off the ground. By affording a firm "foot bridge" support the ARCH PRESERVER SHOE simply "raises the ground with the foot."

The height of the heel doesn't matter. With this support your feet will not complain against any style. The ARCH PRESERVER SHOE combines natural comfort with good appearance. And of course the ARCH PRESERVER SHOE offers relief to feet that are weak and troublesome.

THE HELPING HAND.

"How far that little candle throws his beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty world."

The League of Red Cross Societies is making every possible effort to assist the American Red Cross in restoring the nearly 800 members of the Petrograd Children's Colony to their parents, it is stated in a cablegram from Geneva. The parents of these children are mostly refugees themselves and scattered in many countries, the league's investigation shows.

In order that the parents may be apprised of the children's whereabouts, the league has printed and distributed large numbers of lists, giving the names of the children, the parents and the addresses of the parents when the separation occurred. They have been spread broadcast in European nations, Egypt and Persia.

Forty thousand second-hand brick and a quantity of sand have been gathered together by a small group of women at Tovey, a village ten miles west of Taylorville, Ill., for the construction of a Methodist church. The women cleaned the bricks themselves, devoting a part of each of their mornings until the work was done. They obtained the sand from the railroad track, where it had escaped from box cars.

This determination to have a church building in their town gained official recognition, and a promise of help from the Methodist centenary fund. Rev. Eugene M. Antrim of Springfield, district superintendent of the church, has rewarded the women by organizing a church for them of eighteen charter members.

Distribution of excess profits made by dealers who handled the wool clip in 1918 under regulations of the War Industries Board is being made by the United States Department of Agriculture to some 100,000 wool growers. It is estimated by the Bureau of Markets, which has charge of making the refund from the dealers to the growers, that the total amount of such excess profits was more than $1,000,000, of which approximately $460,000 has been turned over to the bureau for distribution.

The Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, the only agency of its kind in that Commonwealth, has furnished protection to 119,352 children in the last ten years. During the year just passed the organization had under its protection more than a thousand different children every month. The society not only looks after children suffering from sickness and because of poverty, but those abused or neglected and not given a fair chance by their parents or guardians. It has, during the past year, consumed all income from its small endowment, all contributions and all unrestricted bequests and yet closed the year with a deficit of $20,000. An earnest appeal for help is being made. If money is not forthcoming the worthy work will have to be seriously curtailed.

BITS OF VERSE.

Trumpets.

And they had planned a future filled with bright
Upstanding days that held the warming sun,
Even where shadows are; when these were done,
Sleep, with a heart made curiously light.

They dreamed so much, as all men dream, at night;
Of tasks, and the fine heat of them, the cool
That comes by dusk like color on a pool:
Now this is over and new things begun.
Now this is over, and their dreams, once caught
Up in a great cloud, terrible and unsought,
And every hour, so straightly marked before,
Blown and broken by the wind of war,
Have left them dead, with never a time for reaping;
The trumpets cared so little for their sleeping.
—[Maxwell Struthers Burt in Scribner's.

Blue.

A garden filled with larkspur, blue and sweet,
Beneath the bluest of unclouded skies;
A lass clad in blue muslin, fresh and neat,
To match the blue of her deep, wistful eyes.
A lad, whose dark blue serge's trim lapel
Was decked with bachelor's button, blue and gay,
Smiled at the blue-eyed lass, yet, strange to tell,
There were no blues for them, that bright, blue day!
—[Charlotte Becker in New York Sun

The Tender Sweet Pea and the Heartless Mandarin.

[Translated from the Chinese.]

I saw a frail sweet pea, poor thing,
Whose owner had forgot to give
Her some support by which to cling—
It seemed she feared she would not live.

She stretched her tiny tendrils, held
Them clutching the unhelpful air;
And I, observing, felt impelled
To speak quite sternly to her there.

Come, use your power of will, O pea,
Nor pusillanimously appeal:
Aye, Pelmanize, aspire, and be
More masterful, like Mr. Creel.
Her tender form could stand no more;
She sank: I heard her cry for hours
"Please call the Association for Preventing Cruelty to Flowers."
—[New York Evening Post.

The Final Attack.

Old High Cost of Living,
You've had a good time
In holding up people
With nerve most sublime,
In taxing their pockets,
Their patience, their pride,
Their comfort, their pleasure,
And all else beside.
You've acted the tyrant
In drastic command,
And power you've carried,
With quite a high hand;
To give explanation,
Or reason for gain,
Or just cause for action,
You just did disdain.
But, High Cost of Living,
Fate takes a new tack,
And now is preparing
To give you a whack
In your solar plexus
And the public will shout
With joy that's exceeding
When you are knocked out.

SATCHEL PULLMAN FOR BABY.

In order to simplify the matter of transporting the baby an ingenious father, who is a vaudeville actor, has invented the satchel Pullman, which is a bit of hand baggage constructed of heavy wire mesh and measuring thirty inches long, eighteen inches wide and twenty inches high. The satchel weighs only twenty-two ounces complete, with its featherweight mattress, pillow, blankets and so on. On a rainy day the satchel is provided with a rubber cover. In this it is much easier to carry the baby than in any other way that has been devised.—[Chicago Tribune.

Whatever You Do Don't Neglect Your Eyes, Says Dr. Lewis, Who

Tells How to Strengthen Eyesight 50% in One Week's Time in Many Instances

A Free Prescription You Can Have Filled and Use at Home

Philadelphia, Pa.—Do you wear glasses? Are you a victim of eye strain or other eye weaknesses? If so, you will be glad to know that according to Dr. Lewis there is real hope for you. He says neglect causes more eye troubles and poor sight than any other one thing. Many whose eyes were failing say they had their eyes restored through the principle of this wonderful free prescription. One man says after trying it: "I was almost blind; could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without any glasses and my eyes do not water any more. At night they would pain dreadfully! now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for fifteen days everything seems clear. I can even read fine print without glasses." It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefitted by following the simple rules. Here is the prescription: Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Drop one Bon-Opto tablet in a fourth of a glass of water and allow to dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start and inflammation will quickly disappear. If your eyes are bothering you, even a little, take steps to save them now before it too late. Many hopelessly blind might have been saved if they had cared for their eyes in time.

NOTE: Another prominent Physician to whom the above article was submitted, said: "Bon-Opto is a very remarkable remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to eminent eye specialists and widely prescribed by them." The manufacturers guarantee it to strengthen eyesight 50 per cent in one week's time in many instances or refund the money. It can be obtained from any good druggist, and is one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family.—[Advertisement.

Mother Why Don't You Take Nuxated Iron

And Be Strong and Well and Have Nice Rosy Cheeks Instead of Being Nervous and Irritable All the Time and Looking So Haggard and Old?—The Doctor Gave Some to Susie Smith's Mother and She Was Worse Off Than You Are and Now She Looks Just Fine

THE CHILD'S APPEAL

"There can be no Beautiful, Healthy Rosy Cheeked women without Iron."
F. KING, M.D.

"There can be no healthy, beautiful, rosy-cheeked women without iron," says Dr. Ferdinand King, a New York Physician and medical Author. "I have strongly emphasized the fact that doctors should prescribe more organic iron—Nuxated Iron—for their nervous, run-down, weak, haggard-looking women patients. Pallor means anaemia. The skin of the anaemic woman is pale, the flesh flabby. The muscles lack tone, brain fags and the memory fails, and often they become weak, nervous irritable, despondent and melancholy. When the iron goes from the blood of women, the roses go from their cheeks.

"In the most common foods of America, the starches, sugars, table syrups, candies, polished rice, white bread, soda crackers, biscuits, macaroni, spaghetti, tapioca, sago, farina, degerminated cornmeal, no longer is iron to be found. Refining processes have removed the iron of Mother Earth from these impoverished foods, and silly methods of home cookery by throwing down the waste pipe the water in which our vegetables are cooked are responsible for another grave iron loss.

"Therefore, you should supply the iron deficiency in your food by using some form of organic iron, just as you would use salt when your food has not enough salt.

"I have used Nuxated Iron widely in my own practice in most severe aggravated conditions with unfailing results. I have induced many other physicians to give it a trial, all of whom have given me most surprising reports in regard to its great power as a health and strength builder."

Dr. Schuyler C. Jacques, Visiting Surgeon of St Elizabeth's Hospital, New York City, said: "I have never before given out any medical information or advice for publication as I ordinarily do not believe in it. But in the case of Nuxated Iron I feel I would be remiss in my duty not to mention it. I have taken it myself and given it to my patients with most surprising and satisfactory results. And those who wish quickly to increase their strength, power and endurance will find it a most remarkable and wonderfully effective remedy."

If people would only take Nuxated Iron when they feel weak or run-down, instead of dosing themselves with habit forming drugs, stimulants and alcoholic beverages there are probably thousands who might readily build up their red corpuscles, increase their physical energy and get themselves into a condition to ward off the millions of disease germs that are almost continually around us.

It is surprising how many people suffer from iron deficiency and do not know it. Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you the proper amount of good. You don't get the strength out of it, and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly looking, just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron. If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained.

Dr. Ferdinand King, New York Physician and Medical Author, says that Physicians should prescribe more organic iron — Nuxated Iron for their patients; Anaemia—iron deficiency —is the greatest curse to the health, strength, vitality and beauty of the modern American Woman.

You can tell the women with plenty of iron in their blood—beautiful healthy rosy cheeked women full of Life, Vim and Vitality

MANUFACTURERS' NOTE: Nuxated Iron, which is recommended by Dr. Sullivan and other physicians, is now being used by over four million people annually. It is not a secret remedy but one which is well known to druggists everywhere. It is put up in tablet form and you can swallow the tablets or eat them like candy. Each tablet of genuine Nuxated Iron is stamped as follows and the words Nuxated Iron are stamped into each bottle, so that the public may not be led into accepting inferior substitutes. It is easily assimilated and does not injure the teeth, make them black nor upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. It is dispensed in this city by all good druggists in tablet form only.

NUXATED IRON ENRICHES THE BLOOD-GIVES YOU NEW STRENGTH AND ENERGY

CHAR-A-BANC AROUSES IRE.

English Rurals Against the Rubberneck Wagon.

Declare It Spoils Tranquil Peace of Country.

Move Made to Abolish "Menace" from the Roads.

BY MAYNARD EVANS.
[SPECIAL FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, Oct. 27.—The motor char-a-banc is the English equivalent of the American "rubberneck wagon," so popular among Coney Island and other holiday makers. Only it tours over the whole English countryside, roaring through quiet little villages, leaving behind it clouds of dust and blue vapor, stirring the wrath of motorists and driving frightened pedestrians to cover.

"MONSTROUS MENACE."

It has created so much discomfort that an organized effort has been started to rid the country of it as a "monstrous menace." According to its critics, it is not only dangerous and unsightly, but it has become the chosen vehicle of the rowdiest and most mannerless. Its passengers, they say, have the habit of hurling bottles at anyone they pass. And note this, oh, ye dwellers in "dry" America—they are drunken, dissolute and hideously noisy. They bring the worst of the conduct of the towns into the pleasant places of the villages.

Those who have spent the summer seeking seclusion in the rural districts have come back to town with stories of being chased by the char-a-banc from their dearest retreats. Cherished old inns, they report, have been filled with clamorous excursionists. Even the "little friends dressed in feathers and fur," the birds and the animals, are fleeing the mighty roar.

UNLOCKING THE COUNTRYSIDE

The organized opposition insists that another English summer must not to be ruined by the char-a-banc. Meanwhile the patrons of the huge busses have something to say.

The English countryside, they point out, has been a closed book to the majority of travelers. True, there are the trains, but they insist that seeing England from a train window is like a navy man "seeing the world from a porthole." England, they continue, is served best by its roads, and the best of it is not to be reached by railways. They declaim for the "poor man's motor car."

When railways were planned little regard was paid to the satisfaction of the esthetic needs of travelers. The trains go tearing past the loveliest places and linger where the countryside has vanished beneath an imposed crust of factories, pitheads and slag-heaps.

Journeying must be done by the road if the real flavor of England is to be tasted. The stage coach has had its day, the train has proved unsatisfactory for the sightseer, but now the char-a-banc has come to penetrate into the cosiest and most poetic retreats. And, judging by its popularity, it has come to stay.

BROAD HIGHWAY INVADED.

The first thing in its favor is its cheapness. The rates average considerably lower than those of the rail tariffs, and this has led thousands of persons who would ordinarily travel by train to purchase seats in the char-a-banc.

Then it has opened the closed doors of England to great multitudes who heretofore had found journey by the broad highway either very expensive or very laborious. They can now share the pleasures of the road with the abominably rich and the abominably poor. The wealthy man with his touring car and the tramp with his time-worn boot look with distrust upon this invasion of their domains. The complaint of the motorist has received the widest attention. He asserted that the char-a-banc was ruining the roads, that the char-a-banc was unreliable, that its passengers were always open to unpleasant adventures if not actual injury and that the danger of collision with the touring cars constituted a very real menace to the life and property of the King's most expensive subjects.

The complaint of the tramp was even louder; it might make colorful reading matter and tend to show that a certain Elizabethan vigor in the use of the language has not died with the years, but it does not get into print. The gist of it is, however, that when he would be meditating upon the things that tramps meditate about, as he walked down a narrow country lane, he would be suddenly startled by the fearsome noise of the new dragon of the roadway and compelled to haul himself upon the bank and hang to the stump of a tree while the monster roared past.

NETWORK OF ROUTES.

Various townships joined in the attack. They even tried to prohibit the passage of the giant cars through the streets. But this was finally regulated and certain streets were set aside.

All over the country today there is an amazing network of routes. They are not co-ordinated. Some adventurous persons in each series of towns had seen the possibilities of the beast and invested capital accordingly. Trips were arranged in the various districts. By taking advantage of those arrangements one can travel from any coast of England to any other. A few pounds and a fortnight's time suffice.

It is not a business of boarding a char-a-banc in London and continuing in the same vehicle and the same company for weeks. It is, rather, an affair of lots of little journeys in lots of different vehicles with halts at any points that might seem desirable. A run of twenty miles costs only a few shillings and if the place at the end of the journey pleases, you stay there for a day or so.

Most parents probably regard their daughters as worth their weight in gold, but a Scotch banker estimated his two daughters' value at even a higher rate than this, bequeathing to each her weight in £5 bank notes. The elder seems to have been slimmer than her sister, for she got the equivalent of $256,000, while the younger received $286,770.

RED HER FITS

The Seamstress

"Strainin' at a gnat and swallerin' a camel." Yes'm, that's just what it is. I know them folks what you are talking about is mighty perticular when it comes to some of them little things; but my land! you just let anything touch their pocket books and they got a entirely different way of figurin'. Yes, ma'm, it ain't the same at all.

Now you take my cousin—

Ma'm? Oh, certainly, you are excuseable. We ort to git started sewing good before I begin my everlastin' chatterin'. And you are just right to interrupt to ask me about that girdle before I git started so fast you can't stop me. It looks like to me that as long as Miss Gusse don't like green and black, why you got to make it some other color . . .

Yes'm. I agree with you that they ain't nothin' prettier and handsomer than what green is with black satin, and especially now, when they use such pretty moire ribbon or chiffon to make the sashes of. My land; Ain't the sashes and girdles now too pretty for any use? If it wasn't for making Lonny (that's my husband) and Isabel Pearl (that's my daughter what married a half-lame.)

Ma'm? Yes'm, and she went to Canady to live and now I just have to make and send most of her things, and I don't know whether they are right or not.

Well, I used to git shet of my gay tastes on her. But I can't see 'em on her now, and so, as I was saying, as I ain't got Isabel Pearl here to sew for and see her wear these pretty things I most want to git 'em for myself.

Yes'm, he just kind of limped some, and that's what makes me call him "half-lame," because he didn't have very much the matter and she went to Canady to live.

Well, girls are funny about their clothes. You say she says the tackiest girls wear green and black. Well, ain't that the limit?

Anyhow, I seen some of the most expensive dresses with green on 'em. But taint's necessary to give it to her if she don't want it . . .

Oh, yes'm, cerise has come back for girdles. It looks like to me that girls have just decided to make it the style and you know they can do it as quick as a flash if they want to make it . . .

No'm. I think you would strain at a gnat and swaller a camel if you tried to force her to take green. But that ain't what I meant when I started in to talk about folks what do that . . .

Ma'm? You can make it out of moire ribbon. But I certainly like the ones made of a half of a width of Georgette crepe and tied at the side like they do and mebbe with tassels on the bottom of jet or something . . .

Well, I think the dress ort to be made real simple with fullness turned under at the bottom of the skirt and two gathered panels at the side turned under so it bags over like them britches the Turks wear. It has to be made real narrow at the bottom. But the way you do that is to sew under the gathering a band of rubber what has little weights on it. You can buy that weighted tape at the notion department.

'Course you must have the dress real long-waisted and the girdle making it look a little longer, mebbe, the girdle spread out wide. Most of them girdles look five or six inches wide around the waist. And I wouldn't have no other color on the dress. Mebbe, if the neck ain't right fat, she'll have to wear pearl beads.

The waist part can be made with kimono shoulder or sewed-in sleeves to the lining. And a little flat cord to finish the armhole for the dress; you know the way they do 'em.

Well, the neck will be square with, mebbe, a little slit to show the piece of filet lace set under. And the sleeves might have a little slit. And both of 'em has to be corded or piped for a finish. . . .

Satin is marked down and so is chiffon and so is shoes and so is cottons and bedspreads and furniture and most everything. But take care for china! That ain't marked down and they say it ain't agoing to, but I don't know for certain nothing about it. But that ain't bothering me, because we have got a good many of the dishes what we went to housekeeping with and the rest I can git some place else at second hand.

I think you was right a little while ago when you said that folks had the funniest idea of right and wrong. Yes'm, they will rail at the politics of a town what lets crime go wide open and say it is a plum shame that something ain't done. Well, and they will turn right around and vote for the people what run things thataway because they happen to know that the man what's crooked will hurt their husbands' business if they don't or that the other one won't help them personally. Well, and they will vote for the bad ones just to keep a job. But that ain't principle.

Well, and they's some folks what is so particular about not doing no work on Sunday that they will be scandalized by the neighbors what do in it and say mean things and they will turn right around and allow their children to go to the picture show or git in a fight over a nickel they found and won't try to find the owner. They's a lot of people what has started children on a career of crime by winking at something like that. It makes children slippery and greedy.

You can't tell me that it's honest to pick up something on the street and not try to find the owner, any more than picking it out of his pocket. You can whup a child for tellin' a lie, onless he makes a little money out of it and then turn your back, and ruin his chances of being a honest man for life. Yes'm, a heap of people gits along by dodgin'. I reckon some of 'em git rich; I'd ruther dressmake.

Rheumatism

A Remarkable Home Treatment Given by One Who Had It

In the Spring of 1893 I was attacked by Muscular and Sub-acute Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who have it know, for over three years. I tried remedy after remedy and doctor after doctor, but such relief as I received was only temporary. Finally, I found a treatment that cured me completely, and it has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted, and even bedridden with rheumatism, some of them 70 to 80 years old, and results were the same as in my own case.

I want every sufferer from such forms of rheumatic trouble to try this marvelous healing power. Don't send a cent; simply mail your name and address and I will send it free to try. After you have used it and it has proven itself to be that long-looked-for means of getting rid of your rheumatism, you may send the price of it, one dollar, but understand, I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it. Isn't that fair? Why suffer any longer when relief is thus offered you free? Don't delay. Write today.

COSTS MUCH TO INSTALL MAYOR.

Fortune Needed to Place London Head in Office.

New Ruler of Great British City Once Office Boy.

Ancient Custom Demands Ceremonial Ballot.

BY A. J. GLASSPOOL,
Veteran Keeper of the Guildhall, Who has Helped to Install Fifty Lord Mayors of London.
[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, Oct. 26.—It isn't likely that there is in the world anything more ceremonious, more gorgeous, more decorated with formality, fuss and feathers, more appealing to the sense of humor in some, to the sense of flunkeyism in others, and at the same time, to the sense of dignity of most Englishmen, than the business of providing with a chief magistrate a technical city only a square mile in area and containing about 16,000 actual residents. It costs the so-called city of London, about $100,000 each year and the chief magistrate about the same amount, but it is considered well worth the expense because of the addition it makes to the gayety of nations, because of the color it lends to gray London, and because of the picturesque traditions and long standing institutions it keeps alive.

London's incoming Lord Mayor, Alderman James Roll, who was formally elected to that historic, colorful, and, to the American, somewhat funny office on September 29, Michaelmas Day, will be formally admitted there to on November 8.

ANNUAL EVENT.

On the following day, always indicated in the calendar as Lord Mayor's Day, he will begin his year of actual administration, taking the oath of office at the Royal Courts of Justice, and giving the great show or state progress through the streets, which has been an annual event since long before the discovery of America.

As Lord Mayor, Alderman Roll will earn most of his salary of $50,000 by eating a prodigious number of official dinners and luncheons, wearing strange robes and going through odd ceremonials with much solemnity. But he has also a large number of offices which he must fill personally, and important duties to discharge, which are not so apparent to the casual observer from abroad as are the more decorative functions of his position.

The manner of the new Lord Mayor's election on Michaelmas Day was as delightful as that of his installation will be. He couldn't exactly say that the honor came as a surprise to him, for he knew pretty much all about it years before.

SCHOOL FOR MAYORS.

The chief difficulty about becoming a Lord Mayor of London lies in getting the rate-payers to elect you to a life membership in the Board of Aldermen. There are only twenty-six of them, and vacancies are scarce. Once you are an Alderman you don't have to bother furthere with the rate payer, but look for advancement to the Citizen. The Citizen is not at all the same sort of being as a plain citizen without a capital C. He is no less than a freeman-liveryman, that is, a members of one of the city guilds; that is one of the things which citizens don't have to be elsewhere, in New York for example.

The Mayor is chosen from among those Aldermen who have not "passed the chair," i.e., been Lord Mayor, but who have served as Sheriff. There are more than a dozen such Aldermen at present, and each in turn, in all human probability, will get the coveted office in the order of seniority. But the funny part of it to an American is that each is voted for and elected with as much seriousness as if no one could guess what the result of the poll might be.

A week before the election, a summons is sent to all the masters and wardens of all the city guilds, of which there are seventy-seven, commanding them to assemble the Liverymen at the Guildhall on Michaelmas Day. The hall itself is redolent of sweet-smelling herbs—thyme, camomile, lavender and rosemary, sprigs of which are spread on the platform. These "strewings" are a relict of the belief in the old days that their presence prevented "jail fever." There is no more "jail fever" now, but that does not do away with the herbs.

PRECAUTION TAKEN.

When all is ready for the election the City Reporter steps forward and, according to old-time custom, informs the Liverymen that the Lord Mayor and the Aldermen who have passed the chair, will now retire, in order not to influence the Liverymen in their choice of a new Chief Magistrate—just as if everybody was not quite well aware who was to be elected.

After this precaution has been taken the Liverymen duly vote for the two candidates who have been candidates longest; and the Aldermen solemnly vote for these two nominees. Each Alderman gravely whispers into the ear of the Town Clerk the name of the candidate for whom he votes; the Recorder and Common Sergeant, carefully checking the record of each vote. The result of these grave deliberations is then taken by the Sheriffs, the Common Sergeant and the Common Crier, carrying the mace, to the Lord Mayor and the Aldermen in the room adjoining, the message being too important to be entrusted to any one dignitary.

After due consideration of the respective merits of the two approved candidates, the senior of the two is chosen, the defeated man being sure in the knowledge that he will be chosen next year.

A DICK WHITTINGTON.

London's Lord Mayor-elect, Alderman James Roll, is a modern Dick Whittington, minus the cat. You remember, of course, the story of that most famous of all London's Lord Mayors. With the faithful family cat tagging his footsteps, he tramped from Gloucester to London at the age of 13, succeeded in apprenticing himself to a rich mercer and wound up by becoming rich himself, being knighted and being elected Lord Mayor of London three times in succession. All this away back in the fourteenth century.

WAS OFFICE BOY.

Like Sir Richard, Alderman James Roll came to London as a poor boy from the country to seek his fortune. Then 14 (one year elder than the immortal Dick,) he started work as office boy. He didn't remain an office boy long. Beginning as a collector for the Pearl Life Assurance Company, within twelve years he was made a director, and ultimately became chairman of the organization, holding this office for twenty-five years. When he joined the staff of the Pearl its income was $12,000. On his retirement it had risen to $17,500,000.

He is a well preserved man in the sixties, curiously resembling in personal appearance the late King Edward. Coaching is one of his great hobbies; reading the novels of Charles Dickens another. He unites these interests in the capacity of founder and president of the Pickwick Coaching Club, which has its headquarters at the old oak-beamed George and Vulture Tavern in Birchin Lane, immortalized in the "Pickwick Papers." Needless to say, he is a very rich man, as anybody needs to be who accepts the office of Chief Magistrate of the square mile City of London.

ESKIMOS SEE AIRPLANE.

"When the first airplane arrived at Nome, the Eskimos were afraid of it and yet, three days later, they were exhibiting miniature airplanes carved from ivory. I was in Nome at the time," said Rev. J. T. McQueen, Methodist missionary of Juneau, Alaska. The minister came to Portland to bring three Eskimo children to the Indian school at Chemawa, Marion county.

The Eskimo people are anxious to learn, explained Rev. McQueen, and they are willing to discard old methods of work for new. For example, when taught how to carve ivory with modern tools they adapt themselves to the more modern systems. Mr. McQueen says that the Eskimo is brighter and more anxious to obtain education than the Indian. In Juneau last winter, which is the home of the missionary, the weather did not touch zero, but there was fifteen feet of snow and the winter before there was a depth of twenty feet.

But, getting back to the Eskimos, when they saw the airplane they had no word to describe it, but have decided on seelah quaktak.—[Portland Oregonian.

Ruth Roland Tells How To Instantly Have a Beautiful Rosy-White Complexion

MISS RUTH ROLAND.

New York—The beautiful young actress, Miss Ruth Roland, now successfully starring in that splendid serial, "The Adventures of Ruth," is famous for her beautiful complexion. When her friends inquired about it she said: "It's all due to a toilet preparation called derwillo which I use twice daily. The experience I have had prompts me to make my secret public. This wonderful derwillo instantly beautified my skin and its continued use has made the result permanent." When Mae Edna Wilder, the well known beauty specialist, was interviewed in reference to Miss Roland's remarkable complexion, she stated, "Anyone can have a beautiful complexion when they know how. It's a very simple process. I use the same article in my work, and until you try it you have no idea of the marvelous results. The very first application will astonish you. Go to the toilet counter of any drug or department store and get a bottle of derwillo, then make the following test: Examine you skin critically before your mirror, note carefully its appearance, then cleanse you skin with a good cold cream (Liska Cold Cream I have found to be the best), then apply derwillo as directed. After you have made the first application look in your mirror again and note the surprising change. A peach-like color mounts the cheeks; a baby softness comes to the skin; it makes the skin rosy-white, velvety and radiantly beautiful. It is wonderful for a dark, sallow skin, shiny nose, freckles, tan, oily skin, coarse pores, pimples, blackheads, chapped, rough skin, ruddiness, wrinkles and many other facial blemishes. Now that short sleeves are in vogue you will want beautiful hands and arms. There is nothing like derwillo for this purpose. Derwillo method is absolutely harmless and will not produce or stimulate a growth of hair. It is superior to face powder, as perspiration does not affect it, therefore it stays on better. Over five hundred thousand who have used it have had the same results as Miss Roland and I am sure if you will give it a fair trial you will become just as enthusiastic as she is and always use it in preference to any other powder or beautifier."

NOTE—When asked about Derwillo one of our leading druggists said: "It is truly a wonderful beautifier, away ahead of anything we have ever sold before. We are authorized by the manufacturers to refund the money to anyone who is dissatisfied. This guarantee would not be possible unless the product possessed unusual merit." It is sold in this city under an iron-clad money-back guarantee by all department stores and up-to-date druggists including the Owl Drug Stores.

[illegible] a job as porter, and by [illegible] of the motley crew he met [illegible] to understand.

[illegible] wealthy and refined Mil[illegible] who expressed the [illegible] book:

[illegible] is there in civiliza[illegible] all off from each [illegible] the prisoners in soli[illegible]—you in one cell [illegible] another, and Lulu and [illegible], and everybody else in [illegible] her own and no com[illegible] or exchange of help be[illegible]—it's monstrous."

[illegible] the "thread of flame"—the instinct for beauty and life within him—Jasper Soames at length found himself and so ordered his life as to make real things take the place of artificial distinctions is developed with an insight into the deeper meanings of life that is seldom found in a novel by as popular an author as Basil King.

As to the artistry of the book there may be a question. That it is didactic there is no denying, but so are many noted novels, including those of George Eliot, and yet there be critics benighted enough to consider that great-souled philosopher the greatest English novelist.

But we must admit that "The Thread of Flame," analyzing as it does false social standards and unjust social conditions, has something of the tract in it. But the story is there and it is developed so as to retain the interest.

Providing an author tells a story that is true to life, providing his psychology is sound and his characters ring true, may he not be as didactic as life itself, if he knows how? The prejudice against the didactic novel is the natural reaction of this generation from the Sunday-school book and all its ilk, so popular once upon a time. Such books presented an absurd, because of a false view of life in order to make virtue seem profitable and attractive, and vice unprofitable and unattractive. As to the critical theory that all moral implications must be so carefully concealed by the author as to become apparent only to the seeker after truth, that is another question. When the didacticism becomes so apparent that we write Q.E.D. at the end of the last chapter, sticklers for art before all may be justified in making protest. That Basil King has managed to keep the story paramount can hardly be questioned.

BOOK NOTES.

Much Discussed Book.

"Best autobiography of our time," said Lord Northcliffe recently in a cable to Edward Bok, anent Mr. Bok's much-discussed story of his life. Charles Scribner's Sons had sent a copy of the book, "The Americanization of Edward Bok," to Northcliffe, and the enthusiastic cable was the Viscount's reply.

Eleven Essays.

A glance over the table of contents of Henry A. Beer's, "The Connecticut Wits and Other Essays" (Yale University Press,) just published, shows "The Singer of the Old Swimmin' Hole" (James Whitcomb Riley,) "The Art of Letter Writing," "Thackeray's Centenary," "Retrospects and Prospects of the English Drama," "Sheridan," "The Poetry of the Cavaliers," and so on. The essays touch here and there over a variety of topics but always with that perfect finish and quiet humor which have endeared Mr. Beers to more than one generation.

Women Novelists Rank High.

William Lyon Phelps, the literary critic and Lampson professor of English at Yale, has recently said that "It is pleasant to record that in the front rank of American living novelists we find four women, who shall be named in alphabetical order. The big four are Dorothy Canfield, Zona Gale, Anne Sedgwick, Edith Wharton." Among these "big four" Miss Zona Gale has taken her place by reason of her recent novel, "Miss Lulu Bett," the universal critical acclaim of which has been accompanied by an astonishing and continuing popular success, as reported by her publishers, D. Appleton & Co.

A New "Looking Backward."

Over thirty years ago Edward Bellamy's "Looking Backward" created a sensation on both sides of the Atlantic. Edward Shanks, in his startling novel, "The People of the Ruins" (Stokes) comes near to a similar literary achievement. Its scene is England in the year 2074, when unrestrained class warfare has done its worst for civilization, and the relentless logic of the picture painted may well give the present generation pause.

Edward Shanks is the assistant editor of the London Mercury and a graduate of Trinity College, Cambridge. He served in the Army and the War Office throughout the war and has published several volumes of verse, one of which won a literary prize in England. He is not yet 30 years old.

The latest comment on "Mrs. Warren's Daughter," that much-discussed novel of Sir Henry Johnston's, is from the Christian Register. "Story-telling of a high order," it remarks, "and as a contribution to the social history of our times it is well-nigh incomparable." And elsewhere—"Not so long ago our comment on it would have been 'scarcely a book for a young girl.' Now we say, 'Not the sort of novel to recommend to your maiden aunt.'" However, many aunts, maiden and otherwise, were seen reading it on hotel verandas the past summer.

Jack London for Boys.

Several of Jack London's books have already been recognized as fine books for boys. "The Call of the Wild," "The Sea Wolf," "White Fang" are on many a boy's shelves. It was for Franklin K. Mathiews, the chief scout librarian of the Boy Scouts of America, to see that there was much boy material in the volumes of short stories. He has collected a number of them in a book to be called "Brown Wolf and Other Stories," which he has edited and to which he contributes an interesting introduction.

The Wise Captain.

"Now then, my hearties," said the gallant captain, "you have a tough battle before you. Fight like heroes till your powder is gone; then run. I'm a little lame, so I'll start now."—[Stars and Stripes.

APPENDICITIS

Appendicitis attacks at any moment, even persons seemingly in good health. Usually, however, it is preceded by stomach trouble or constipation. Many people have a bowel movement every day, but it is not a COMPLETE movement and much old, stale matter stays in the system to ferment and cause trouble. Often there is only a small passage in the center of the bowels while the sides are covered with old, hard matter which sticks to the bowels and often poisons the system for months, making you feel tired all the time and "half-sick." Even if your bowels move slightly each day, that is not enough. There must be an occasional THOROUGH, complete cleansing to bring out all the accumulated, poisonous waste matter.

Appendicitis is an intestinal infection spreading to the appendix, and it can be guarded against in the same manner in which you guard against the spread of throat infection (sore throat.) When you have sore throat, you can often prevent further trouble by using an antiseptic wash or gargle to destroy the germs, and a laxative to carry off the poisons from the body. Very similar treatment is necessary to guard against appendicitis. But instead of an antiseptic wash for the throat, an INTESTINAL antiseptic is necessary and a COMPLETE drainage of the bowel system.

INTESTINAL ANTISEPTIC

There is now offered to the public a preparation having the DOUBLE action of an intestinal antiseptic and a COMPLETE system cleaner. This preparation, known as Adler-I-Ka, acts as follows:

It tends to destroy or remove harmful germs and colon bacilli in the intestinal canal, thus guarding against appendicitis and other diseases having their start here.

It is the most COMPLETE system cleaner ever offered to the public, acting on BOTH upper and lower bowel and bringing out foul matter which poisoned the system for months and which nothing else can dislodge. It brings out all gases, thus immediately relieving pressure on the heart and other vital organs. It is astonishing the great amount of poisonous matter Adler-I-Ka draws from the alimentary canal—matter you never thought was in your system. Try it right after a natural movement and notice how much MORE foul matter is brought out which was poisoning your system. In slight disorders, such as occasional constipation, sour stomach, gas on the stomach and sick headache, one spoonful of Adler-I-Ka ALWAYS brings relief. Adler-I-Ka is a constant surprise to people who have used only ordinary stomach and bowel medicines and the various oils and waters, on account of its rapid, pleasant and COMPLETE action.

REPORTS FROM PHYSICIANS

"I have used Adler-I-Ka in my practice and have found nothing to excel it." (Signed) Dr. W. A. Line.

"I have found nothing in my 50 years' practice to excel Adler-I-Ka." (Signed) Dr. James Weaver.

"I use Adler-I-Ka in all bowel cases. Some require only one dose." (Signed) Dr. F. M. Prettyman.

"After taking Adler-I-Ka I feel better than for 20 years. Haven't language to express the AWFUL IMPURITIES eliminated from my system." (Signed) J. E. Puckett.

"Thanks to Adler-I-Ka I can sleep all night now, something I could not do for years." (Signed) Cora E. Noblett.

Adler-I-Ka is sold by leading druggists everywhere.

Says, "Have Taken Mentho-Laxene, and Found It Just as You Said—Only Better" Home-Made and Pure

MOTHERS! Give Pure Medicine to your sick child. Make it at home with concentrated Mentho-Laxene and simple sugar syrup. Directions with each bottle. So many cough medicines contain narcotics—not enough, perhaps, to poison—but enough to deaden the nerves which cause coughing.

Mentho-Laxene contains no narcotics. It is all purity, with Wild Cherry, Tolu, Menthol, Cascara, Grindelia, Ammonium Chloride—a highly concentrated, pure compound.

Give children and aged folks this pleasant home-made mixture, and see how the very first dose does a world of good, for severe cough, tight cold, bronchitis, hoarseness, whooping cough, throat tickle, etc. It is antiseptic; it loosens the tightest cough, and sleep, restful sleep comes.

Mrs. M. L. Martin, 393 Prospect Ave., Buffalo, N. Y., writes: "I have taken your Mentho-Laxene for a short time and found it to be just as you said—only better, for I had a very bad cold and it made me well in four days." Quick results, quick relief gotten cheaply, too—as any one saves two to three dollars by making Mentho-Laxene cough syrup at home. Your druggist has it—you should have it too. —Adv.

Harry Fox and Beatrice Just Old-Time Chums.

But How Congenial They Are on Stage, You Say.

Oh, Yes, They Admit It, and Some Things Besides.

BY GRACE KINGSLEY.

When you see that adorable child, Beatrice Curtis, walk out on the stage at the Orpheum and join Harry Fox in his clever act, with the two working together so smoothly, you naturally say to yourself, "Is she married to him? Is she going to marry him?" Because there's that about a harmony like theirs which somehow gets across the footlights.

Then Harry Fox himself comes out and dashes your romantic dreams by telling you he is already married—to Yancsi Dolly of the famous Dolly Sisters. But—you remember—he adds, a bit sarcastically, that his wife is "broad-minded."

Which leads to an interesting side of the story. For Mr. Fox admitted, the other day, that the two, he and Miss Dolly, never have been happy from the very first. In fact, Mr. Fox stated that the printed story of the expected divorce is true.

And little Beatrice Curtis says she has known Harry Fox nearly all her life. He's always been sort of a hero to her, especially, she says, since he volunteered and went into the naval aviation service during the war. And when you say a man you've known all your life is a hero to you, well, it does seem as if there must be something pretty nice about him, doesn't it?

"Why, he carried me around in his arms when I was 3 years old!" declared Miss Curtis.

Maybe that wasn't beginning any too soon, when you come to think of it! Ah, certainly Mr. Fox hasn't a wrong moniker!

"And he's very fond of me!" Miss Curtis went on.

Well, who wouldn't be.

And then there's propinquity. Oh, I shouldn't be a bit surprised if—but that's another story, as Kipling says.

She came running into her room at the hotel the other morning dressed in a Sassy Jane, holding out her hand in a friendly way, looking like an adorable child with her bobbed hair slightly tousled in a natural sort of way, and I almost asked, "Where's your big prize beauty sister?"

Then I took another look and saw she's a prize beauty herself, but she's so young, so disarmingly natural and child-like, so eagerly inquiring and friendly and unselfconscious that it's hard to remember she's the professional beauty.

Because, when a professional beauty enters a room, you're likely to expect an awful dose of stateliness and a little hokum to go along with her. Instead of which Miss Curtis reminds you of the conventional idea of the fresh little village maid or a fisher maiden, or something entirely bucolic like that.

AN H. FISHER BEAUTY.

She's a little fisher maiden all right, but the "fisher" is spelled with a capital F, because she's one of the girls Harrison Fisher has often painted.

In fact, Miss Curtis is one of the five or six or nine or eleven girls that Harrison Fisher has pronounced "the prettiest girl in America." Oh, well, they probably all are.

"I'm sure Miss Curtis is. She has a wholesomely rosy skin, perfect features, a red mouth, and big brilliant eyes of that indeterminate color because the pupils are so large, but I suspect they are blue, and they have that almond shape painters are always supposed to rave about.

It seems Beatrice's mother is Anna Chandler, famous in vaudeville, and her father is Curtis, the well-known New York booking agent. They decided their daughter wasn't to go on the stage, so Mrs. Curtis took little Beatrice away off to England and put her in a boarding school.

"But I was terribly unhappy," said Beatrice, "the girls' ways were all so different from mine. I just couldn't get used to it. So I cried so much and got so thin and pale that by and by mother came and got me and brought me home to America.

"I still wanted to go on the stage, so father, to cure me, as he thought, sent me out on the worst little horrid old vaudeville circuits, in acts that were hard for me to work in, and I almost gave up. Then I got an engagement filling in Mollie King's part in 'Good Morning, Judge,' after she married and re-

HERALDS ADVANCE IN CINEMA PLAY.

AUTHOR OF "KISMET" ALSO TELLS WHAT PICTURE ART NEEDS.

Deeper psychological treatment, more intimate development of character, not mere situation, but contest of human wills from which the situation develops naturally; the exemplification of a big theme, a universal appeal.

These are the elements that, according to Edward Knoblock, the noted playwright, must be infused into the modern drama of the screen, that it may advance continually and appeal to every race and class by reason of its essential humanness.

Mr. Knoblock, who wrote the Otis Skinner play, "Kismet," arrived last week at the Lasky studio with Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, and will remain for an indefinite period, studying at first hand the technique of the motion picture and developing an original story for Paramount pictures, which he and Mr. Lasky discussed while the latter was in England recently.

"You still hear people say," observed Mr. Knoblock, "that the screen has not developed, or at least not in a measure commensurate with the passage of time since its inception. Of course, it will not require any great amount of evidence to convince even the most skeptical that this is a fallacy, yet as I suggested to Mr. Lasky, it would be illuminating to some and highly amusing to others, to show by deadly parallel something of the actual and enormous development in the cinema in recent years. Suppose that a picture made five years ago and another ten years ago were shown simultaneously or prior to the exhibition of a modern photoplay—arguments would be forever silenced. The advance is simply tremendous.

"I presume that there is always room for further advancement, and I believe that it is in dealing with human character to even a greater extent that the most universal appeal will be achieved. It is true that in certain characteristics, the various races differ, but certain impulses are the same in every race. If anyone will trouble to delve in the ancient literature, he will find the same conflicts of human will, the same qualities of human nature exemplified in every language. The big theme is also an important factor. A story must be big enough to hold and human enough to appeal to every audience."

A story of Edward Knoblock, "Appearances," is now being filmed for Paramount at the London studios. The title and character of the one to be made in the West, he says, it is still too early to describe, since he is developing it very carefully and means to gain a very clear insight into the intricacies of photoplay making while thus engaged.

GERTRUDE ATHERTON BUSY.

Gertrude Atherton is spending all her time on the set at the Goldwyn studios with Director Wallace Worsley, who is holding the megaphone on "Noblesse Oblige," Mrs. Atherton's first original screen story. Mabel Julienne Scott and Lewis S. Stone have the leading roles. The company gave an informal party this week in celebration of Miss Scott's twenty-fourth birthday.

FORSOOK MALLET FOR MEGAPHONE.

Former Keystone Cop, Now Director, Boosts Actor's Cause.

BY EDWIN SCHALLERT.

It isn't every day in the fiscal film year that a large concern like Metro Pictures Corporation decides that a director is sufficiently gifted to have his name attached to productions. But that's no reason why it shouldn't happen occasionally. And in the instance of Wesley Ruggles it has happened, according to advance heraldings regarding the Alice Lake starring feature, on which he is now working at the studio.

This picture is to be known as a Wesley Ruggles Production, evidently out of respect for the achievements of Mr. Ruggles in such present and past successes as "For France," a patriotic war picture made for Vitagraph; Charlie Chaplin's burlesque on "Carmen," in which he assisted, and "The Leopard Woman," starring Louise Glaum, at Tally's, among others.

Mr. Ruggles started on the road to his present elevated post of generalship from the lowly rank of private in the crack regiment of Keystone cops that used to squad-right around the Sennett fun factory when it was just a "lot."

They found at the studio that he wasn't keen on handling a club, so they gave him a megaphone. And told him to go to it. He did. And that's what started his career.

He made Syd Chaplin comedies, then went over to Charlie's studio, and later to Vitagraph. He joined the Army at the outbreak of the war, spent about a year abroad, and climaxed his part in the American expedition by making a picture in France on a scenario by Frances Marion.

Dramatic productions are his forte.

"Feature plays must of necessity be serious," he said, in giving his views on this point. "Farces afford very poor screen material. Just recall this lighter stuff and think how few really worth-while pictures you have seen.

"The story wherein the smile blends with the tear is the ideal. No photoplay nowadays can be serious throughout. You must break the tensity here and there with the laugh just as the dramatist does for the stage.

"Curiously enough, I always feel that I owe my greatest debt to a comedian—Charlie Chaplin. From him I learned the finer phases of technique, which he knows as do few makers of pictures."

Although Mr. Ruggles is an absolute and unqualified booster for the work of D. W. Griffith he himself does not favor domination by the director, which is always associated with the Griffith name.

"I want actors when I am making a picture. I want people who can give me something more than simply their physical selves to work with. Often the best ideas I have put over in pictures have come from some suggestion made by a player. Their individuality is what counts in a picture—that is what we need more than anything else in present-day features."

This almost concurs with the opinion of House Peters, the actor, whom Mr. Ruggles was very successful in directing in "The Leopard Woman."

Following the completion of the present Alice Lake picture, Mr. Ruggles, it is understood, will make another special production for Metro. Then—if things go right—he intends to carry out a long-thought-out plan for the forming of his own organization.

POSTER ARTIST ASSISTS.

Adolph Troidler, one of the foremost poster artists and illustrators, is to prepare a full set of posters for the forthcoming William De Mille production for Paramount, "Midsummer Madness." The contract with Mr. Troidler is the direct result of the first projection room showing of the De Mille production before the Famous Players-Lasky directors, all of whom declared it to be one of the best pictures they had ever seen.

'TIS MAN'S YEAR ON THE STAGE.

Even Male Dancers Shine Over Coryphees.

"First Year" Clangs Gong as Notable Play.

Bad Tomato Sauce Seems Not to Mar "Spanish Love."

BY HARRY CARR.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—This season the poor despised he-actor has come back to life again. Most of the big hits this season have been made—and are being made—by men. Take that, you vamps!

Strange to say even the big hits of all the principal "girl shows" are men.

Perhaps the most successful of the girly-girly shows now running in New York is "Tiptop" in which Fred Stone is literally the whole thing as far as shining lights are concerned. Fred Stone, some jazz and some legs compose the offering.

Frank Tinney is the only featured star in "Tickle Me," another influential hit among the girl shows.

Raymond Hitchcock is not only the star but also the proprietor of "Hitchy Koo," and beside named the show after himself.

"The Half Moon," which has hit Broadway in the eye, is built around our old friend Joe Cawthorn.

The top card in the "Greenwich Village Follies" is a female impersonator and Morris Gest has frankly featured the men dancers in "Mecca" despite the fact that a large part of the show consists of ladies without any visible clothing.

"Apple Blossoms," "The Night Boat" and several of the best of the comic operas were built around men comedians and featured them. Even "Mary" is largely men stars.

At the Hippodrome the biggest smoke that emerges is a man clown—Marceline—with a man bareback rider running him a close second. Julia Sanderson is the only woman star featured in any of the musical shows now running in New York. Or at least she was until last Monday when Delisha, the adorable French girl, opened in "Afgar."

Truly, it is a man's year. Many of the best plays dangle from the firmament attached to men stars.

The best play I have seen in New York this season is "The First Year," written by Frank Craven and in which he stars. Frank Bacon in "Lightnin'," Arnold Daly in "The Tavern," George M. Cohan in "The Meanest Man," Holbrook Blinn in "The Bad Man," William Faversham in "The Prince and the Pauper," are among the hits of the year.

Two of the successes of New York are not to be accounted for. "Spanish Love" and "The Mirage," both continue blithely on their way doing large business without any visible means of support and under the frowns of the critics. There must be some special providence that watches over them. They thrive on roasts.

PALE IMITATION.

When Florence Reed first opened in "The Mirage" every critic in New York spit on his hands and took a firmer grip on the good old club. In truth, it was a punk play and should not have been! Wherefore it proceeded to prosper and do mighty business. It is a faint and punk imitation of "The Easiest Way"—at least so it seems to me.

"Spanish Love" is an amazing thing. Everybody has panned it—not only in the newspapers, but everybody coming out of the theater takes pains to hunt up his friends and expose the extent of his anguish, but it goes right along making the dough.

Much of its prosperity is doubtless due to its name which suggests something very hot and sultry in love.

To tell the truth it isn't very sultry. It is very tame. The peculiarity of the show is that the actors act about everywhere except on the stage. Evidently some producer had been to Japan and admired the device of having the players walk out on a plank over the heads of the audience. Anyhow they are all over the house.

During the entire first act every actor makes his entrance either from a box or from the aisles and up over the footlights. They have taken out the orchestra (which is one form of relief anyhow,) and the actors stroll up and down in front of the stage. If you are in the front row you feel a little nervous lest they back off and sit in your lap when the drama grows intense.

DISTURBING DRAMA.

You don't trust anybody. You get interested in what is going on in the usual spots on the stage when a screech at your side fairly splits your ear drums as a thespian bounds out from the foyer and goes galloping down the aisle to get his cue.

You begin to look with dark suspicion at the ushers and keep the fat man at your side under anxious surveillance lest he drag out a sombrero from under his seat and go whooping up on the stage with the others. It is very disturbing, very disturbing.

The night I went a woman sitting next to me asked her husband, "Why don't the actors stay up on the stage?"

"I guess they are afraid to take a chance," was hubby's sarcastic reply.

Mary Roberts Rinehart and Avery Hopwood, the two most successful dramatists now writing for the stage are responsible for "Spanish Love" and, my Gawd, it's a lot to be responsible for! Whoever stage-managed and directed it should be carried gently down to Ellis Island and shipped back.

With the movies a new style of trouping has come in. In "Lightnin'" and "The First Year" the acting is all as natural as life itself. No one gestures, except as people do in real life, and every actor speaks with the simple naturalness of actuality.

The old style acting of the Booths and John McCullough would be laughed off the stage in New York today. The instructions of the best stage managers now is to "do nothing; just think it. Don't gesture. Stand still and think your emotions."

Why Not Beautify Your Dining Room Before Thanksgiving?

Whether you plan to entertain friends or not you will want your dining room to look its best for Thanksgiving.

And following Thanksgiving there will be many other entertaining occasions in which the dining room will play a major role—Christmas, New Year's and all the in-between events of the social season.

It is the time of the year when the dining room is on "dress parade," for the very hospitality of the dining room creates that frame of mind which makes guests observing. And the pride of the hostess is "the impression her dining room makes upon her guests and family."

The "California" by virtue of its very unusual selections in dining room furnishings is in position to render a really helpful service to those who desire to beautify their dining rooms.

Perhaps you have long promised yourself a dinner wagon, or a side table—or may be a new rug is needed—or possibly a new table and chairs—whatever the need, be it a single piece or a complete suite—be it for a modest home or for the pretentious mansion, the "California" offers you the very newest and most desirable selections, at all times, honestly and fairly priced.

Although the window and floor displays of the "California" reflect high quality, we want you to know that you can buy furnishings of even moderate price here at as low cost as anywhere. And we want you to feel free to come to this store whenever you will, and to make your own value comparisons without any thought of obligation to buy.

OF ART AND ARTISTS.

BY ANTONY ANDERSON.

From "Fra Lippo Lippi."

For, don't you mark, we're made so that we love
First when we see them painted, things we have passed
Perhaps a hundred times, nor cared to see:
And so they are better painted—better to us,
Which is the same thing. Art was given for that—
God uses us to help each other so,
Lending our minds out. Have you noticed now
Your cullion's hanging face? A bit of chalk,
And, trust me, but you should though. How much more
If I drew higher things with the same truth!
That were to take the prior's pulpit-place—
Interpret God to all of you! Oh! oh!
It makes me mad to see what men shall do,
And we in our graves! This world's no blot for us,
Nor blank; it means intensely, and means good.
To find its meaning is my meat and drink.

—[Robert Browning.

Education of the Artist.

Is an artist's work the product of teaching or temperament?

The inevitable answer would seem to be "Both," but that reply, on second and third considerations, will call for many modifications. If the artist be a big man, undoubtedly his temperament, or his personality, if you prefer to call it that, would have the most to say in his development, though even with such as he, environment and early instruction would take a hand. The smaller men are easier to account for. They are more plastic under the manipulations of outside hands and forces—or, if they are not more so than the bigger men, they are at any rate quicker to cool and remain in their first mold. They don't grow and "bust through."

Thus we see how "schools" in art follow one another as the night the day, and that the leader in each case is always one of the big men, when there are not two or three such leaders. The leaders are often, sometimes quite unconsciously, the instigators of revolt, rebellion and emancipation, and though they themselves may be much too busy to utter a single war cry, their followers have generally time for a great many. Listen to the shibboleths, varying from year to year—"Impressionism!" "Post-impressionism!" "Cubism!" "Futurism!"—and note how each and every one of them gradually dies down to a silence so tense that you can touch it with your hand.

Yet the slogan may be as needful in art as in any other human effort, for it arouses enthusiasm in the new discovery, the fresh angle of vision. Without its recurrence, it is very possible—even probable—that art would remain at a standstill, and that artists would grind out pictures with the precision and regularity of a machine, each as much like the others as a pea is like all other peas. Efficiency, if you like—but assuredly not art.

Impressionism and post-impressionism are not uttered aloud very often nowadays, and certainly they are never shouted in the studios and galleries, but they remain in the fabric, they are a part of the structure of the art of today, and they will not be discarded tomorrow. So, perhaps, with cubism and futurism. No new ism has ever been quite useless, even if, at the time of its first inception, it appeared to be too fantastical for human credence. It was quietly absorbed in the big body of art, and it may be that it proved to be exactly the stimulant needed at the moment. We have not been in the habit of thinking of art as a living organism, but it is. It sickens, weakens and dies under the coddling of an unchanging and unexciting regime. It waxes too fat and sleek, without the power of advance movement. It needs to be "bled"—almost to death—now and again.

Pictures by John Rich.

As no list of titles accompanies the exhibition of some twenty or more figure studies and portraits that John Rich is holding through the month of November at the Friday Morning Club, I cannot proceed as I would like to do in some instances, "from the general to the particular," in speaking of these admirable pictures.

However, though Mr. Rich's canvases gleam and glow with light and color, these generalities need not of necessity be "glittering." This artist's work is too genuine and too sincere for any such specious admiration. Approach it with an open mind, an understanding heart and a love for the beautiful, and you are sure to be made happy. All are not important canvases, to be sure; all are not masterpieces (masterpieces are not painted every day in the year,) but each has its moiety of beauty—even the little studies of dolls, bisque and china, daintily parodying the lives of fashionable ladies.

In spite of a certain sameness of effect—Mr. Rich's feeling for beauty is unusually consistent — you will find, on closer study of the canvases, that they offer considerable variety. We are given two studies of men—one is the painter himself—with the many studies of beautiful young girls and charming younger ones, and a very brilliant nude, also feminine in subject.

Mr. Rich has always been attracted, artistically speaking, to the beauty of women, their draperies and their backgrounds, and has painted these delectable things with the sureness of sight and touch that has almost invariably produced attractive pictures. Nor is feeling for character lacking. It is, indeed, always conspicuously present, and so, though his girls are all charming to look at, they are not all alike. The artist is a portrait painter even before he is a figure painter.

While the pictures in the present collection have, for the most part, been shown before in other exhibitions, their familiarity breeds greater admiration; further, the study of them convinces us anew of John Rich's sterling worth as artist and painter.

"The Spirit Priest."

Henry Lovins, formerly of Los Angeles, writes me as follows from San Diego, where he has a studio in the Sacramento Building in Balboa Park:

"I am writing to inform you that I have entered upon a new art, such as perhaps has never been attempted before—the attempt at rediscovering the colors used in the decorative arts of the ancient Maya Indians who inhabited this continent thousands of years ago. My inspirations are interpreted from the stone tablets and monuments which are, in most instances, partly mutilated, so that I have the work to restore the compositions and paint them on canvas in beautiful colors and also produce the texture of stone. This idea has grown out of hundreds of experiments, until I have perfected it to a sufficient importance to attract museums and collectors. I am now at work on a rather big piece of mural painting for the California State Building, into which I am to have placed a number of my large murals, based upon the culture of the Maya Indians.

"Dr. Hewett, director of the San Diego Museum, an archaeologist of international fame, has interested himself in my work, and is to give a lecture before the Friday Morning Club this Friday on the subject of Maya art, and has taken with him one of my Indian panels, which will eventually go to the Santa Fe Museum, to show to the members present. I am inclosing a photograph of this particular panel, and if you wish to use it you are at lib-

Exquisite Flexible Braceletes Masterpieces in Jewelling

Excepting possibly the finger ring, the bracelet is today the most important article of a woman's jewelry.

It is quite the style now to wear several bracelets at the same time—perhaps one of all-sapphires; another of cut onyx; another of sparkling diamonds—the selection being according to the preference of the wearer.

The ordinary conception of a bracelet can, however, give no idea of the marvelous beauty of the wondrous creations shown by Feagans & Co.—some of them made expressly for our house in Paris.

One masterpiece for instance, a flexible and expansible bracelet, is set with 90 square or emerald cut diamonds set in platinum bars joined by black onyx circular links—a most unusual creation, priced at $1600.00

Another, in which large Oriental sapphires and diamonds alternate, (also flexible and expanding,) is priced at $2100.00.

Another set with 60 fine diamonds weighing 6.43 carats is priced at $3000.00.

Another of very unique design closely paved with diamonds and set with large Oriental rubies is priced at $5000.00.

Another of diamonds and sapphires at $6500.00.

One of diamonds and emeralds at $8000.00—and many others of really indescribable beauty, all examples of the very highest art in fine jewelling.

We believe it is the most pretentious showing of fine flexible bracelets in this part of America.

Of Art and Artists.

erty to do so. Dr. Hewett will try to arrange for an exhibition of my work for the first two weeks in December."

The photograph that Mr. Lovins inclosed is entitled "The Spirit Priest," and is one of two that flanked "The Tablet of the Cross," both tablets having been painted for the museum at Santa Fe, N. M. It is an interpretation, in paint, of the Maya stone tablet in relief found in the Temple of the Cross at Palenque, State of Chiapas, Mexico. Unfortunately, it will not reproduce in this column with sufficient distinctness to give my readers an idea of its striking interest.

All the lines of the composition are symbolical of the religious and mythological conditions that governed the lives of the prehistoric race of the American continent. The old "spirit priest" is a personage of high rank who was supposed to be superhuman. He is dressed in a jaguar's skin, his headdress consisting of feathers taken from the sacred bird known as the quetzal, whose head crowns the headdress of the priest.

The priest's coloring is gray, I am informed, and his eyes are green. The background is a gorgeous turquoise blue, symbolical of infinity.

We await with interest the promised exhibition in Los Angeles of Mr. Levins's new decorative panels.

Hawaiian Water Colors.

A collection of small water colors of scenes in two of the islands of Hawaii, the work of Julie E. Raymond, has been showing for the past two weeks in the Public Library of Los Angeles. Next week the sketches will be exhibited in the rooms of the Hollywood Art Association, to go later to Laguna Beach.

These twenty-five studies are very interesting. Though not forcefully or brilliantly painted—they are too carefully concerned with facts for that—they tell us many things that we want to know about the scenic beauties of Hawaii. As their author explicitly states, they are purely "educational," and as such they will be studied with pleasure and profit.

Three Exhibitions.

An exhibition of paintings by Florence Parker Bloser is being held at the artist's studio, 162 North Alexandria avenue, Los Angeles, from November 14 to November 21. An exhibition of paintings and designs for theatrical costumes is now on at the home-studio of Martin J. Jackson, 222 South Mariposa avenue. Recent water-color landscapes from the brush of Helen Balfour are exhibited to the end of November in the Battey gallery, Colorado street, Pasadena. All three exhibitions will receive further consideration in this column next week.

Where Credit is Due.

Last week I made mention—though not always in laudation—of some painting by each of the artists contributing to the exhibition of works by California painters at the galleries of Cannel & Chaffin. One painter, however, was left out, quite inadvertently. F. Carl Smith's landscape is too good to be neglected. Its simplicity, its sincerity and its truth give it great charm, and it is painted in a technique admirably suited to these excellent qualities.

Miss Bush's Miniatures.

An unusually interesting program will be given by the Sierra Madre Woman's Club on November 22. Pictures by members of the California Art Club will be exhibited, and a comprehensive showing of the distinguished miniatures by Ella Sheppard Bush will also be given. In addition, Miss Bush will present a paper on miniature painting, written by herself, that was recently published in one of the northern newspapers.

A tunic of white crystal and black beads is worn over a silver cloth foundation. Black tulle side-panels form a train.

A GOOD REPORTER.

At 19 Years Dickens Won Approval of British Lord.

The reporter's pencil trained the hand of Charles Dickens, who at 19 years old was doing reporter's work of such excellence as to draw from Lord Stanley the prediction that the stripling was destined for a greater career.

Dickens had reported the last part of Lord Stanley's speech in the House of Commons against O'Connell. When the proofs of the speech were sent to Lord Stanley, that gentleman returned them with the remark that the two-thirds of it were so badly reported as to be unintelligible, but that if the gentleman who reported the last part of it so admirably would call upon him, he would repeat his speech and have it reported again.

The youth, notebook in hand, made his appearance at Lord Stanley's and was reluctantly shown by the servant into the library. When the master of the house came in, he expressed astonishment with his eyes as well by his words.

"I beg pardon," said he, "but I had hoped to see the gentleman who reported part of my speech."

"I am that genteman," answered Dickens, turning red.

"Oh, indeed!" said Stanley, turning to conceal a smile.

Sir James Graham came in, and Stanley began his speech. At first he stood still, addressing one of the window curtains as "Mr. Speaker." Then he walked up and down the room, gesticulating and declaiming with all the fire he had shown in the House of Commons.

Sir James, with a newspaper report before him, followed, and occasionally, corrected Stanley. When the proof of the speech had been read by the orator, he returned it to the editor with a note predicting the future success of his young reporter.

Many years later, Charles Dickens, as the popular novelist, was invited to dine with Lord Derby, as Stanley had become. The guests were shown into the library, and Dickens, though he had forgotten the incident of the speech, felt a strange sensation as if he had been there before.

At last something recalled the reporting adventure and he reminded his host of it. Lord Derby was delighted to recognize in the novelist his boy reporter.—[Detroit News.

Totally Insufficient.

The prisoner was up for bootlegging, but only one bottle of whisky was found upon him. The jury retired with "Exhibit A," but filed gloomily back at the expiration of ten minutes.

"Gentlemen of the jury, have you reached a verdict?" asked the clerk.

"We have not," stated the foreman aggrievedly. "We must have more evidence. Them last two jurymen that sat down to the end of the table swear there ain't an atom of proof against this feller."—[Unidentified.

[illegible] Wide Interest.

[illegible] of friends found [illegible] announcement of the [illegible] of Miss Evangeline [illegible] Phineas Banning, [illegible] on Thursday by Miss Grier's mother, Mrs. M. J. Grier of Buckingham Road. Mr. Banning, who is a student at the University of California, is the son of the late Joseph Brent Banning, and Mrs. Banning of Westlake avenue, this city.

Until Mr. Banning graduates, in May, plans for the wedding will not be made. The young couple have known each other for several years, their romance having started at high school. Miss Grier is a graduate of Mt. Vernon Seminary, Washington, D.C., and this summer was bridesmaid at the wedding of her brother, Thomas J. Grier, Jr., and Miss Sallie Havens, at Piedmont. Later she served as maid of honor at the marriage of Margaret Mortenson and Crawford May, in Pasadena.

The marriage of the couple will unite two prominent families. The bride's father, the late Thomas J. Grier, was a noted mining man of the Black Hills, in South Dakota, while the members of the Banning family, for nearly three-quarters of a century have been important figures in financial and social circles of Southern California. Before Mr. Grier's death, six years ago, the family spent their winters in Los Angeles, and so became well-established here, having hosts of friends. Mrs. Grier came from Edinburgh, Scotland, having been before her marriage Miss Palethorpe. Mr. Banning's grandfather, Gen. Phineas Banning, was a notable figure, and much beloved. He came here in 1851, and was the prime factor in the construction of Wilmington Harbor. Mr. Banning is also the nephew of Capt. William Banning and Hancock Banning, and is a brother of Miss Katherine Banning, and Joe Banning. Besides T. J. Grier, Jr., Miss Grier has an older brother and sister, James Ferrie and Miss Margaret Ferrie, and two younger brothers, Lisgar and Ormonde Grier, all of this city.

Coming Out Party.

Society is taking keen interest in the reception that Mrs. J. Bond Francisco and her young daughter, Miss Nanette Francisco, are to give Thursday afternoon. It is to be an eventful day for the daughter of the house, for she is to make her formal debut. If the fleet is still here young officers with their gold-braided uniforms are to lend color and distinction.

It is to be a large affair, and is to mark the first of a series of studio teas that Mr. and Mrs. Francisco and their daughter are to give during the winter.

Among those who are to assist Mrs. Francisco are Mrs. Dean Mason, Mrs. Charles C. Carpenter, Mrs. I. N. Van Nuys, Mrs. J. E. Fishburn, Mrs. E. C. Wilson, Mrs. J. Ross Clark, Mrs. A. McGaffey, Mrs. James Tabor Fitzgerald, Mrs. L. F. Gottschalk, Mrs. E. F. C. Klokke, Mrs. Mina Botsford, Mrs. William J. Bettingen, Mrs. Frederick Klamp, Mrs. F. A. Stephenson, Mrs. Ben Williams, Miss Amelia Hogan, Miss Helen Worthington and Miss Helen Iten.

By Miss Phillips.

Miss Katherine Phillips was yesterday hostess at a pretty luncheon for a company of thirty buds, in celebration of the birthday of Miss Katherine Cheney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Cheney.

By Mrs. McFie.

Miss Mary Warren of La Jolla, who is to marry Lee Milbank on November 24, at St. John's Episcopal Church, is to be honoree at a luncheon that her future sister-in-law, Mrs. Lyman Ross McFie, is to give on Tuesday at the Mary Louise tea room in the Brack Shops. There are to be sixteen guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Harrison.

A hearty welcome is in store for Mr. and Mrs. William Preston Harrison, who are returning today from Chicago. They left here early in the summer, visiting in interesting places in the Canadian Rockies and in New York, Boston and Washington before going to Chicago, their old home. They enjoyed many social courtesies while away, and found time to give pleasure to numerous Los Angeles friends visiting there. Among these were Dr. and Mrs. Norman Bridge and Mrs. Kate Greenleaf Locke. No couple that has come to Los Angeles in years has enjoyed more popularity than Mr. and Mrs. Harrison.

Mr. and Mrs. Fenton.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Fenton of 4763 Elmwood road left Thursday for New York, where they will visit her sister, Mrs. T. J. Freeman, on Riverside drive. They will also visit in Buffalo and Niagara Falls, and will be accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Freeman to Palm Beach and then to the Fenton winter home in New Orleans, whence they sail for Cuba, planning to return in three months by way of the Panama Canal.

House Guest.

Miss Gladys Keeney, a charming girl from Santa Barbara, is a house guest of Mrs. Stephen Vincent Childs. As she is in mourning, no entertaining will be done for her, but she is enjoying motor parties and quiet little visits with friends.

Back to Bay City.

Mr. and Mrs. George Hugh Banning, who came south to attend the funeral of his uncle, the late Joseph Brent Banning, last week, have returned to their home in Berkeley.

A Pretty Affair.

Mrs. Martha Nelson McCan and her sister, Miss Laura Smith, were joint hostesses at two pleasing affairs yesterday. The first was a bridge and tea party for twenty-five guests in the afternoon, followed by another bridge affair in the evening for a company of thirty. The tea table was a mass of chrysanthemums in all the bronze, yellow and pink shades.

Senator and Mrs. Oddie.

Society is planning a hearty welcome to U. S. Senator-elect and Mrs. Tasker L. Oddie of Nevada, who are to arrive tomorrow to visit her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Goodwin. Senator Oddie served several terms as Governor of his State. Mr. and Mrs. Goodwin are arranging several dinners in their honor and numerous other friends are planning entertainment for them. They were expected last week, but tarried in San Francisco.

Mr. Vescei.

Desider Josef Vescei, the brilliant young pianist, lionized by society, is returning tomorrow to New York, where he will join his bride, the former Nina Jones of Montecito. Just before returning here to look after affairs in connection with his naturalization, he and Mrs. Vescei were in Washington and attended the brilliant reception at which Capt. and Mrs. Randolph Huntington Miner were hosts. He will return alone to Los Angeles in February and will meet his wife in Washington later, where they will visit before going abroad.

Camera Glimpses of Society Folk.

Miss Warner and her mother, Mrs. S. M. Warner, have come from New York to Los Angeles to make their home and are domiciled at 680 South Carondelet street. They are not unknown here, having spent several winters in Pasadena and Los Angeles before the war. Miss Warner was one of the prominent members of the Junior League in New York, an organization composed of 1000 of the most representative young society women of Gotham, including Mrs. Vincent Astor, Mrs. Lydig Hoyt, Mrs. Willard Straight (Dorothy Payne Whitney) and Mrs. Roderick Tower (Flora Payne Whitney,) who, by the way, resides here. Mrs. Van Santvoord-Smith (Kate Fowler,) formerly of Pasadena, is a member and so is Mrs. Eric Fisher Wood, who was Miss Vera De Ropp of this city. Miss Thomas was a charming hostess recently at a dinner-dance in honor of Miss Mary Warren and Lee Milbank, who are soon to marry. Miss Schneider is to assist at a tea that Miss Mary Gray is to give this week, and Mrs. Meek is a charming young matron of Atlanta, Ga., and Dallas, Tex., who is here for the winter.

Bobrick-Slavin Nuptials.

An unexpected, but most pleasing bit of news was told in The Times Friday with announcement of the marriage of Arthur Bobrick, formerly of this city, and Miss Edith Slavin of Pasadena. The ceremony took place Thursday at noon in White Plains, N. Y.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Mathew S. Slavin of Pasadena and Mr. Bobrick is the son of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Bobrick of Burlington avenue, and a brother of Mrs. Alfred Wright of this city. He was one of the most popular bachelors in Los Angeles until he went to San Francisco a few years ago, where he was in business. He has resided in New York since May, where he is connected with the National Paper Products Company. Not even intimate friends knew the couple were engaged. The pair have known each other since childhood.

Mrs. Sarah Slavin Childs of Pasadena was her sister's matron of honor, while Ross Kirkpatrick, famous Alaska aviator, was best man. The former Miss Slavin is unusually attractive and was one of the most prominent girls in Crown City society.

By Mrs. Thom.

One of the loveliest luncheons of the month was that presided over Friday by Mrs. Cameron Thom at "Wildair," her West Adams-street mansion, in honor of Mrs. Isaac Ridgeway Trimble of Baltimore and Montecito. The table was handsomely adorned with autumn flowers. Plates were set for sixteen. Lady Popham-Young and Mrs. Marcus Daly were among the out-of-town guests. Mrs. Daly and her sister, Mrs. Joseph A. Lewis, are leaving tomorrow for New York, where Mrs. Lewis will remain with her sister over the Christmas holidays.

Admiral and Mrs. Sebree.

Rear-Admiral and Mrs. Uriel Sebree, whose beautiful home in Ocean Boulevard, Coronado, has been the scene of many attractive affairs, are enjoying a delightful visit with relatives in the East, having left last week for Kansas City and Springfield, Mo., where they will remain until just before Christmas, returning to Coronado for the holiday festivities.

At Coronado.

After several months' visit in San Francisco with her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Hamilton, Mrs. John D. Spreckels has returned to her home in Coronado. Mr. and Mrs. Spreckels were guests of honor at a charmingly arranged dinner party given by Dr. and Mrs. Francis Meade, the color scheme of old gold and green being effectively carried out with a profusion of chrysanthemums and foliage. Other guests were Mrs. Spreckels's sister, Mrs. Consmiller of New York, who is her house guest for the winter; Rear-Admiral and Mrs. Roger Welles, Mr. and Mrs. Melville Klauber, Gen. and Mrs. John McClellan, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert E. Anthony and Dr. Humphrey J. Stewart.

For Mrs. Robinson.

Mrs. Charles Robinson, a charming matron from Chicago, was honor guest at a tea of pleasing appointments over which Mrs. Margaret Hamm was hostess on Wednesday last. Assisting Mrs. Hamm were Mmes. John Breden, Harriet Davis, Marie Caystile and Miss Helen Sheehan.

Other guests were Miss Hope Clarke of London, Mmes. K. Weaver, Erasmus Wilson, Isaac Ridgeway Trimble, Emma Col

DIAMONDS
The Gift Supreme

This is to be a Diamond Christmas

NO OTHER jewel so adds to the social prestige, or so enhances the charms of the wearer, as does the Diamond in any one of its lovely modern settings.

Diamonds of today, more regal than any monarch of old could have purchased with a king's ransom, are the result of the marvelous skill of our modern diamond cutters, who, with their unerring technique, bring out all the dazzling beauty and chromatic values of this charming "Queen of Gems"—the Diamond.

From the diamond markets of the old world Donavan & Seamans Company has assembled a wondrous diamond collection—the more wonderful, perhaps, because each year sees a diminution in the world's diamond output, making it increasingly difficult to find gems of the intrinsic beauty and value demanded by a more and more discriminating public. Here, however, is a scintillating array of perfect stones which is a delight to the eye of the most critical. Master craftsmen have designed us appropriate mountings of Platinum, of Gold and of Onyx. Irresistible, indeed, are the diamonds set in the new Bar Pins, Pendants, Bracelets, Ribbon Watches, Wedding Rings, Dinner Rings, Scarf Pins and other novelties appealing to those of ultra taste or fancy; each one with an indivi-quality and smartness that mark it a production of this house. See the many exquisite combinations of diamonds with square cut Sapphires, Rubies, Emeralds, Black Opals and other precious stones.

"Dinna Forget" there are only 35 shopping days until Christmas

As a gift the diamond reigns supreme. As an investment nothing quite equals it. There will be no reductions in the price of Diamonds, indeed they will, rather, go up according to the cabled advices sent out by the world's diamond syndicate. Hence, aside from the joy in the possession of perfect diamonds is the indisputable fact that "Diamonds are as good as Money"—always.

At Covina.

Miss Rosita Kerckhoff of Covina became the bride of Robert Walter Lovell of Montreal, Can., at an impressive ceremony Wednesday morning at the picturesque Church of the Sacred Heart in Covina. It was witnessed by a distinguished assemblage that came from all over the State. The ceremony was performed by Father M. H. Garry of Covina, assisted by Father O. Villa of Santa Barbara. High mass followed.

The church was handsomely adorned with masses of chrysanthemums in orchid shades with bamboo and palms, while cathedral candles illuminated the altar.

The bride, who went to the altar with her father, Mr. Anton P. Kerckhoff, was a lovely picture in her gown of white duchesse satin and silver lace with which she wore a long tulle veil edged with real lace that had been worn on her grandmother's veil. Her shower bouquet was fashioned from white orchids and lilies of the valley.

Her petite debutante sister, Miss Elise Kerckhoff, wearing a frock of orchid taffeta, made en bouffant with a picture hat of orchid tulle trimmed with ostrich plumes, was maid of honor. Her flowers were Columbia roses. Porter Kerckhoff was best man, while the ushers were Gerald Young, Webster B. Holmes and George Kerckhoff.

Alexander Anderson, a noted musician, presided at the organ. A breakfast for sixty relatives was given at the Kerckhoff home after the ceremony. Among those from out of town were the bride's great-grandmother, Mme. Ramona Trusell of Santa Barbara, and her grandmother, Mme. Rosa Porter of Los Angeles. Others were Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Kerckhoff, Mme. Elise Kerckhoff, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Eshman, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Kerckhoff of Los Angeles, Mr. and Mrs. Arza Porter of San Luis Obispo, Mr. and Mrs. I. Porter of Santa Maria, Miss Mayme Trusell of Santa Barbara, Mme. De la Torre of Los Angeles, Mr. and Mrs. Seymour Tuttle of San Francisco and Mr. and Mrs. J. Mansar of Altadena.

SOUTH PASADENA.

Mrs. Earl Brown entertained at luncheon on Monday at her home, 1967 Marengo avenue. The guests included the members of the newly organized Luncheon Club, which is composed of a number of the society women of South Pasadena. Pleasure is by no means the sole object which brings these ladies together, as the after-luncheon hours are devoted to sewing for charity.

The members of A. A. Chapter, P.E.O. were very delightfully entertained at luncheon on Thursday, last, by Mrs. George C. Ritchie of this city and Mrs. P. H. FAINTING AND DIZZY SPELLS

The Cause of such Symptoms and Remedy Told in This Letter.

Syracuse, N. Y.—"When I commenced the Change of Life I was poorly, had no appetite and had fainting spells. I suffered for two or three years before I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills which I saw advertised in the papers and in your little books. I took about 12 bottles of your Vegetable Compound and found it a wonderful remedy. I commenced to pick up at once and my suffering was relieved. I have told others about your medicine and know of some who have taken it. I am glad to help others all I can."—Mrs. R. E. [illegible], 437 W. Lafayette Ave., Syracuse, N. Y.

While Change of Life is a most critical period of a woman's existence, the annoying symptoms which accompany it may be controlled, and normal health restored by the timely use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Moreover, this reliable remedy contains no narcotics or harmful drugs and owes its efficiency to the medicinal extractives of the native roots and herbs which it contains.

Do you understand the modern idea of lovely hair?

No modern girl or smart woman with warm, rich medium or light brown or blond hair envies the girl with heavy hair. Those soft lights, glints and tints, so attractive in the hair of every young woman, but which invariably begin to fade and grow darker with each advancing year, is now recognized beauty quality—the modern conception of lovely hair. A Golden Glint Shampoo is required to bring out and hold these precious undertones—no conventional shampoo will afford any aid. Visit your hairdresser—experience the delight of this shampoo which will make your hair glow with a radiance heretofore unknown—absolutely without injury to your hair or any change in its color. If you shampoo your own hair, you may obtain Cinderella Golden Glint Shampoo at any drug store, toilet goods counter or beauty shop.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugo Krutzsch and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Waterman observed Halloween by entertaining over 100 guests on Saturday evening at the Woman's Club House. The affair will be long remembered for its attractive decorations and the charming hospitality of the hosts and hostesses. Black cats, grinning pumpkins, cornstalks and other symbols of Halloween transformed the rooms into an appropriate and attractive setting. The lights were shaded with orange paper. Before the platform, where the Los Angeles orchestra was seated, were arranged pumpkins of huge size, a part of the decorations that received much admiration. Punch cider was served throughout the evening and later a delicious supper was served, the luncheon being appropriate to the Halloween tide.

WIN LONDON ART LOVERS.

Donahue Tells of Success of American Invasion.

England Rates Damrosch Orchestra Highly.

Young Pianist Captures Applause Abroad.

BY JEANNE REDMAN.

Lester Donahue, recently returned here for a visit to his home, is the first of the Americans to tell us of the so-called American invasion of England last season. Donahue, Werrenrath, Sophie Braslau, Cecil Fanning, Marcia van Dresser, Anna Case and Heifetz are some of the names which have been presented to London within the year through American management.

Donahue, for one, finds London the most delightful spot on earth. The people and the musical atmosphere are very much to his liking. He gave London four months of his attention and Paris only two weeks.

The music situation is handled mostly, of course, in London through social influence, and Donahue went there with but three friends, but those three influential, and so before a week he was dividing his evening into three and four parts in order to meet all his opportunities. He has been asked to return during the coming spring and play at the Albert Hall.

"I played in everybody's house after my concert at Wigmore Hall," he said. "At the Earl Lathom salons, Lady Randolph Churchill's, Lady Sackville's—the woman who has the room of Damascus in her house, and for which she competed with the British Museum—Diana Manners, Lady Cunard, who runs the opera situation, and, in fact, for all but the King and Queen, and I don't know how they got out of it.

"We were all well liked. Cecil Fanning made a big hit. Werrenrath sang better than I have ever heard him, and they enjoyed Anna Case.

"Heifetz, of course, made a tremendous impression. I went to Albert Hall the day he played with the Damrosch Orchestra, and sat with Mrs. 'Pat' Campbell, who said that Heifetz was her ideal of purity in art, so far as her experience of musicians goes. They were mad about him."

"How did they like Damrosch?"

LIKED DAMROSCH.

"They liked him. In fact, they insisted on saying that his was the best orchestra in the country, and I insisted that I knew of three others which were better.

"Out of compliment to them Damrosch played Edward Elgar, and one of the critics remarked that he had always wondered why Elgar was not popular in America and that now he knew."

Donahue enjoyed Covent Garden opera, because the English dress the part, and, he says, opera needs dressing up. In Paris he was disappointed in the audience which attended the premiers of D'Indy's "Legends de St. Christophe," but he liked the opera. The music is very reminiscent of Cesar Franck and the subject of "Tannhauser."

He also had the pleasure of hearing De Pachmann in London, and reports his tones as beautiful as ever. "The venerable pianist had his nurse-attendant by his side as he played contiued Mr. Donohue. "He played the third 'Liebestraume' of Liszt and stopped for a moment to call to the audience, 'nobody has ever played this well but me . . . they say Liszt played it pretty well, but I don't know.'

"Busoni is the only pianist who fills a hall in London, and yet London is a pianists's public. They haven't so many good singers as we have, and Clara Butt is their adoration.

"She did 'Orphe'at Covent Garden but she and Beecham, the conductor,didn't agree about the tempo. However, all she does is agreeable to the English.

"They are playing German and French opera, and much Puccini. His three new operas were given with great success last season.

"The Diaghileff Russian Ballet is there and more magnificent than ever. Karsovine and Massine are with him, and he will do John Alder Carpenter's new ballet, 'The Birthday of the Infanta,' in Paris in the spring. Dancing in New York has become so sensual that it is amazing. In fact I think it so off-color that most people don't even know it."

PURSUES SMUGGLERS.

Bill Russell in Thrill Drama of the Northwest.

"The Challenge of the Law," by E. Lloyd Sheldon, brings to the Symphony screen today the Fox star, William Russell. As Capt. Bruce Cavanaugh of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police he is sent to put a stop to fur smuggling. He falls in love with the daughter of a leader of the smugglers, whom he captures and consigns to ten years' imprisonment.

The girl, portrayed by Helen Ferguson, breaks her engagement with him and aids in the liberation of her father from jail. Bruce follows the fleeing party into the desert, where the girl waits alone to kill him. Unable, however, to revenge herself on the man she has loved, she lets him arrest her on a false charge. Overcome by the heat of the desert and believing himself about to die, Bruce releases her, telling her she has won and he cannot let her die with him. She refuses to leave, and—

It all ends happily, of course, but plenty of thrills and action are promised in the unfolding.

A new William Fox Sunshine comedy, the latest Mutt and Jeff cartoon and Fox News and music by Seth Story's orchestra fill out the program.

HUGH FAY RESTING.

Hugh Fay, well-known funster, who has been starring in the Hall Room Boys comedies, has severed his relations with that concern, according to announcement just given out. Fay, who is responsible for most of the Hall Room Boys stories during the past year, plans to take a short rest, after which he will consider new connections. Promoters of a well-known producing concern are endeavoring to have Fay star in two-reel comedies, to be released through a national organization, it is stated.

REFLECTS ART OF SPAIN.

Incorporating the content and expression of a painter's productions in its decorative scheme, the Mission Theater, Los Angeles' newest picture show shop, which is to open this week, will reveal a distinct and colorful setting for film presentations. To Velasquez, the Spanish painter, with his canvasses of mysterious dark, glowing colors, is attributed the inspiration for the hues and even some of the designs which make the interior of the new house attractive. Naturally the various themes of color and expression have been given a decidedly modern twist, with a tendency toward California mission architecture.

The exterior of the building manifests the characteristics of the early missions, combined with a still earlier Spanish treatment. The lobby has a vaulted ceiling done in a soft, colorful tone, without any effort toward the decorations which distinguish the interior of the theater. A quaint Aztec fountain on which colored lights will play lends a touch of aboriginal historic value.

The person entering the auditorium is to feel as if he had passed into one of the old banquet halls of a Spanish castle of 300 years ago. At least that is the impression which Martin Syvertson, the artist, has sought to convey.

The ceiling has heavy beams running in two directions, forming squares, done in all-over decoration, with different emblems and fantastic figures in black, blue and golden colors. The beams were finished in these colors to give strength and heaviness to carry the big ceiling.

The panels, or squares, between are filled with ornaments. These are in lighter and more brilliant colors. When the proper lights are played on these panels, the effect is of an old, rich tapestry or rug, where the colors have had years to mellow down and blend together in harmony.

HALF-VEILED FANTASY.

There are no outstanding symbols or paintings in the auditorium—just masses of soft colors, so it would seem at first glance. But a more thorough inspection reveals odd, fantastic figures here and there which are not observable until each unit of the ceiling has been studied by the eye.

The theater's lighting system is apparently radically different. One of the most noteworthy features is the total absence of fixtures. The lighting will be indirect, but not even the reflectors will show.

An intricate system for dimming the lights has been devised. An important phase in the effect to be achieved are a number of "windows" along the side walls, which in reality are grills.

The spirit of the photoplay reflected on the screen, or the meaning of the music being played by the concert orchestra, will be augmented and strengthened through the rays of colored light emanating from these grills.

Combination of light and water will give a novel effect about the stage, on either side of which is a cascade falling down to a pool of water in front of the orchestra pit, just ahead of the first row of seats. Ornate stone basins about half-way down will catch the hurtling water and slowly empty it onto graduated steps, behind which colored lights will play.

The opening photoplay is to carry out the Spanish-California ideal. Douglas Fairbanks production, "The Mark of Zorro," made under the title of "The Curse of Capistrano," is to be shown. Even the orchestra leader, Dr. Carlos De Mandil, is Spanish, and a prologue of Castilian design is announced.

FEAST OF VARIETY AT THE HIPPODROME.

Today brings J. Warren Kerrigan to the Hippodrome as a convict in a thrilling photodrama entitled "No. 99." The story deals with a convict's exciting escape from prison and his subsequent adventures, which are said to be most entertaining.

"Will she Win?" also on the bill, is the title of a fantastic musical comedy with a half dozen shapely maids and three male characters. Cy and Cy are a pair of eccentric comedians, who are here, while Gill and Veak will offer their comedy skit entitled "Help Yourself." Smith and Keefe, known as the two harmony buds, will present songs from Dixieland to Broadway. The Aerial Macks will offer the acme of aerial art, and many thrills for good measure.

LHEVINNE OPENS CONCERT SERIES.

Noted Pianist, Long Absent, Will Play Here Next Tuesday Evening.

An event of prime musical importance during the week will be the appearance of Josef Lhevinne, the distinguished pianist, in recital Tuesday evening at Trinity Auditorium. He will open the evening Philharmonic course, thus giving new impulse to the notable music season now in progress.

Lhevinne is famous both for the technical and artistic perfection of his playing. He has not made a concert tour of this country for some years.

A Russian by birth, he has spent much time in traveling in Europe and this country, and for many seasons has conducted a musical school in Berlin.

AS CELESTIAL HERO.

Sessue Hayakawa is the Star at the Alhambra.

"Li Ting Lang," by Howard P. Rockey, which recently was published in the Saturday Evening Post under the caption of "Li Ting Lang, the Chinese Gentleman," is showing at the Alhambra. Sessue Hayakawa is the star.

The early scenes are laid in the vicinity of an American university, where Li Ting Lang is a student. On commencement day he meets the Marion Halstead (Doris Pawn) and falls desperately in love with her. His love is returned, much to the discomfort of her wooer, Li Ting Lang's white college chum, but before the marriage takes place Li Ting Tang is reported dead.

Then the scenes shift to China, where Marion, who has married her white lover, goes to spend her honeymoon. She recognizes one of the leaders of the Chinese republican army as Li Ting Lang and then occurs a series of climactic situations. Harold Lloyd in his comedy, "Get Out and Get Under," is also on review.
SUNDAY DRAMA

ALBRIGHT CONCOCTION AT BROADWAY PAN.

Bob Albright, aided and abetted by Al Bruce, has concocted a brand new comedy which will be presented at the Broadway Pantages, starting with the matinee tomorrow. It is entitled "Two Peas in One Pod," which would be a mighty poor crop of anything but fun.

"Oklahoma Bob" says that "Two Peas" is even funnier than "Oh, You Kid," now runnin gat the Broadway "Pan," and considered the best of the Albright musical shows.

"Two Peas" offers numerous opportunities for song interpolations by Joe Kemper, Jessica Dixon, Norma Leslie and the Albright beauty chorus.

On the screen will be presented David Butler's clever comedy "Sittin' on the World," directed by Fred J. Butler. This Saturday Evening Post story was recently shown at the New Pantages with success.

PRIVATE FILM SHOWING.

"The Waif of the Wreck," the first Van Curen special feature, is to be given a private showing at the Claremont studio this week. The picture features Ted Dickson, who came up from the extra ranks, and has signed a two-year contract to play the lead in the series of Van Curen westerns.

BRIGHT ORBS SOON TO SHINE.

Jesse Lasky Tells of Stars and Policies.

Elsie Ferguson to Arrive Here Shortly.

Billie Burke's to Make Feature in West.

Many gleaming orbs of the photoplay are shortly to lend their luster to the Famous Players-Lasky studio here, according to announcement made by Jesse L. Lasky, vice-president of the organization, upon his return last week. Among those scheduled for early appearance are Elsie Ferguson, Dorothy Dalton, Ethel Clayton and Billie Burke. Mr. Lasky made known the fact that the superspecial policy is to continue beyond the production of Cecil B. de Mille's "The Affairs of Anatol."

First of the arrival will be Miss Ferguson, who will be directed by William D. Taylor in a Paramount special, "Sacred and Profane Love," adapted by Julia Crawford Ivers from the play in which the noted actress appeared so successfully on the speaking stage.

"Miss Ferguson will be followed after a short interval," said Mr. Lasky, "by Miss Dalton and Miss Clayton, and it is expected that they will appear with Thomas Meighan in a superspecial for Paramount.

"Billie Burke will be among the stars coming West, but I cannot at present state definitely the character of her picture.

"It will be seen that our new production policy, inaugurated with the Cecil B. de Mille photoplay based on "The Affairs of Anatol," with an all-star cast, is to be followed out in later pictures.

"I am particularly gratified by the manner in which the new plan has been received by the stars, directors and others. All seem to have realized the value of this idea and the mutual benefits that are certain to accrue.

"It is, of course, a revolutionary plan, one which was developed only after a careful consideration of every phase of the matter and a complete understanding of the results.

"Naturally, productions of this character, combining several stars, will be special in every sense of the word, and sumptuous settings and every possible means of enhancing the beauty and power of the photoplays thus produced will be utilized."

Mr. Lasky was enthusiastic over William de Mille's recently completed production, "Midsummer Madness," adapted by Olga Printzlau from Cosmo Hamilton's novel, "His Friend and His Wife."

With Mr. Lasky arrived Edward Knoblock, the dramatist, who is to write Paramount photoplays at the studio, and Col. Robert Loraine, noted English actor, who is Mr. Lasky's guest while sojourning in Los Angeles during a halt in his world tour.

Mr. Lasky will remain for some little time in Hollywood personally to oversee the initial work on Cecil B. de Mille's production.

DANCE SPECIALISTS HERE.

Hyman Hirsch and Flo Duval, known in New York as "the Castles of 1920," creators of such modern dances as "the cat step," "the Hirsch trot" and "the terrace glide," have arrived in Los Angeles to demonstrate to Angeleno terpsichorean enthusiasts these newest ballroom gyrations. They were sent West by Wal Wilson, and are making their headquarters at the Wilson Danse studio on West Fifth street.

TARKINGTON COMEDY.

Majestic Stock Company will Present "Clarence."

For a long time the name of Booth Tarkington has been a magnetic attraction in the realms of fiction and now the same may be said with regard to the stage. His comedy, "Clarence," has enjoyed a great popularity. It will be produced by the Wilkes Stock Company at the Majestic Theater tonight.

Clarence is one of those human wonders of general utility, whose versatility extends from playing a saxophone to driving army mules without swearing, the latter no easy accomplishment. After the war Clarence seeks a job with a Mr. Wheeler, a specialist in dollars, and eventually becomes his secretary in his home.

By his unusual ability he wins the affections of the members of the family, particularly of a romantic younger daughter. He renders her a service that prevents a tragedy in her young life.

Edward Everett Horton has the role of Clarence. The other members of the cast are Mildred Southwick, Sara Sothern, Alice Elliot, Marie Curtis, Franklin Pangborn, Fred Cummings, Harry J. Leland, Stanley Taylor and Vivian Moore.

Sara Sothern,
Playing ingenue role in "Clarence" at the Majestic.

A CHORUS LADY.

Constance Binney Comes With This Role to Clune's Broadway.

"39 East," formerly a brilliant stage success, will be the film feature at Clune's, beginning today, with Constance Binney, who created the role of Penelope Penn in the stage production and in which she starred for two years, the heroine in the pictured version.

Miss Binney made the triumph of her stage career in this Rachel Crothers play, and it is said by critics that she makes the role equally appealing on the screen. The part permits her to give full rein to her girlish charm, and it also permits her to do some of the dancing for which she first won the admiration of theatrical audiences.

"39 East" tells the story of Penelope Penn, daughter of an impoverished minister. She goes to New York to seek her fortune, and is driven, much against her childhood teachings, to become a chorus girl. She does not disclose the nature of her work to the boarding-house circle, thereby laying herself open to adverse criticism. Finally, when she hasn't enough money to pay her board bill and the landlady threatens to put her out, fortune favors her and she is asked to replace the prima donna, who has resigned from the show. Returning to the boarding house with plenty of money and fine clothes, she easily wins the approval of the boarders.

Reginald Denny, a well known New York actor, is Miss Binney's leading man. The remainder of the cast are the same that supported the star in the stage production.

"LEOPARD WOMAN" IN SECOND WEEK.

"The Leopard Woman," from Stewart Edward White's novel, is meeting with such success at Tally's Broadway that it will be held over for one more week. The struggle between love and duty is the underlying theme, but instead of being confined to the man alone, the battle is also the woman's, which fact adds to the strength of the story and breaks away from the conventional one-sided conflict.

John Culberston, scientist-explorer, enacted by House Peters, is sent to Africa on a secret government mission, and the "Madame," portrayed by Louise Glaum, is also a secret emissary, whose official duty is to cut short any plans that Culberston might effect.

They meet in the African veldt country, and while the "Madame" realizes the importance of her mission, she falls in love with Culberston, only to be spurned by him. The elemental in her nature asserts itself with all its fierceness and and she orders him killed, but though a strange trick of circumstances he escapes, and when they meet again the natures that clashed learn to bend toward each other

NAT GOODWIN COMEDY.

"Why Marry?" will Amuse at the Morosco Theater.

Laughter reigns again at the Morosco Theater. Beginning with today's matinee, the company will present the comedy known to devotees of the late Nat Goodwin, "Why Marry?" Bertha Mann and Henry Duffey will have the leading roles.

The regular Morosco favorites will also appear, including Helene Sullivan, Joseph Eggenton, Frances Gaunt, Dora Mae Howe, Gayne Whitman, Betty Page, Harry Garrity and Charles Buck.

The theme of the comedy follows the adventures of a young couple on the verge of matrimony, to whom the conventionality of a machine-like wedding ceremony does not appeal. Surrounded by a number of ultra-conventional relatives, the bride-to-be encounters a stone wall of opposition which furnishes a series of funny situations.

Monte Blue and Gloria Swanson.

DE MILLE'S LATEST STAYS AT RIALTO.

Cecil B. De Mille's latest screen masterpiece, "Something to Think About," will enter into its second week at Grauman's Rialto today.

Gloria Swanson, who had the leading feminine role opposite Elliott Dexter in 'For Better, For Worse," appears in a similar capacity in "Something to Think About." During the past year this talented star has won many admirers by her fine acting in "Male and Female," and "Why Change Your Wife?" Elliott Dexter is seen opposite her in the leading male role in "Something to Think About."

Theodore Roberts plays Luke Anderson, the stern father who blinds himself in a fit of rage. Mr. Roberts declares that the part of Luke represents the hardest work he ever did in his life. Others in the cast are Monte Blue, Claire McDowell, Mackey Moore, Julia Faye, Theodore Kosloff, James Mason and Togo Yammamato.

COMPLETES FILM FROM RILEY POEM.

Charles Ray's fourth independent production for First National release, "The Old Swimmin' Hole," has been completed. This feature is an adaptation of the James Whitcomb Riley poem.

Production Manager Richard Willis stated that a novel set of title cards will be used in this production. The cutting and editing will be under the direction of Harry L. Becker, while the usual Ray title board, consisting of Charles Ray, Richard Willis, Albert Kidder and Joseph De Gram, will 'sit in' on the subtitles.

The youthful star will begin work immediately on his next production which will be an adaptation by Bernard McConville of Charles Van Loan's magazine story, "Scrap Iron."

Joseph De Grasse, who directed Ray in "Forty-Five Minutes from Broadway," "Nineteen and Phyllis" and "The Old Swimmin' Hole," will not wield the megaphone for "Scrap Iron." De Grasse is leaving for New York tomorrow to take care of some eastern affairs for the star and incidentally to enjoy his first vacation in many months. The cast and director for the new picture will be announced shortly.

FOUR NEW PICTURES SLATED FOR NEW YORK

Four new productions are scheduled for special runs on Broadway, New York, as soon as suitable theaters can be obtained for them. The pictures are "The Woman in His House," a Louise B. Mayer-First National production with Mildred Harris Chaplin featured; "Passion," the European spectacle starring Pola Negri; Allen Holubar's "Man, Woman, Marriage," starring Dorothy Phillips, and last, "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," Metro's latest undertaking.

It is possible that the New York opening of the Holubar production, "Man, Woman, Marriage," will be postponed pending its world premiere at the new Ambassador Theater in Los Angeles about January 1. If it is found impossible to hold up the production until that time, however, Albert Kaufman states that he will launch the picture in New York for a big run.

It is figured that January 1 will find at least six leading New York theaters housing special motion picture productions, and, from the advance news, each and every one of them should enjoy great prosperity. It is said that each marks a distinct advance step in production over the field, and the advent of the foreign production of "Passion" into the American field will be watched with particular interest.

DONALD CRISP NOW WORKING IN LONDON.

Letters received at the Famous Players-Lasky offices state that Donald Crisp is well started on his production of "Appearances," Edward Knoblock's first screen story, which he is filming at the London studios of Famous Players-Lasky British Producers, Ltd. The picture is the first of the series of Donald Crisp All-British Productions. The story, which was scenarioized by Margaret Turnbull, is said to be one of universal appeal and represents the struggle of the professional classes to "keep up appearances" under the pressure of the present-day economic conditions.

In selecting his cast Mr. Crisp has drawn artists from the ranks of the most eminent of English stage players. The leading woman is Mary Glynne, who was the heroine of Hugh Ford's recently completed production of Henry Arthur Jones's "The Call of Youth," and who recently signed a long-term contract with the British company. In the leading male role is Langhorne Burton, one of the best known British actors of both stage and screen, while other notable members of the cast are Percy Standing and Marjorie Hume, both of whom had prominent roles in Hugh Ford's first English production, "The Great Day."

"PEACEFUL VALLEY."

Second Independent Ray Production at the Kinema.

Charles Ray is to unfold an absorbing rural characterization in his First National picturization of Sol Smith Russell's stage success, "Peaceful Valley." This is his second First National production.

"Peaceful Valley" is rich in atmosphere and quaint sketching, it is said. The picture carries the theme of companionship as found in happy family life.

The story deals with the bashful efforts of a country lad to compel the admiration of a city girl, and the complications arising when his little sister is lured away from her home by the machinations of one of the men in the visiting city party.

The Kinema program will be opened by Rene Williams leading his symphonic orchestra in M. L. Lake's overture selection, "The Old Folks at Home." An atmospheric prologue, "Woodland Echoes," will introduce a singing, whistling and instrumental novelty.

BRIGHT ORBS SOON TO SHINE.

Jesse Lasky Tells of Stars and Policies.

Elsie Ferguson to Arrive Here Shortly.

Billie Burke's to Make Feature in West.

Many gleaming orbs of the photoplay are shortly to lend their luster to the Famous Players-Lasky studio here, according to announcement made by Jesse L. Lasky, vice-president of the organization, upon his return last week. Among those scheduled for early appearance are Elsie Ferguson, Dorothy Dalton, Ethel Clayton and Billie Burke. Mr. Lasky made known the fact that the superspecial policy is to continue beyond the production of Cecil B. de Mille's "The Affairs of Anatol."

First of the arrival will be Miss Ferguson, who will be directed by William D. Taylor in a Paramount special, "Sacred and Profane Love," adapted by Julia Crawford Ivers from the play in which the noted actress appeared so successfully on the speaking stage.

"Miss Ferguson will be followed after a short interval," said Mr. Lasky, "by Miss Dalton and Miss Clayton, and it is expected that they will appear with Thomas Meighan in a superspecial for Paramount.

"Billie Burke will be among the stars coming West, but I cannot at present state definitely the character of her picture.

"It will be seen that our new production policy, inaugurated with the Cecil B. de Mille photoplay based on "The Affairs of Anatol," with an all-star cast, is to be followed out in later pictures.

"I am particularly gratified by the manner in which the new plan has been received by the stars, directors and others. All seem to have realized the value of this idea and the mutual benefits that are certain to accrue.

"It is, of course, a revolutionary plan, one which was developed only after a careful consideration of every phase of the matter and a complete understanding of the results.

"Naturally, productions of this character, combining several stars, will be special in every sense of the word, and sumptuous settings and every possible means of enhancing the beauty and power of the photoplays thus produced will be utilized."

Mr. Lasky was enthusiastic over William de Mille's recently completed production, "Midsummer Madness," adapted by Olga Printzlau from Cosmo Hamilton's novel, "His Friend and His Wife."

With Mr. Lasky arrived Edward Knoblock, the dramatist, who is to write Paramount photoplays at the studio, and Col. Robert Loraine, noted English actor, who is Mr. Lasky's guest while sojourning in Los Angeles during a halt in his world tour.

Mr. Lasky will remain for some little time in Hollywood personally to oversee the initial work on Cecil B. de Mille's production.

DANCE SPECIALISTS HERE.

Hyman Hirsch and Flo Duval, known in New York as "the Castles of 1920," creators of such modern dances as "the cat step," "the Hirsch trot" and "the terrace glide," have arrived in Los Angeles to demonstrate to Angeleno terpsichorean enthusiasts these newest ballroom gyrations. They were sent West by Wal Wilson, and are making their headquarters at the Wilson Danse studio on West Fifth street.

TARKINGTON COMEDY.

Majestic Stock Company will Present "Clarence."

For a long time the name of Booth Tarkington has been a magnetic attraction in the realms of fiction and now the same may be said with regard to the stage. His comedy, "Clarence," has enjoyed a great popularity. It will be produced by the Wilkes Stock Company at the Majestic Theater tonight.

Clarence is one of those human wonders of general utility, whose versatility extends from playing a saxophone to driving army mules without swearing, the latter no easy accomplishment. After the war Clarence seeks a job with a Mr. Wheeler, a specialist in dollars, and eventually becomes his secretary in his home.

By his unusual ability he wins the affections of the members of the family, particularly of a romantic younger daughter. He renders her a service that prevents a tragedy in her young life.

Edward Everett Horton has the role of Clarence. The other members of the cast are Mildred Southwick, Sara Sothern, Alice Elliot, Marie Curtis, Franklin Pangborn, Fred Cummings, Harry J. Leland, Stanley Taylor and Vivian Moore.

Sara Sothern,
Playing ingenue role in "Clarence" at the Majestic.

A CHORUS LADY.

Constance Binney Comes With This Role to Clune's Broadway.

"39 East," formerly a brilliant stage success, will be the film feature at Clune's, beginning today, with Constance Binney, who created the role of Penelope Penn in the stage production and in which she starred for two years, the heroine in the pictured version.

Miss Binney made the triumph of her stage career in this Rachel Crothers play, and it is said by critics that she makes the role equally appealing on the screen. The part permits her to give full rein to her girlish charm, and it also permits her to do some of the dancing for which she first won the admiration of theatrical audiences.

"39 East" tells the story of Penelope Penn, daughter of an impoverished minister. She goes to New York to seek her fortune, and is driven, much against her childhood teachings, to become a chorus girl. She does not disclose the nature of her work to the boarding-house circle, thereby laying herself open to adverse criticism. Finally, when she hasn't enough money to pay her board bill and the landlady threatens to put her out, fortune favors her and she is asked to replace the prima donna, who has resigned from the show. Returning to the boarding house with plenty of money and fine clothes, she easily wins the approval of the boarders.

Reginald Denny, a well known New York actor, is Miss Binney's leading man. The remainder of the cast are the same that supported the star in the stage production.

"LEOPARD WOMAN" IN SECOND WEEK.

"The Leopard Woman," from Stewart Edward White's novel, is meeting with such success at Tally's Broadway that it will he held over for one more week. The struggle between love and duty is the underlying theme, but instead of being confined to the man alone, the battle is also the woman's, which fact adds to the strength of the story and breaks away from the conventional one-sided conflict.

John Culberston, scientist-explorer, enacted by House Peters, is sent to Africa on a secret government mission, and the "Madame," portrayed by Louise Glaum, is also a secret emissary, whose official duty is to cut short any plans that Culberston might effect.

They meet in the African veldt country, and while the "Madame" realizes the importance of her mission, she falls in love with Culberston, only to be spurned by him. The elemental in her nature asserts itself with all its fierceness and and she orders him killed, but though a strange trick of circumstances he escapes, and when they meet again the natures that clashed learn to bend toward each other

NAT GOODWIN COMEDY.

"Why Marry?" will Amuse at the Morosco Theater.

Laughter reigns again at the Morosco Theater. Beginning with today's matinee, the company will present the comedy known to devotees of the late Nat Goodwin, "Why Marry?" Bertha Mann and Henry Duffey will have the leading roles.

The regular Morosco favorites will also appear, including Helene Sullivan, Joseph Eggenton, Frances Gaunt, Dora Mae Howe, Gayne Whitman, Betty Page, Harry Garrity and Charles Buck.

The theme of the comedy follows the adventures of a young couple on the verge of matrimony, to whom the conventionality of a machine-like wedding ceremony does not appeal. Surrounded by a number of ultra-conventional relatives, the bride-to-be encounters a stone wall of opposition which furnishes a series of funny situations.

PROBLEM PHOTOPLAY.

"Love, Honor and Obey" is the Offering at Walker's.

"Love, Honor and Obey," a gripping drama of human emotions, is to open a week's engagement at the Walker Theater today. Whether the marriage pledge is irrevocable, whether a woman must bow to tradition and ancient moral custom by remaining with a man whom she cannot respect, and whose attitude toward her is the essence of brutality, or whether she is to take love and happiness where life offers it—that is the argument upon which the play is founded.

"Love, Honor and Obey" is by Eugene Walter, and was adapted by him from the novel, "The Tyranny of Weakness," by Charles Neville Buck.

Wilda Bennett, well known as a star in musical comedy, has the role of the New England girl, whose strict puritanical breeding makes war with her conscience and her heart. Claire Whitney has the strong role of an unhappy divorcee, and Kenneth Harlan is seen as a New York novelist of liberal views in morals.

"WAY DOWN EAST" CONTINUES RUN.

The Griffith production of "Way Down East" at the Philharmonic Auditorium will enter the fifth week with tomorrow's matinee.

Never before in the history of the screen has there been such a varied exposition of all the elements of human emotion, according to the opinion of critics. The entire scale is sounded, from deep love to base hatred; from comical stupidity to cunning ingenuity; from the serene quiet of a placid river bank to the raging struggle of two people for their lives on the very brink of a waterfall.

Lillian Gish and Richard Barthelmess play the roles of heroine and hero. Burr McIntosh, Lowell Sherman and Kate Bruce also have important roles, while among the other figures who stand out are Mrs. David Landeau, Mrs. Morgan Belmont, Patricia Fruen, Florence Short, Vivia Ogden, Porter Strong, George Neville, Edgar Nelson, Mary Hay, Creighton Hale and Emily Fitzroy.

PARAMOUNT RELEASE.

In the future all the Frank Mayo productions made by Universal will be released through Paramount. Except in Los Angeles and the few citis where Universal has its own theaters, Mayo's pictures will all appear in Paramount's first-run houses.

GERMAN TAXICABS TORMENT.

Present-day German taxicabs were not primarily designed to stimulate the liver; but after hitting a few rough spots one is left with a distinct impression that they exist solely to shake up the internal organs.

As for their meters, they can be read properly only with the assistance of a slide rule and a table of logarithms. Each meter possesses seven clocks—one for the passenger, one for extra passengers, one for luxury t ax, one for the tax on capital and one for good luck. All the clocks work busily all the time—even the one for waiting.

This is probably because the passenger, due to the hard tires, is either waiting to bounce up or to fall back after a bump during the entire ride. After determining the amount registered by each clock at the end of the ride, these sums are added together and multiplied by four.—[Kenneth L. Roberts in Saturday Evening Post.

Fatty Arbuckle and Julia Fay.

COBB AND ARBUCKLE.

Combination of Fat and Fun at Grauman's This Week.

Two fat men combine forces at Grauman's this week—Irvin S. Cobb, humorist, who wrote a story entitled "The Life of the Party," and Roscoe Arbuckle, humorist, who will interpret it in pictures.

It is seldom that two such personages are associated in the making of a laugh-producer for the public, and it is said of "The Life of the Party" that as entertainment it outranks anything Arbuckle has ever done for the screen. "Fatty" will be seen for the first time since he was a kiddie of 2, dressed in rompers! Those who read the story are assured that all of its original funniness is retained in the film version. The assistants are Bebe Daniels, Julia Faye and others. The play will be augmented with an atmospheric prologue, which Sid claims is one of the most elaborate things of its kind ever attempted.

YOUTHFUL CAPERS.

Miniature Vaudeville Show Heads Pantages Bill.

Ten boys and girls programmed as "The Rising Generation" are the feature of the show starting with tomorrow's matinee at the New Pantages. They give a series of such varied and novel numbers that constitute a miniature vaudeville show.

"The Rising Generation" is headed by Mary Caroline Daniels, character comedienne; Buster Brown, yodeler; Maxine Hamilton, child soprano, and Deminic Palumbo, Italian comedian, supported by a company of ten performers.

Another number of interest is the pantomimic act offered by the Rigdon dancers. Wire and Walker, aerialists; Henshaw and Avery, in crossfire comedy; Cooper and Ricardo, in "One," and "The Golden Bird," a mystery act, make up the vaudeville show.

J. Warren Kerrigan in "The House of Whispers" will supply film entertainment.

FUN AND GEOGRAPHY.

How the Various Comedians Hit Popular Taste.

Where are the various comedians most popular?

Where does Chaplin get the most laughs, where does Harold Lloyd do the most rib rickling and where has Chester Conklin the greatest following?

E. H. Sicocks, sales supervisor of the Special Pictures Corporation through his twenty-six branch exchange managers has just completed a survey of the situation. The results show that:

Harold Lloyd leads on the Coast.

Chaplin is strongest in the South.

Ford Sterling leads in the New England States.

Larry Semon is popular in the Middle West.

Ben Turpin is most riotous in the Northwest and Great Lakes territory.

Chester Conklin appeals in Ohio, Illinois, Indiana and Canada.

Louise Fazenda leads in the East.

Gale Henry in the West.

Polly Moran in the South.

FUTURISTIC SETS IN ARMSTRONG SHOW.

"Follow Me" is the musical comedy revue which Ed Armstrong and his aggregation of thirty-six perfect baby dolls will offer at the Burbank Theater, beginning today. It has to do with somewhat spicy midnight adventures of a little henpecked husband in search of entertainment, capably played by Henry Sherr, the favorite comedian. Others in the cast include Rookie Lewis, Walter Spender, Irene Brooks; the trio, Marshall, Mechan and Reece; Ruth Roling and Frank Samuels.

Armstrong will provide a setting of futuristic pattern. Popular songs to be introduced: Irene Brooks will sing "Won't you be My Baby?" Ruth Roling, "In an Old-fashioned Garden," while Ed Armstrong is writing a new number for Walter Spencer. Those two comedians, Henry Sherr and Rookie Lewis, will entertain in a new comedy novelty.

DEBUTANTE'S TROUBLES.

"Gilded Dream" Exploits Her Search for Happiness.

"Don't talk of love . . . that is a theme for poets or millionaires," Carmel Myers tells the suitor she refuses to let herself favor in "The Gilded Dream," to show today at the Superba Theater.

The story of this picture, by Katherine Robbins, exposes the methods of probably the most persistent and annoying man-hunter known to modern civilization—the sweet debutante who is poor, pretty and money mad. Leona (Miss Myers,) a milliner in a small town dreams golden dreams of going to New York, armed with a handsome wardrobe and good looks, and taking by storm the most exclusive circle of society and the best matrimonial prospect.

With a small legacy, she purchases an abundance of gowns and necessaries and goes to her grandmother, the ultra-modern Geraldine, a gay and somewhat jaded society woman who sees a clever way of exploiting herself by launching Leona as a debutante.

"You have looks and manner, and should capture an eligible—unless you fall in love with some penniless chap," Geraldine tells her.

"Not even Adonis could move me unless his bank account were as appealing as his face," laughs Leona, as she cold-bloodedly plans her campaign of conquest, the triumph of which is her marriage to a millionaire.

But her heart has not escaped the shaft of real love which she thought only scratched its surface. In reality it left a deep wound, when Jasper Holroyd, possessed of scant material means, came into her life just prior to her sensational marriage.

Her happiness comes with her full realization that what is lasting, whether in love or work, can only be achieved through merit.

ROSCOE ARBUCKLE BELIEVES IN ROMPERS.

That rompers, such as children are in the habit of yearing, should be the general costume for men in the sub-tropics is the contention of Roscoe Arbuckle, who will be seen in "The Life of the Party" at Grauman's this week. In the picture, in which he gives a party, all of the participants are attired in juvenile clothing, Arbuckle himself wearing the rompers.

"I am inclined to believe that the garment called rompers is the most comfortable ever invented," says the famous screen comedian. "I never enjoyed solid comfort more than I did while wearing it. They permit wonderful freedom of action, and this is particularly relished by fat men.

"I believe in simple fashions—perhaps not as simple as rompers—for both men and women. For instance, I think men should rise in rebellion and cast into the discard the uncomfortable, high, starched collars most of us wear. They are not particularly attractive, nor can anything else be said in their favor. I am also against the dress suit and 'boiled front' shirts custom decrees men must wear on dress occasions.

"Simply designed clothing, especially in our wonderful climate, I am convinced, would add to the comfort and happiness of the people if we all dared to rise up and declare ourselves free from the trammels of convention."

NORMA TALMADGE AT THE GARRICK.

Norma Talmadge will be the star of the bill at the Garrick Theater, starting today, in "The Branded Woman," her First National production.

"The Branded Woman" is the story of a girl who was dragged into the mire of vice through a mother's sins. How she casts off her past and glories in the gladness of the future, with a thoroughbred gentleman as her husband, form the theme.

The cast appearing opposite the star helps to make the film attractive.

An interesting bill of short subjects will accompany.

NINE ACTS ON BILL.

Orpheum Will Present Five Topliners This Week.

Nine great acts, with five of them featured, will be the menu that the Orpheum will offer its patrons, beginning tomorrow afternoon. Two of them jointly top the bill and two take the honor place at the foot, and in the middle, remains Harry Fox, the hit of the present program.

The new topliners are, in order, Anatol Friedland and Imhoff, Conn and Coreene. Friedland is the man who wrote 1000 melodies, and he is still writing them, as of yore. He has been here before in partnership with another man, but this time he brings a musical comedy.

Imhoff, Conn and Coreene comprise one of the standard teams of the stage; they have been together in laugh-making for years; their "Sergt. Louder" was a classic of merriment. "In a Pest House" is their new vehicle, but no quarantine goes with it.

At the foot of the bill are James Mullen and Anna Francis, as one act, and Muriel Morgan and Minnie Kloter as the other. Mullen was here before, in company with James Coogan; now he has a girl, Miss Francis.

Misses Morgan and Kloter are singers, but no one need dodge because of that; one is tall and funny, one is short and serious, and their team work is delightful. Both have cultivated voices and these are blended most artistically. And again, there is Harry Fox, the Pomona phenomenon, with Beatrice Curtis.

On the list also are Herman and Sherley, in "The Mysterious Masquerader," a standard fun act; Lou Reed and Al Tucker, who are "Full o' Pep," and mean it, and James and Etta Mitchell, aerial wonders. Rose and Moon will again close the show with their dances.

Vivian Martin,
Star in "The Song of the Soul" at the California.

"SONG OF THE SOUL."

Vivian Martin is the Star in W. J. Locke Story.

"The Song of the Soul," released by the Goldwyn Company, opens at the California Theater today. Eastern reviewers have praised this production, which is an adaption from William J. Locke's novel, "An Old World Romance."

The picture was made in the Florida Everglades, the exact locale of the tale. The story tells of the courtship and marriage of two people unusually afflicted. The wife is blind and the husband's face is terribly scarred from a burn received in his boyhood. How these two, one seeking solitude in the "backwater" country, the other forced to live there because of her affliction and property interests, work out their salvation and find great happiness and contentment makes an appealing drama, it is said. Vivian Martin, the star, is supported by a cast headed by Fritz Lieber, the character actor. A new Booth Tarkington "kid" comedy entitled "Edgar the Explorer" is the fun feature.

W. G. Stewart will present Charles Wakefield Cadman's "From the Land of the Blue Sky Water," synchronized to music by the author.

WOMEN.

During the World War 11,880 women were enrolled in the United States Navy Department navy yards and naval stations.

The number of women wage earners in the United States has increased 50 per cent during the last ten years.

Empress Eugenie is said to have been haunted by a dread of Sundays. Sept. 4, 1870, the day the mob invaded the Tuilleries, was a Sunday. It was on a Sunday that she learned the news of the death of the prince imperial and she herself died on a Sunday.

Others are willing to share in the management of large houses for a nominal wage. Thousands of girls, some of them of title, are applying for jobs as cinema actresses.

Woman's participation in the organized labor movement is not of recent date. Fifty years ago, in 1870, the National Labor Union Congress at Cincinnati was attended by women, who were recognized as delegates permitted to offer resolutions and make addresses.

In Sumatra, the wind decides the length of time a widow shall remain single. Just after her husband's death she plants a flagstaff at her door, upon which a flag is raised. While the flag remains untorn by the wind, the etiquette of Sumatra forbids her to marry; but at the first rent, however small, she can lay aside her mourning, assume her most bewitching smile and accept the first man who presents himself.

WOMEN'S WORK, WOMEN'S CLUBS.

BY MYRA NYE.

W. L. George is coming to town. He is going to speak before the Ebell Club, I know, and probably before the Friday Morning Club. If you do not know who W. L. George is, no woman need be ashamed, for he is a coming man, not a going. Still you have missed something piquant, racy, difficult and startling if you have not read George; you have missed the greatest known connoisseur of women, the woman mind and the woman mood.

Even Ellen Key appears to know no more of our sex than does this slender young man with the absurd mustache and the high forehead. He is uncanny, positively uncanny, for instance, when he tells what two girls alone, undressing for bed, will talk about, and his X-ray knowledge of the three sisters in his novel, "The Second Blooming," surpasses that of H. G. Wells or Arnold Bennett.

"He has entered with more courage and intensity into the inner sanctuaries of life than Howells or Bennett have cared to do," says an American critic, and the Kansas City Star said after Mr. George had left that city: "There seems to be precious little he doesn't know about women, which is a large thing to say of any man."

Yes, it is, and it is a man who is saying that, but when I, a woman who knows woman, admit it, I go even farther.

Of course the smug woman of whom alas there are many in club circles, who expects from man, nothing but flattery and piffling platitudes, won't like George if he talks as he writes.

Just before the war he said, "I do not believe women are fit to have the ballot, that is why I want them to have it." On the other hand he is one of the few men who takes the trouble to know the difference between feminism and suffragism. But while he sees the woman's movement in a large way, he says, in what I call a small way: "I am convinced that woman's political outlook is narrow, prejudiced and mean, that her support will be readily accorded to any measure which is definitely sentimental or definitely cruel. Those women who are entering politics are governed by their passions and self-interest. They are weeping instead of thinking."

Oh, Mr. George, how could you? No American man would dare say that. Are you more brave or have you more reason to say that of your country women? Perhaps you will change your mind after you have been in Los Angeles.

His knowledge is not confined to English women, however, for though born of English parentage, he first saw the light of Paris day, and was educated in France and Germany.

Originally he intended to be a mechanical engineer, but ended by engineering in no mechanical way his fictitious grace through the pages of a book till she seems to live and breathe. Later he thought of becoming a chemical analyst, and studied thus for six years, but ended by analysing every emotion of the feminine heart. In due course he served in the French Army, not, however in the World War, for he devoted all his time, resources and talent to his own country then. This experience gives a touch of adventure to his novels that most realists do not possess.

Now he is an acknowledged expert in those questions that are engaging club women today; being especially interested in land, housing and immigration. He has justly won commendation for his rejection of obviously impractical theories so dear to most youthful enthusiasts, and for his direct strong appeal to common sense.

In his latest book, "The Intelligence of Woman," which is attracting the reading portion of club circles because it is so intimate and spiced with an amazing amount of woman-knocking, he divides the last sixty years of woman's history into the shiny nose and virtue period, the powder-puff, and possible virtue period, the Russian ballet and leopard-skin period.

There are exceptions, he says, qualifications, retrogressions, but that on the whole, is the history of the English womanhood from wax fruit to Bakst design.

"Resignation, humility and self-sacrifice have for thousands of generations been the worst vices of woman, but it is apparent that at last, aggressivenss and selfishness are developing woman toward nobility," is this curious Mr. George's conclusion.

He bases all his conclusions in this last book on observations of five intimate acquaintances, nineteen "adequate" acquaintances, forty-one slight acquaintances, thirty-nine married persons, eight of "status uncertain," and eighteen celibate, all ranging from 17 to 68 years of age. He acknowledges it is hard to uncover the real truth concerning woman. Even if she is sincere in trying to convey the truth she answers in five ways he says: "Truthfully; on the defensive if alone with another woman (that is where he must listen in through the keyhole as well as on the telephone;) with intent to cause male rivalry if she is with two men, with false modesty and evasiveness if she is with one man and one woman, and with a clear intention to repel or attract if she is alone with a man."

Heigho, Mr. George! We are glad you take enough interest in us collectively, to go to all that trouble individually. Come on to Los Angeles and let us discover something concerning you. Turn about is fair play. Do you talk as you write?

Anti-Suffrage.

What a paradox is this organization, the National Association Opposed to Suffrage. Yet it continues to exist and even to prosper in the mysterious unaccountable way of a paradox. Here is an organization that declares itself against suffragism and feminism in all its forms, against politics, partisan or nonpartisan, yet enters politics to urge its propaganda and the realm of feminism to the extent of making an active campaign to have the votes of women kept separate from those of the men.

Miss Mary G. Kilbreth, president of the association, asked the attorney-generals of thirty-two States to do this and now that the election is over is continuing the effort to have the votes of the women kept separate at the next election, from those of the men. She expresses herself as fearful that at any time it may be decided that women voting is not constitutional, so if their votes are kept apart no confusion will arise, she argues.

A certificate of contest has already been filled with a State secretary by a defeated candidate, Miss Kilbreth states in a letter to Secretary of State Colby, the defeated one crying "sour grapes" by saying: "My defeat is due to illegal voters of the female sex."

The Woman Patriot (an organ opposed to suffrage, tells with vivid glee the story of Mrs. John Sherwin Crosby, founder and honorary president for life of the Woman's Democratic League of New York, who was expelled from the membership of that body shortly before election, because she had organized a "Harding and Wadsworth women's Democratic league."

Mrs. Crosby refused to get out, saying she was a lifelong Jeffersonian Democrat and "only death can remove me from membership in the club."

In spite of all protestations, however, Mrs. Crosby was "tried" before a committee of seven Democratic women headed by Mrs. Charles D. Hirst, nationally known in Democratic circles. It was a long and stormy session which would be funny if it were not pathetic even as revealed in the unvarnished accounts of it. Now the National Association Opposed to Woman's Suffrage is using this tilt of women politicians as propaganda for opposition to the woman vote. But, and here is the paradox, Mrs. Crosby said at the time of her "trial" that "Senator Wadsworth exhibited great vision when he voted against woman suffrage. Women are not fit to vote. You are proving it here today."

And yet the only woman who won a seat in Congress was definitely and radically opposed to woman suffrage. It is a little mixed, isn't it? Perhaps by next election women will know where they stand in national politics.

This is an indication of how Southern California women feel politically. Miss Mary Foy is giving a luncheon tomorrow in at the Mary Louise tea rooms for Mrs. Clara Shortridge Foltz, an honor extended to a "Republican leader victorious by a Democratic leader defeated," as Miss Foy herself puts it. The guests are members of both parties who are friends of Mrs. Foltz.

D.A.R.

Celebrating the signing of the Mayflower Compact, the Daughters of the American Revolution of Southern California will give a reciprocity tea and program at the Ebell clubhouse. Tuesday, at 2 p.m. A program consisting of living pictures depicting various phases of the life of the Mayflower passengers, from the beginning of their journey until the landing on the New World's shores, will be given. The signing of the compact will be an exact copy of the old steel engraving of the actual hapening.

There will be a piano solo by Mrs. Thomas Hall, a vocal solo by Miss Edith Hitchcock, and a reading by Miss Virginia Middaugh.

Mrs. James Gordon is directing the pictures and Miss Harriet Spaulding, the well-known history instructor, will interpret them.

Invitations have been sent to the Daughters of 1812, Founders and Patriots, Society of Mayflower Descendants, Colonial Dames, Sons of the Revolution, American Legion, Society of the Colonial Wars, Children of the American Revolution and the State Board of the D.A.R.

Hollywood Woman's Club.

An unusually interesting affair among women's clubs was the drama luncheon of the Hollywood club Wednesday, when Mrs. William de Mille was in charge of the program, with Reginald Pole as the guest of honor. Mr. Pole, who appeared as the Christ in the Pilgrimage Play, spoke of the life and work of Ibsen, whose play "Rosmerholm" has been on at the Little Theater the past week. He gave readings from "When We Dead Awake."

Mme. Anna Rusena Sprotte was heard in a song recital, with Mrs. Gertrude Ross at the piano, at the regular afternoon session. Mme. Sprotte's charmingly varied program was the aria from "Mignon" (A. Thomas;) "Mother, My Dear" (Treharne;) "Slumber Song" (Gertrude Ross;) "Call of the Trail" (Fay Foster;) "Work" (Gertrude Ross,) and the final group, three folk songs of Czecho-Slovakia; Cadman's "Song of the Robin Woman," "Inter Nos" and "Spring's Singing" (A. McFayden.)

This week, Wednesday, the ever-popular public-affairs luncheon will be held, with Mrs. Charles H. Richmond as chairman. Local community problems will be discussed and questions answered. At 2:30 p.m. Miss Winifred Rousee will lecture on "The Bible and World Events." Miss Rousee has created great enthusiasm for her lectures on the Bible before many audiences in Los Angeles.

Miss Ruth Bullard, a Hollywood girl, who has toured with Mme. Sembrich, will give a group of violin numbers, accompanied by Mrs. Bernard Brown. Each week the club is adding a new feature to interest and hold the attention of the members, and this week it is the gymnasium class, meeting tomorrow at 10:30 a.m., for athletic and social dancing.

Woman's Symphony.

Edna Foy Neher is the youthful president of the Woman's Symphony Orchestra, which was recently organized, but is already seriously practicing for two entertainments to be given after the opening of the new hotel, the Ambassador, on Catalina street. The second rehearsal was held last Wednesday, when there were forty young women musicians present.

With Henry Schoenfeldt as director, the suite of Gypsy Songs by Anton Dvorak were played and Mr. Schoenfeldt told of his personal friendship for the great composer. Morris Schernoff was an interested visitor and commended the work, especially the rhythmic beauty which was attained in the playing of the Slavonic and Hungarian music.

Other officers of the organization are Gertrude Barrett, Ida Weber, Junggulst, Addie Meek Glidden, Etelwyn Conrey, Mildred Stevenson, Mae Marshall and Bessie Fuhrer Erb.

Catholic Woman's Club.

"What is a Foreigner?" is to be the subject of a lecture by Carol Aronovici, Ph.D., before the Catholic Woman's Club, Wednesday at 2:30 p.m., in Columbus Hall.

Dr. Aronovici, who is now an expert consultant in city planning, community surveys, housing and zoning, came as an immigrant from Rumania and has experienced the difficulties of adjustment in a strange land. This lecture on the subject of Americanization, which is the special study of clubwomen at present, is full of human interest and inspiration that only life and achievement can impart.

The clubhouse fund is growing steadily and the choice of a lot for the building site will be made this week. During the season many entertainments are planned for this benefit.

Wa-Wan Club.

Hostesses for the last meeting of the Wa-Wan Club at the Alexandria ballroom Wednesday were Mrs. William Mabee, the president; Mrs. William Duffield, hospitality chairman; Mrs. Emma Porter Makinson, Miss Maud Howard, Miss Ruth Hutchinson and Mrs. Carline Cadman.

Basil Ruysdale, the famous baritone, was the guest of honor and gave a short talk on the opera for the benefit of the student membership.

Women are to blame for boys picking pockets, says a prominent probation officer on the Pacific Coast. Again, it is a case of "the woman—she did it," for the officer says that seldom do the boys steal from men on the streets. Because women have no pockets in their clothes and flaunt their shiny beaded or gold or silver purses in the faces of youngsters, they cannot resist temptation, she declares.

Mrs. Cora Holland, chairman of civics for the Los Angeles District of Women's Clubs, spoke before the Reciprocity Club last Tuesday, expressing the earnest hope that the interest shown before election would continue, with a concerted action among club women to bring about better conditions, both politically and economically in the whole district.

"The peaceful countenances and resigned expression" of American women are the characteristics that have most impressed the Brown Prince of Siam, who, after a visit in the United States, studying the railroad system, has just left for Siam. This is perhaps the first time that a foreigner has found "peace" and "resignation" in American womankind.

Penny, penny, who's got the penny? The P.-T.A. has the penny, they have many; they came from Sue and Benny, from the banks of Jim and Jenny, and they have been coming all the week. The chink, chink of banks and rattle of coppers has sounded in many a home every morning this past week, along with the ever-perennial plea, "Mother, mother, where's my 'rithmetic? I'll be late if you don't hurry and sew that button on quick."

It is the annual penny drive of the Parent-Teacher associations, sponsored, abbetted, indorsed and otherwise propagandaed by teachers and principals of schools; 1500 teachers, 350 schools, and something like 100,000 kiddies, big and little, and the latest computation is that this drive in little will amount in big to at least $1000 for the scholarship fund

DUARTE.

Mrs. Bashor of this city entertained with a surprise birthday party for her husband on Friday evening, October 29. There were four tables of guests and five hundred was the amusement of the evening. The decorations were typical Halloween in character, and were carried out in the refreshments. Included in the guest list were Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Brewer, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Jackson, Mrs. Kemp of Riverside, a sister of Mrs. Bashor's, Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Nearly one hundred guests were present to enjoy the hospitality of the Bairds, the evening being devoted to dancing. Music for dancing was furnished by the Rose orchestra. Decorations were unusually attractive, all the rooms being bright with greenery and blossoms. In the living-room, which, with the dining-room, gave the space of 16x62 feet, an ideal place for dancing, autumn leaves, ferns and pink roses were used. Yellow chrysanthemums and autumn leaves formed the decorations for the library, and in the music room, where the orchestra held forth, pink roses were the decorations. In the billiard room, yellow chrysanthemums and ferns were the beautiful adornment, while begonias and ferns were used in the smoking room, and roses, autumn leaves and zinnias were chosen for the sun parlors. Punch was served throughout the evening. A delicious supper was enjoyed later in the evening. Those who assisted the host and hostess were the regular club hostesses of the evening, including Mrs. Hugo Krutzsch, Mrs. Henry Waterman, Mrs. Hugh Marshall, Mrs. A. J. Mellenthin, Mrs. V. E. Head, Mrs. J. Allen Munro and Mrs. C. T. Renaker.

Rutledge, Mrs. Clarence White, Mrs. E. E. Edwards and Mrs. Anderson. The hostess served dainty refreshments at the close of the afternoon.

A KANSAS TOREADOR.

"Howard Stone had an experience last week that would chill the courage of the average man to the bone," says the Saffordville correspondent to the Chase County Leader. "He attempted to drive a bull from a kafir corn field when the animal made a mad rush for him. He hit the bull in the head with a hammer he was carrying, but this only maddened the animal, who made a second rush. This time Howard side stepped and hit him the second time, this time breaking the handle out of the hammer. Howard's wit prompted him to jump over the bull's head and onto his back when the next charge came. He did this, but the animal still had the advantage as Howard was turned the wrong way on the bull's back. The result was that he was thrown violently to the ground, for a time stunning him so that when he attempted to rise he found that he was unable to do so and by this time the bull was making another charge so he simply flattened his body on the ground and lay perfectly quiet. The bull evidently thought the job was done as he gave it up and ran away."—[Emporia Gazette.

Lives to See the Prescription He Wrote in 1892 the Worlds Most Popular Laxative Remedy

DR. W. B. CALDWELL TODAY
Born Shelbyville, Mo., March 27, 1839
Began the manufacture of his famous prescription in 1892

Founder of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, the largest selling liquid laxative in the world, long past Biblical old age, but hale and hearty—Still sees patients daily—Wonderful achievement of a "country doctor."

WHEN I started to practice medicine, back in 1875, there were no pills or tablets or salt waters for the relief of constipation, and no artificial remedies made from coal tar.

The prescription for constipation that I used early in my practice, and which I put in drug stores in 1892 under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a liquid remedy, and I have never had reason to change it. I intended it for women, children and elderly people, and these need just such a mild, safe, gentle bowel stimulant as Syrup Pepsin.

I am gratified to say that under successful management my prescription has proven its worth and is now the largest selling liquid laxative in the world. The fact that over eight million bottles were sold by druggists last year proves that it has won the confidence of mothers whose chief interest is the health of their children.

It is particularly pleasing to me to know that the biggest half of those eight million bottles were bought by mothers for themselves and the children, though Syrup Pepsin is just as valuable for grownups. The price of a bottle holding 50 average treatments is sixty cents; such a bottle will last a family several months.

I have never made a secret of what is in Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is a compound of Egyptian Senna and other simple laxative herbs with pepsin and pleasant-tasting aromatics. These ingredients are endorsed in the U. S. Pharmacopoeia. I consider Syrup Pepsin today in the serious 82nd year of my age, as I did in 1892, the best remedy a family can have in the house for the safe relief of constipation and its accompanying ills, such as headaches, biliousness, flatulence, indigestion, loss of appetite and sleep, bad breath, dyspepsia, colds and fevers.

Millions of families are now never without Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and I believe if you will once start using it you will also always have a bottle handy for emergencies.

TRY IT FREE Send me your name and address and I will send you a free trial bottle of my Syrup Pepsin. Address me Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 513 Washington Street, Monticello, Illinois. Everybody now and then needs a laxative, and it is well to know the best. Write me today.

Peg o' Los Angeles goes buying

Much fur is used on the new winter hats.

Have you visited that quaintest of shops in Chinatown—F. Suie One's, at 510 N. Los Angeles street? It's teeming with charming oriental novelties, incense burners, enamel candy or jewel boxes, wonderful embroideries for trimmings, mandarin coats and porcelains. They have a perfectly delightful shop at [illegible] W. Seventh and will open another in Pasadena about November 15 at 50-52 S. Raymond avenue. A large assortment of baskets are shown at all the stores and everything in Chinese novelties.

Those wonderful art model phonographs promise to be very popular this Christmas and there are many exclusive models which are found only at that beautiful music shop—Richardson's, 727 W. Seventh. The supply is really limited, you know. Regular Victrolas and records are also sold here.

Have you seen those onyx bracelets set with rhinestones?

Too fat? Too thin? Not exactly, well? You can be brought to normal weight and measurements and be vastly improved in health by the Reiss system—without drugs or starvation. It's intensely interesting. [illegible] 802 Title Guarantee Bldg., 220 W. Fifth. Phone 67815.

A hat remodeled at the Make Over Hat Shop is like a New Hat! It's lines are becomingly curved to suit the wearer and to conform with the smartest style notes. They carry many charming hats in stock.

The newest vanity case is of gold or silver and is called the "powder-rouge."

At Hudgen's Permanent Wave Shop they examine your hair and will not give you a permanent wave unless they are confident it will be satisfactory, as all hair does not take the wave well. This policy of theirs has been instrumental in building their business up to the largest of the kind west of New York. This is also the oldest wave shop on the Coast. They use both the Frederic's and Nestle systems and make any kind of a wave you may want. Entire front fourth floor, Brack-Shops, 7th and Grand. Phone 62862.

Of course, you all know what is in store for you at a Thanksgiving dinner—but if you have never dined at the charming Mary Louise you do not realize how much more than a mere dinner awaits your pleasure. In these fascinating rooms you may get the rarest of treats on Thanksgiving any time from 2:30 until 7:30. One may engage tables now for dinner on twelfth floor, Brack-Shops.

Say, the new onyx rings to match the bracelets are the last thought in gewgaws.

Here's a perfectly dandy special—a wonderful shampoo with lemon rinse, a curl and hair dress—all for $1 at White's Hair Dressing Parlors, 706 New Pantages Bldg. Hill at Seventh. They do marcelling and all beauty work expertly. Call 11984.

You'll be delighted with the permanent wave given at the Nestle Shop, eighth floor, Brack-Shops. Mrs. Lux makes large natural waves, which defy detection and do not break. But she has a way of her own and curls the finest hair—also white hair without discoloring it. Phone 63332.

There are those clever new bracelets of antique ivory inlaid with gold and enamel, too.

Mr. Korber says, Don't be trite by saying you are not going to do anything for Christmas this year. Be original and say I wonder if I have forgotten anyone. Thousands of gift cards, pictures and correct framing. Art Novelty Shop, 250 South Broadway.

Your old jewelry made into new and clever designs will be a constant delight, if you trust the work to W. Earl Starr, 709 S. Hill. He has in stock some wonderful cameos, indestructible pearl necklaces, rings, brooches and other jewelry in newest modes.

Large wrappy coats are made of bolivia, marvella, duvet de laine.

They will show you the menu for their Thanksgiving dinner at the Boston Lunch Room, 709 S. Hope, and you can make reservations now—it will be $1.25, all home cooking. Regular evening dinners are 65 cents.

You may eat your Thanksgiving dinner in leisurely fashion at Heiberg's—The Sign of the Candlestick—[illegible] South Western avenue! It's the most unusual and delightful of tea rooms! Dinner will be served at 1, 5 and 6 o'clock.

Smilin' through the fogs and rain—you'll be happy with a Nestle permanent wave put in by Lois Hardin, 306 Haas Bldg. 62715. No kinks!

Then there is the French novelty chain fashioned of black ribbon and jet beads.

Los Angeles has one of the finest exclusive pearl shops in America. If you are interested in pearls it will pay you to see B. DeHowes and Son, [illegible] floor, Brack-Shops.

Why be fat? Take it off where you wish and have the figure of a Hebe without effort, diet or drugs. Improve circulation. Weight Reducing Co., 613 Brockman Bldg.

A dandy special on the very last word in sweaters—all-wool tuxedo style—is offered at Cowen & Son's, 724 South Hill, only $9.75. Can you believe it? They have wonderfully smart angora scarfs at $14.50 and $8.75, also cute Tams to match at only $4! A beautiful catalogue will be sent on request, and mail orders promptly and carefully filled.

The newest novelties in electric lights are those cunning vampire dolls and kewpies with real hair holding little parasols over their heads for lampshades. They are exciting a lot of admiration at the Golden State Electric Shop, 748 W. Seventh. I cannot imagine anything lovelier for a Christmas gift—but they haven't many. Of course you'll find all kinds of electric wonders—coffee urns, waffle irons, toasters, Cozy Glow heaters and things too numerous to mention. They don't mind showing them, either!

When giving "sweets to the sweet" one should be mindful of the appearance as well of the quality of the gift. Little did Monsieur Paulais think in the olden days that his wonderful confections would one day help to gladden the lives of many a Los Angeles maiden, but such is the case. At Paulais, 741 S. Broadway, one finds candies of a sweetness and delicacy unbelievable — bon bons, chocolate creams, nougat, honey rolls.

The newest of small handbags is called the Princess Josephine.

When making your own frocks or holiday gifts you will find the greatest helper in the world is the Elite Button Company! They do all the latest machine stitchery, picoting, hemstitching, plaiting and make smart buttons at 603 Title Guarantee Building.

If Indians always have luxurious hair—so may you if you use Yuccaton Hair Tonic, which is what the Indians have used for centuries. At the Yuccatone Parlors, 827 West Seventh, they give wonderful scalp treatments and do all kinds of beauty work and are giving $6 worth of work for $5. Phone 13077 for appointments.

Did you ever see so many hats enhanced with feathers gaily bobbing?

With the holidays almost upon us one must think of evening clothes and thinking is all some of us could do if it were not for that most wonderful of shops—Everywoman's, which comes to the rescue of the woman with the slender purse. Here you will find party frocks galore and evening coats to go with them, white furs, evening slippers and I know there is at least one feather fan, why not drop in at 448 S. Alvarado and look them over? It's one door north of Sixth, and is open daily, also Monday and Thursday evenings. [illegible]

The Nestle Wave is a beautiful and permanent wave which is just like natural curls and it is a comfort to know that however rainy the weather, the hair will remain wavy and graceful. Emma Atkin makes large soft waves or small curls for young girls and curls the hair for the fashionable "bob" at 736 W. Seventh, at Marguretta's.

One's evening gown may have no back and yet a train.

Chestnut is that clever artist I told you of who remodels furs so you will think they are brand new! Why don't you take yours there and surprise yourself? He promises to get all work out in two weeks' time and you will have something new and up to the minute before you know it! He is on the fourth floor of the Brack-Shops, and prices are very reasonable.

Have your old ostrich feathers made into a fan for Xmas. Many beautiful designs are shown by Vallely and Vatcher, 640 Broadway, 6th floor (opposite Bullock's.) Their charges are very moderate. Don't wait until the rush is on. They will remodel your old marabout and make it look like new.

If you will just make haste and have your pictures framed before Thanksgiving—or select your framed pictures at Phil Bernays' Art Shop—they will give you a dandy discount. Cured His RUPTURE

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 421-G Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.—[Advertisement.

ANARCHISM WILL SUPPLANT REDS.

Moscow Editor Declares the Downfall of Lenine Near.

Plotting Always Popular in Russia, One Reason.

Hatred Against America Told by Correspondent.

[SPECIAL FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

REVAL, Nov. 1.—Anarchism will supplant Bolshevism. Eight hundred thousand adherents of the doctrine, "Every Man His Own Despot," are organizing and gathering force to overthrow the Collectivist oligarchy of Nicholas Lenine. Bolshevism's worst enemy is not at Warsaw or in the Crimea, but in the eastern city of Kazan. There the boldest anarchist chiefs are now at work. So says Bucharin, editor of the Moscow Pravda, who, after Lenine, is the greatest living exponent of sovietism.

Two days after Bucharin's declaration, anarchists threw bombs at Pekoff in Southwest Petrograd; again two days before anarchists murdered Hrubievski, president of the soviet in the Province of Kaluga, and again before this was a long series of anarchist plots.

PLOTTING POPULAR.

"As plotting is always popular in Russia, there is no doubt," says Bucharin, "that anarchism suits our nation better than Bolshevism."

Bucharin added that Russia's educated classes, as far as they have not been extirpated, welcome the anarchist initiative. The revolution, they reason, must run its full course towards extremes before it returns to moderation; and when, after Bolshevism succumbs, anarchism has had its brief and bloody fling, the first antisocial stage of the great revolution will come to an end.

ANARCHISTS IN MAJORITY.

In soviet Russia, Bolshevist Communism, according to Bucharin's statistics, has fewer adherents than anarchism. The Communists number 625,000; the anarchists a couple of hundred thousands more, or in all, about 850,000.

Bolshevism's greater notoriety is caused by the fact that it controls the machinery of government and has the only legally permitted press. But anarchism shows its growth by the rapid increase in its illicitly published newspapers.

In 1919, all soviet Russia had only one anarchist newspaper. This was the Golos Truda (Voice of Labor.) Its first editor, the American-Russian Novitsky, was executed by Chinese coolies last fall.

Today rich and powerful anarchist associations publish nine periodicals, led by Volni Trud (Free Labor,) Dolol! (Down with!,) Veemirnaya Voina (Universal War) and The Russo-American Spark.

In all these the Russo-American element is strong. The editor of the Spark, which brings out an English edition, designed for smuggling across the Atlantic, is Alissayeff, formerly docker at the North German Lloyd Pier at Hoboken, N. J., and with him works a certain Plieskin, once an American Bolshevik, and a friend of Trotzky's when Trotzky lived in the Bronx.

HATRED OF AMERICA.

The intellectual leader is Kusta Lehtimaki, a Finn and brother of the Bolshevik, Conrad Lehtimaki, who wrote the revolutionary novel, "Out of Hell!" Both the Lehtimakis lived in America. They are deadly foes.

Conrad is right hand of Boss Zinovieff at Petrograd; Kusta concocts murder plots against the same Zinovieff. The anarchist headquarters also shelter a dozen other Russians, Russian Jews and Finns, who for a time worked or plotted in America.

The whole movement is permeated by hatred of American institutions. The Spark daily urges murder of American statesmen and leaders of industry and finance and puts at the head of its "List of Those Who Should be Victims," the name of America's President.

Anarchism's acting hand is Vassili Yegeroff, a 22-year-old youth. Yegeroff has killed more men in more miscellaneous causes than any man-killer in history. He has been Social-Revolutionary, Social-Democrat, Bolshevik, Maximalist, Green Army commander and mere bandit.

ESCAPES SIBERIA.

When aged 17, he was sent in chains to Siberia for letting a bullet fly at the Governor of Livonia. A month after condemnation he cut through his inch-thick chains with a nail file and escaped.

As Green Army commander, he distinguished himself by carrying off the daughters of soviet magnates. Today he is organizer and chief of the murder institution known as The Blue Dagger.

The Blue Dagger—in Russian Sinyi Kinzhal—was formed for the purpose of assassinating Lenine, Trotzky, Zinovieff and other soviet despots. Experience soon proved that it was as hard to approach these men as it was to approach Tsar Nicholas II. So the Dagger tried at smaller game and here it has had success.

Local Bolshevist Presidents and Secretaries and chiefs of the Labor Espionage Collectives are found dead in their offices or apartments, always with a dagger stab through the back usually also with a pinned-on notification that they have been condemned to death by the Blue Dagger Fighting Organization of the all-Russian Anarchist League.

Yegeroff this year concocted three plans for the destruction of the soviet chiefs, with the murder of these men, he proclaimed, would disappear Bolshevism, that being the product of a handful of men of astute brains and hard fists. The first plot provided for the removal of Lenine, Trotzky, Finnce Commissary Krestinsky, Vinovieff of Petrograd, Rykoff, President of the Council of National Industry and Editor Bucharin.

AN EYE CAMERA.

The smallest camera in the world which has actually "taken" pictures, is doubtless the eye of the frog. It has been found that if a frog is kept in the dark for some time the retina of the eye, on being dissected, is found to have a purple-reddish color which fades away or becomes blenched on exposure to daylight. If the eye be placed in front of a window and left there, or "exposed" for some time, and then fixed in a 4 per cent solution of alum an optogram is partially fixed and retains an inverted picture of the window with its cross bars as pictured on the retina. It is claimed that by a similar photographic process the last picture or image retained by the eye of a dead man or animal may be preserved.—[Boys' Life.

The People and Their Daily Troubles

DOROTHY DIX TALKS

'S IDEAS ABOUT WOMEN.

BY DOROTHY DIX.

It is funny what queer ideas men have about women. For instance, it never occurs to a man that it makes any difference how he looks. He is for the beauty stuff himself, and he passes up every woman who can't qualify in the beauty exam. When he takes a girl out, she must be a good looker, and dolled up in the latest style, and at a party nothing short of a gatling gun would induce him to ask a fat, bald-headed, elderly lady, verging on old maidenhood, to dance with him.

But the fact that he possesses a figure built on the architectural lines of a bay window, and is homely enough to stop a clock, does not prevent him from picking the peachiest peach in the orchard and blithely making her his own if he can.

After the couple are married it is the husband who demands that his wife shall always be spick-and-span, while he arrogates to himself the right to wallow in dowdiness if he is more comfortable in old clothes than new.

Funny, isn't it, that men think women have a less keen aesthetic sense than they have, and that they care less for appearances, and are less easily disillusioned?

Funny, too, isn't it, the masculine idea that a woman never wants to talk about herself, and the things she is interested in, or to tell her hopes and plans, and ambitions, and that her only role is a sympathetic listener?

Intelligent women read up on the subjects in which their husbands, fathers and sweethearts are interested so that they may be able to talk intelligently to them, but did you ever hear of a man reading up on fashions, or baby culture, or studying the cook-book so that he could have a heart-to-heart talk with the women of his family on the proper length of skirts, and the best way to modify milk, and how to make hollandaise without its [illegible]

Every man has some woman to whom he talks endlessly about what he is going to do, and what he said to Jim and what the boss said to him, but the minute a woman begins to tell a man of what she is planning to do, and the little run in she had with the cook, or the forelady at the store, he suddenly remembers a pressing engagement that calls him hence.

And a man expects a woman to consider it a privilege to listen to his tale of woe, and to bind up with her sympathy the wounds the world has dealt him, but let a woman try to tell a man of her troubles, and he flees from her as though she was a leper.

Odd too, isn't it, that a man never realizes that a woman finds it just as heart-wrenching a thing to give up a career in which she is making a success as he would? It doesn't occur to him that the sound of applause is sweet to a woman's ears, that she gets an ineffable thrill of enjoyment out of the exercise of her talents, that she likes the money that she earns.

No woman would dream of asking a man to make the sacrifice of all of these things, for the sake of living in a little house, and ministering to her comfort and pleasure. But a man has no hesitation in demanding it of a woman, and he thinks she should be jolly glad to do it.

If a woman made her husband give up his business when he married her so that he would have more time to spend with her, or if she made him leave the stage, because she didn't like to see him in love scenes with other women, or if she forced him to give up writing or painting so that he could wheel the perambulator, he would hate her for the way she had blighted his life, but when he hands out this kind of treatment to his wife he thinks she should be doing flip flops of gratitude before him.

Queer how men think that women enjoy being dependent! A male worm would resent not having a leaf of its own to gnaw on. No matter how good and kind and generous a father or a wife a man had, he would loathe having to go to him or her and ask for clothes money and street car fare. And if he had a backbone the size and strength of a silk thread he would despise himself for being such a parasite.

But men think that women have no shame in being dependent and that they enjoy the process of wheedling and cajoling a few nickels out of the pockets of their lords and masters.

Odd, too, isn't it, that a man never speaks of his employer having "given him" the money for which he has toiled eight hours a day! Nor is he filled with any sense of gratitude toward his boss as he receives his pay envelope. But he speaks of "supporting" the wife who works fourteen hours a day washing and cooking and sewing for him and his children, and he feels that she should be sloshing over with thanks to him and appreciation of his goodness in giving her her board and clothes in return for her labor.

Strange also, most strange, men's child-like faith in the adamantine quality of woman's love and constancy. There is no idea that men are committed to more firmly than that once a woman loves a man she will love on till the end of time, no matter how he may treat her. Likewise he is convinced that a woman's one wild desire is for domesticity, and that she cannot possibly get enough of it.

He knows that there are times when a man yearns to slip the yoke and jump into green fields and new pastures, but it never crosses his mind that his wife has the same mad magenta moments, as the futurists would say.

He knows that it is the easiest thing on earth for a wife to kill her husband's love, and the hardest job for her to keep herself through the years a steady flame of enchantment to him, but it does not even cross his mind that a woman's love is even a more fragile thing than a man's, and that he can only keep it alive by cherishing it and coddling it with never-ending skill and tenderness.

Queerest of all, isn't it, that men have never found out that human nature is all of the same piece, and that as they think and feel, women also think and feel! Only more so.

LETTERS TO "THE TIMES."

Agrees With the Court.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 12.—[To the Editor of The Times:] The Supreme Court has finally handed down a decision in the prohibition amendment controversy which is favored by the majority of the people in the United States.

A mere man, now, has the privilege of making 200 gallons of dry wine for his own use and also the privilege of moving his liquid refreshments whenever he pleases and where he wishes without facing a barrage of prohibition officers, who sometimes are deaf, dumb and blind when they are requested to be by the political and gumshoe bosses.

The poor devil who hasn't the price to purchase his liquor, owing to the fancy prices obtained at the present time, is fresh prey for the so-called crafty official who stools around and finally locates his little supply on hand or a small quantity in the making.

The only thing prohibition officers of this locality have done for the working public is to boost the price of a much-needed refreshment and force an honorable citizen, who has never violated a Federal or another kind of ordinance to break the supreme law of the United States, the Constitution.

What are the back alleys and cheap rooming-houses doing at the present time? Most of them are used as a sham for bootleggers to peddle a concoction which they call gin or whisky, which is no more than a mixture of poisoning beverages.

The effect of the above mixtures and the secluded spots where they have to be obtained by the glass at four bits a drink is having a terrible effect on the younger generation. What has brought this about? Any sane man or mother can explain it in one word, "Prohibition."

Burk Cochran, one of the oldest men who spoke at the Democratic convention, had the following to say in connection with the word prohibition:

"I protest against the word prohibition as it is a word too frequently used in penitentiaries and should be looked upon as such by all wise Americans."

Mr. Cochran is a man of over 80 and I think many men could profit by his eighty years of experience.

TILLMAN JONES.

Defends California

POMONA, Nov. 12.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Have just been reading Mr. James Wood's letter in The Times of present date, and have drawn his picture in my mind—the same old chromo—I've been "butting" up against so frequently, when coming in contact with a certain class of people just from the East. They come out to California with the intention of having a good time, but mostly at some one else's expense. Of course, we have no trouble in "spotting" that class of tourists.

Now, when an easterner comes out here, and calls us selfish and speaks of our "meannessess," it makes me mad. Then, that prayer of the professors infant daughter, is an old chestnut, with the exception, he used the word "infant," where is used to be "little girl." "Infants do not pray. They are too young.

Of course rent profiteering is a deplorable thing, and the real Californian is trying to remedy it, but how can he, when so many of our buildings have fallen into the hands of easterners, who came here for the especial purpose of profiteering in real estate. There isn't one landlord in ten, in the city of Los Angeles, who is not an easterner, who came here for the express purpose of profiteering.

Then he speaks of our laws as being "deplorable." Now I don't believe that is nice of Mr. Wood. I wouldn't go to his State and make that remark about his laws, even were it Missouri or Arkansas. One should never forget that he is a gentleman, and that a gentleman should always be courteous.

As to our four dollar alien poll tax, I think it is very reasonable, as he has the protection of our laws; if he gets sick and destitute, we can take him to our hospital, if he dies, we bury him, and all we ask is that he pay the "measley" little sum of four dollars per year. What kind of a 30 cent man is one who will call the citizens of a State hard names, for having that law on its statute books, and when it has been sanctioned by a large majority of the electorate. This State has a gorvernment "of the people."

As to prohibiting alien ownership of land, we would like to save it for our brthren from sister States, so that they may not only visit us, and revel in our delicious winter climate, but that they may come and abide with us—that there will be room for them, which would not be the case, were we to throw our gates poen to the hordes of the Orient.

From my observations I find the people who are condemning California for preventing certain classes from owning land, are people who do not know what they are talking about, on account of not having come in contact with the real conditions.

L. C. JOHNSON.

Surgery of Prehistoric Age.

That the use of splints in the treatment of fractures was known to the rude practitioners of prehistoric America is revealed by examination of the skeleton of a young woman recently exhumed in the Pueblo ruins at Aztec, N. M., reports Popular Mechanics Magazine, in an article in its November issue. The left forearm, badly broken in two places, was surrounded by six carefully made splints of wood, with evidence that there had been eight or nine.

WARTS AND MOLES.
SUPERFLUOUS HAIRS.

Let me demonstrate free of charge how pulling, cutting, using wax depilatory and the so-called hair removers promote growth of hair on the face. My electric machine is the best and the only known method of killing superfluous hair, fuzz and moles, without destroying the surrounding tissue. I am able with my machine to destroy 300 hairs per hour.

I have just come from abroad, therefore, to become established, I will do my work at half rate. I guarantee that any hairs or moles which I treat will never return.

I have a lady operator for the ladies, while I treat the men.

NOTICE—

"PETERSON'S PROGRESS"
"PETERSON'S PROGRESS"

WE MOVE TO THE 3-STORY AND BASEMENT BUILDING AT 1047 S. GRAND NOVEMBER 15, 1920.

Starting 5 years ago from a small office space in the Union Oil Bldg. with a capital of $300, we have built up a business in rebuilt and used cars which is today the largest of its kind in the West and which comprises four complete up-to-date stores with repair shops in Los Angeles, Pomona, San Bernardino and Anaheim. The great forward step we are now taking places us in the front ranks of the automobile industry as a whole in this section and proves our faith in the future of the rebuilt car industry.

In our new location we will operate a complete rebuilding plant including body-building, painting, upholstering and overhauling. We will aim at all times to carry a complete line of popular rebuilt cars ranging from Fords to Locomobiles, it being our intention to satisfy any want regardless of price or make, at lower prices than our competitors.

We shall cater only to that class which demands value and mechanical excellence and shall adhere even more strictly than in the past, if that be possible, to our motto, "THE TRUTH TOLD ABOUT EVERY CAR SOLD." Our business has been built on truth and honor, not because that was good business policy, but primarily because that is the only honest and satisfactory way to trade—on a basis of mutual service.

To our friends whose patronage has helped us build our splendid business, we offer our sincere thanks. We bespeak the patronage of the automobile-buying public in general, assuring it of fair and courteous treatment and exceptional values in guaranteed rebuilt cars.

AFTER SAVING TO BUY USED CAR, THEN WHAT?

The purchase of a used automobile is a happy event realized in many families only after careful saving. In the saving process the family does not leave the money on the front porch or give it to some stranger for safekeeping. The money is wisely placed in a responsible bank for protection.
But after the sufficient amount has been saved and the joyous day of the purchase arrives—then what? It is obviously necessary to continue the safeguarding methods, or the savings may be swept away. The purchase should be made from a long-established firm, equally as responsible as the bank.

The Howard Automobile Company, the largest distributors of automobiles in the world, and one of the strongest financially, guarantees every car sold by the Used Car Department. This guarantee not only covers the car, but the validity of the title as well.

These are the two vital points in the purchase of a used car.

To accommodate those who are unable to call on us during the week, our Used Car Department will be open from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Sundays.

Has a World's Coal Supply.

Our discontented miners would do well to read, mark, learn and inwardly digest the fact that France has just bought 100,000 tons of coal from the Chinese government. This "deal" synchronizes with the advice given by all the South African shipping lines to burn coal from the Transvaal mines, and is an indication of the trend of things incident to the exorbitant demands of labor.

China's coal supply is practically inexhaustible, and is virtually untouched. She has enough good coal to supply the whole human race at its present consumption of 1,000,000,000 tons a year for a thousand years. The coal bearing areas of China have been estimated at more than 200,000 square miles—a territory twenty-five times the size of Wales, and it is a remarkable fact that instead of being limited to a few favored districts, this vast supply of coal is found all over the empire and in every province.—[London Post.

Observe "Apple Butter Day."

More than one thousand members of the Schwenkfelder faith assembled at the Worcester Schwenkfelder Church, near Lansdale, the other day to commemorate the 186th anniversary of the landing of the followers of Casper Schwenkfeldt in this country.

The first Schwenkfelders came from Germany in 1734 on the ship Saint Andrew. They landed in Philadelphia and held a thanksgiving service similar to that of the Pilgrim fathers. The service was held at an open field at Third and Market streets, Philadelphia. The first frugal meal in this country consisted of bread, butter and apple butter.

Each year on the anniversary of that date the Schwenkfelders have met in commemoration. Each year the custom of serving bread, butter and apple butter has been followed. Because of this custom the day has come to be known among the Schwenkfelders as "apple butter day."—[Philadelphia Record.

BUMPER BABY CROP.

Brookline Leads With 40 Deaths Out of Each 1000 Born.

America's baby crop in 1919 made a new record, says the American Child Hygiene Association.

An annual preliminary report on vital statistics by that organization, covering data from 269 cities with an aggregate population of 31,000,000, shows the infant mortality rate declined to the "encouraging figure of eighty-seven deaths per 1000 babies," a saving of nearly 12,000 babies over the 1918 rate and 7000 fewer deaths than in 1917.

In the cities covered by the report 680,000 births were recorded, while in the entire country it is estimated there are 2,500,000 newcomers annually. All of the cities included have populations of 10,000 or more.

Babies seemed to thrive well in some of the larger cities, where formerly the death rate was very high. Among the twenty-four cities of more than 250,000 population reported ten were below the average for the 269 and the death rate for the group was eighty-five, two points below the general average.

"Ten years ago," the report said, "it was the aim of many a department of health to see this rate fall below the 100 mark. In 1919, only four of the twenty-four larger cities were above it." These were Pittsburg, the "Smoky City," where the rate was 115; Buffalo had 107, Kansas City, 103, and Jersey City, 102.

Houston, Tex., was the best baby-raising ground among the cities of more than 100,000 and less than 250,000, with a mark of sixty-one. Berkeley, Cal., had a baby mortality rate of 44, while Brookline, Mass., with a population of less than 50,000, led all the rest, with the healthy percentage of 40.

New York City registered eighty-two, St. Louis scored seventy-five, Los Angeles and San Francisco, sixty-seven and sixty-five, respectively; Minneapolis, sixty-one and Seattle fifty-four.

El Paso, Tex., had the worst showing, with 245. Burlington, Vt., was next, with 150.—[New York World.

PAPER CLOTHES IN EXHIBIT.

Paper brokers and wood pulp manufacturers exhibiting at the exposition of the chemical industries in Grand Central Palace insist that the manufacture of paper clothes is an industry with a great future.

In the Paper Mill and Wood Pulp News booth is exhibited a sample suit made by a paper suit manufacturer in Neenah, Wis., which looks like a fair competitor for the product of cloth. The suit, which is claiming much interest from visitors, is extremely light in weight, a dark blue in color and to appearance very durable. At a short distance one easily mistakes it for a suit of tweed.

The Department of Commerce in Washington has been interested in the possibilities of manufacturing suits from paper.

Clothing manufacturers have argued strongly against their introduction in this country. They have been characterized as "impossible," "a wild dream" and "a joke." "Imagine a man dressed in a paper suit," one clothier is reported as saying, "walking down Broadway in an April shower! Do you get the picture?"—[New York Tribune.

Have "Libraries" of Bones.

Certain medical schools of American universities have "lending libraries," in which bones take the place of books on the shelves, and are let out on exactly the same system as in a circulating library. The student on paying the sum of 25 cents can borrow any bone in the collection, and, by renewing the loan every week, keep it for a month.

Some of these libraries are valued as high as $25,000.

A complete skeleton is worth from $30 to $100, according to its condition. A skull brings from $1.25 to $5; and a perfect specimen—a comparative rarity—as much as $50. Leg, arm and collar bones command a ready market at from 50 cents to $1.25 each, while a perfect string of spinal vertebrae is valued at $5.—[North China Herald.

A Reducing Process.

Ragged little Tom Brown had been committed to Juvenile Hall, where he was immediately given a bath, clean clothes, had his hair washed and cut short. His old clothes were burned. As his adenoids interfered seriously with his breathing, they were removed. When he had recovered from the operation the matron noticed that there was an unusually big and disfiguring wart at the end of his thumb.

"Tom," she said, "I'll see that the wart is removed today."

A look of absolute disgust spread over Tom's face. "Gosh!" he exclaimed. "Don't you let a fellow keep anything here?"—[Unidentified.

WORK USED AS A CURATIVE.

Government Tries Scheme With Invalid Veterans.

Occupational Therapy is Fast Proving Its Worth.

Special Attention is Paid to the Mental Cases.

BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

WASHINGTON (D. C.) Nov. 10.—Patients in forty-five government hospitals are having work prescribed for them for curative purposes.

The ward doctor, making his round, stops at the bed of a man recovering from a broken arm:

"A little stiff," comments the doctor. "Need something to loosen you up." And he pulls out a large blank, and checks it in various places, so that it prescribes one hour a day of light crafts work in the ward, as a therapeutic measure.

DOCTOR DEPRESSION.

The blank is turned over to a reconstruction aide, who proceeds diplomatically to find out if the patient has any interest in weaving, drawing, basketry, or wood-carving. If he is apathetic, she tries to arouse his interest gradually, without making him feel that he is being forced. Usually cases of extreme depression can be reached and benefited by hand work of some sort or another.

SKEPTICAL AT FIRST.

At first many doctors in the hospitals were skeptical of the physical good to be derived from pounding with a hammer or designing a book cover. But, confronted with statistics from their own hospitals and seeing the effect on the patients in their care, the government physicians have nearly all been converted to a firm belief in Occupational Therapy.

This method of treatment doubtless reminds you of the work done in the army hospitals, by reconstruction aides, and it is an outgrowth of that, though different in many ways. The idea started years ago, when some hospitals and similar institutions had convalescent patients do light work as much for a help to the institution as for the exercise it gave the patient. Then some fifteen years before the war, two or three civilian hospitals obtained workers, who could teach patients handicrafts to employ their minds, and perhaps keep their muscles from getting stiff from idleness.

GREW OUT OF WAR.

There the matter stayed until during the war it became an institution in the Army and Navy hospitals as educational and reconstructive work, with the idea of giving mutilated men some new interest and useful occupation. But all this time, there was no definite system developed showing the relative curative values of the different types of work.

This is being worked out now in the hospitals of the Public Health Service, and the surgeons in charge say that they are "just beginning to see the possibilities of work as therapy.

ADAPTATION IMPORTANT.

"Adaptation of the work to the individual is extremely important, according to Dr. Hugh S. Cumming, Surgeon-General of the Public Health Service. Unless he is guided in selection of work, the active tubercular patient may be attracted by heavier work than is considered to be beneficial, such as carpentry.

Basket work with large reeds often fits in well with excitable mental cases. A simple pattern with no complications of elaborate design or unusual shape is given them, because the monotony of weaving round and round without much need for thought has a quieting effect. The active tubercular patient, on the other hand, is rarely given reed work, as it requires considerable effort. But he can make intricate designs in raffia basketry, as this type of work keeps the mind fully occupied, but does not require very great exertion on the part of the patient.

These are crude classifications, and the doctors are well aware of it. As time goes on, however, they expect to study the cases in more detail, in order to know more accurately the value of motion and effort used in the crafts and in different kinds of garden work.

A MENTAL HELP.

Dr. Maddox explains that the curative influence of a suitable occupation is more often mental than physical.

"There are nearly always in a hospital," he says, "a few patients who are inclined to argue about everything. If you can set one of these men to follow your instructions in folding a paper puzzle, or threading a needle, you have got him to take orders, and he will be that much more tractable when it comes to matters of medicine and diet.

"Then, many hospital patients become depressed and morbid from lying idle during a long convalescence. For one of these gloomy patients who is able to get about, the doctor would prescribe some kind of work to be taken in the hospital workshop. At first, perhaps, the patient is only wheeled down to the shop to watch the other men at work, as a diversion. Then, he is drawn into the conversation of the whittling, joking workmen, and in a few days he is at work, and one of them."

In the year in which the Public Health Service, has been giving this kind of treatment, it has found the effect on morale to be no small part of the value of the work done.

THE NEW CIVILIANS.

The Public Health Service has in its charge all the ex-soldiers who need treatment for physical disability. When these men were in the Army hospitals they were under orders and could not go home or back to camp until discharged by the surgeons. Now, the men in care of the Public Health Service are civilians and have the rights of civilians to leave the hospital even against the doctor's advice (that is, unless they are mental patients.)

Some of the men have been leaving sooner than they should because they tired of the monotony of hospital life or because they thought they could improve as rapidly at home or even at work. "Something to do" in these cases has proved a valuable first aid toward keeping them contented.

WORK MEANS CONTENTMENT.

In one hospital, it is reported, where there were 392 men, 263 were taking occupational therapy and 129 were not. Of the 263 only two left the hospital before they were discharged by the medical officer, while of the other 129, 83 either deserted or left the hospital against the advice of the physicians. Of course, it is not fair to say from this that occupational therapy held 262 of these men, or that the eighty-three would have stayed if they had taken it. But the records sent in each week from the Public Health Service hospitals tell an unvarying story of increasing interest on the part of the men who have a chance to try the work cure.

OVER THREE THOUSAND.

Over 3000 patients, or about one-third of those in forty-five government hospitals, are taking occupational therapy now under the supervision of 250 reconstruction aides and a few technicians. There are six more Public Health Service hospitals which have not started the treatment because competent aides are scarce and the government is taking no others. Its regulations demand that to be an aide a woman must be a graduate of a college or a normal or art school, and she must be an experienced teacher of arts and crafts or of academic and commercial subjects, or in case applicants are not able to show graduation from an institution of recognized standing they must show three years' training, including at least 200 hours' training in the type of work they expect to do in service hospitals. Applicants with these qualifications have been hard to get, but now that occupational therapy is on the road to becoming a recognized institution in hospitals girls are looking upon it as a profession. The Teachers' College of Columbia University and Milwaukee-Downer College recognize occupational therapy as a major course, and some hospital training schools are giving courses to fit girls for this sort of work. The Public Health Service believes that eventually the work cure, with competent aides and simple equipment, will be a part of the plan in every progressive hospital.

DISPOSAL OF ARTICLES.

One point which is in a way important is the disposal of the articles made by patients. According to the present arrangement in the Public Health hospitals, when a patient makes two articles, one is claimed by the government and the other is his to sell or to keep. By turning one back to the hospital to be sold, the workman pays for the material given him. The work cure is not primarily commercial, yet the sale of some of the craftswork is desirable if only because of the psychological effect on the patients. A steady market for the hospital work has not yet been established, though it is believed that there is a demand for a good grade of beautiful craftswork, and many of the hand-carved boxes, woven table runners and Indian baskets made in the hospitals are beautiful. One connoisseur in Indian relics was strongly impressed by the excellence of the raffia baskets copied by patients from good Indian designs.

Santa Claus Ship to Carry Goodies to Dalmatia Kids.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—A Santa Claus ship is going from America to Dalmatia. It will be furnished by the Navy Department, and the cargo which is to delight the kiddies of the Adriatic Sea country will be supplied by the American Junior Red Cross.

The sending of the ship was suggested by Rear-Admiral Andrews, commanding American naval forces in the Adriatic. He wrote that the children of Dalmatia needed better clothing and nourishment than they received, and that they did not know what toys were like.

Laden with 2000 pairs of socks, a like number of stockings, thousands of cans of condensed milk, and hundreds of bars of chocolate, and toys, the vessel will leave Hampton Roads early enough to reach Spalato so the gifts can be distributed before Christmas.

FIND FARMER'S BODY IN ABANDONED WELL.

WIFE AND YOUNG SON HELD FOR MURDER OF HUSBAND AND FATHER.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

SPRINGFIELD (Mo.) Nov. 13.—Mrs. Mary McCormick, widow of John McCormick, a farmer, whose body was found in an abandoned well near Monett, Mo., and their 15-year-old son, Sheridan, were held in jail at Cassville today on indictments charging first-degree murder.

Threats are said to have been made against McCormick and on one occasion while he was working in a field a bullet passed through his hat. He attributed the shot to careless hunters. On October 11 his home was burned, but he continued to live in one of the farm buildings. When he failed to vote November 2, after having been missing several days, a search resulted in finding the body in the well.

The grand jury investigated and yesterday the widow and son were arrested. In support of their charge against the mother and son, county authorities today said domestic difficulties were responsible for the death.

CRIME LESS IN 1920.

State Probation Secretary Credits Decrease to Prohibition.

There was a 34 per cent decrease in the number of offenders brought before the courts in seventeen of the larger cities in this State during the first three months of the year, from the same period last year, according to Charles L. Chute, Secretary of the State Probation Commission, who attributes the decrease in crime to prohibition. His figures show that 45,143 offenders of all ages were arraigned in these courts during January, February and March, 1920, whereas 68,535 offenders were brought before the same courts during the first three months last year. The decrease is 23,392, or 34 per cent.

"In the opinion of practically all the judges and probation officers consulted, this remarkable decrease in court work is attributable largely to the effects of prohibition," Mr. Chute says. "In practically all of the courts, by far the greatest decrease has been in cases of public intoxication, disorderly conduct and other offenses growing out of drink, although there has been a decrease in other offenses as well.

"Every court covered by the investigation showed a reduction in court cases due to prohibition. There were no exceptions. For instance, in all the magistrates' courts of New York City, there was a decrease of 52 per cent, in cases of public intoxication. Only 914 persons were brought before all the Magistrates' courts for the first three months of this year for intoxication, as compared with 1914 for the same period last year.

"One police justice writing to the commission expressed the view of many, when he said, 'Prohibition has made the police business dull compared with the old regime.' A probation officer states that he finds 'prohibition is instrumental in bringing about better home conditions.'

"A woman probation officer, who deals with delinquent boys and girls says: 'Prohibition has turned the tide for the women and children. Despite the cost of living, men who formerly neglected their families have been able in many cases to start bank accounts, make payments on homes, clothe their families well, put coal in the cellar and get food in the larder, things unknown in some of these homes before the saloons were closed. The best of it is that the majority of these men tell me they don't want the former conditions to return, because they have learned what enjoyment can be gotten out of home life not disturbed by drink.

"The commission finds that whereas the decrease in court arraignments in the courts studied, was 34 per cent, the decrease in the number placed on probation was only 26 per cent. This indicates that the probation system is being used in a larger percentage of cases. Reports also show that with the elimination of habitual drunkards and other intoxication cases coming before the court, which nearly always failed, when placed on probation, more effective results are being obtained by probation officers. The opinion was almost unanimous among probation officers that the effects of prohibition are beneficial to their work."

Walter Greenwood, safety engineer of the Carnegie Steel Company, is here attending the convention of the Association of Iron and Steel Electrical Engineers.

"The slogan 'safety first' " he said, "was originated by Robert J. Young, of the Illinois Steel Company. Many have claimed credit for the phrase, but Mr. Young was the author of it. Right now we have passed the stage of 'safety first' and in advanced period the new phrase which has taken its place and which is swinging across the country is 'Safety Always.' THE TALLEST RACE.

Stature Varies with Climate, the Smallest Men Living in Desert.

Habitually we think of Japanese as small men, and imagine a Russian to be a tall man in a big greatcoat.

The Englishman, according to popular opinion, is supposed to be taller than a Frenchman, much in the same way that a dog of the St. Bernard or mastiff breed surpasses a terrier or a poodle. The common idea is not so very far wrong, for measurements made by scientists show that differences exist between the average height of races of mankind. Generally, stature varies between 5 feet 4 inches and 5 feet 10 inches. Of really dwarf men, under 5 feet in height, there are few, chiefly the bushmen of South Africa, the dwarfs of New Guinea and the Laplanders.

The tallest race in Europe is to be found in the United Kingdom, in the southwestern corner of Scotland, where the average height is 5 feet 10 inches. Scotsmen, on the whole, are a tall race, and on the average measure about 5 feet 9 inches. This height is only equaled by the tall Polynesian and American races.

Among the shortest men are the South Italians, Sicilians and Sardinians, where the usual height is as low as 5 feet 2 inches or 5 feet 3 inches. The lowest average in England is found in the southwestern parts and in Wales, ranging from 5 feet 6 inches to 5 feet 7½ inches. In Northumberland it rises to 5 feet 8 inches, and among the burly Yorkshiremen it even goes as high as 5 feet 8¼ inches.

This leaves the nearest rivals on the continent far behind. Even the North Germans, Danes and Scandinavians, who are classed among the tallest people there, only range from 5 feet 5 inches to 5 feet 7 inches. Frenchmen are generally smaller, measuring about 5 feet 5 inches, and the Spaniards an inch shorter.

Stature depends a good deal on climate. The Bushmen live in the great Kalahari Desert, the tall Polynesians on the Pacific Islands and enjoy all the advantages nature can bestow. The Hottentots, of the same race as the Bushmen, but inhabiting more fertile country, are appreciably taller.

On higher ground the people are usually shorter, so that the Swiss and Central Europeans generally are stocky rather than tall. Sometimes stature varies with the class of men. Early emigrants to America before things were made easy by the steamship companies were always taller than the races from which they had sprung. They are picked men, full of physical vigor and courage. Stature varies also according to profession. About half the professional and ecclesiastical classes are tall men, but only about one in ten of the cobblers, weavers and tailors reach the height of 5 feet 7 inches.—[North China Standard.

WORK DONE BY BOY AND GIRL CLUBS.

Purdue University officials show that 19,162 Indiana boys and girls out of 27,275 who began various farm projects completed their work last year and made profits of $250,000. This year it is expected that 80 per cent will complete their projects. County agents have been assisted by county school superintendents, vocational teachers, township, trustees, farmers and others. The chief thing to remember is that this club work was not undertaken until the county agents began their work.

Boy and girl club programs constitute another effort to keep boys and girls on the farm. One club may have for its project the raising of pigs; another bread baking, canning or other kinds of housework. Colt clubs, calf clubs and other live-stock ventures interest boys. Such efforts have benefited the members themselves and brought about a different feeling between father and son.

There was a day when boys worked on the farm because they were farmers' sons. No wages were paid. Board and clothing were considered sufficient. Spending money rarely came and, although the boy worked hard and long, he shared in none of the profits from his labor. The newer idea is to permit boys and girls to own live stock. Frequently they are able to exhibit better calves, pigs or colts than their fathers have been able to raise. The boys and girls learn to have a proprietary interest in the farm. Instead of considering the work a necessary evil, to be endured until such time as they may migrate to the cities, they come to view the land as the place where they had best remain.—[Indianapolis News.

THE NEW EDEN.

I went to Baltimore to speak to a Methodist conference some time ago. I met there a splendid looking man, with a long, flowing white beard, and I said to him, "Do you preach in this section of the country?" He said, "Yes, sir; I come from the eastern shore of Maryland. Have you ever been on the eastern shore?"

I said, "No; I am sorry to say that I have seen every other beauty spot in this country, I believe, but I never have seen that."

"Well," he said to me, "we love that country. I have been preaching there for sixty-six years. We are a strange people and we have some strange legends, and one of them is that a long, long time ago when Adam and Eve lived in the Garden of Eden, they fell sick, and the Lord was very much disturbed about them, and He called a council of His angels and wanted to know where they should be taken for a change of air, so that they might recover.

"The Angel Gabriel suggested that they should be taken to the eastern shore of Maryland, and the Lord said, 'No, no; that would not be sufficient change!' "—[Franklin K. Lane in National Geographic Magazine.

San Franciscans Threaten to Take Legal Action.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 13.—An appeal has been made to Gov. Stephens and Ray L. Riley, State Real Estate Commissioner, by the Apartment-house Owners' and Managers' Association of San Francisco for assistance in preventing the consummation of several real estate deals to convey to Japanese apartment-houses in that city. The request for co-operation was made through Eugene N. Fritz, president, and Thomas J. Christal, secretary of the association.

WOULD CANCEL LICENSES.

In the letter to Riley it is claimed by the association officers that the deals are about to be closed. They request that the licenses for real estate dealers involved, although they mention no names, be canceled.

It is stated that if Riley does not take action to stop the sales the association will institute legal proceedings under the antialien land law to obtain relief.

Riley, who declares the communication to Gov. Stephens was referred to his department for attention, today replied to the association's complaint in a letter addressed to the organization. The letter, in part, follows:

WANTS NO INTERFERENCE.

"Please be advised that I consulted with the Realty Board in the city of San Francisco at the time the Beck Apartments were supposed to have been acquired by Japanese interests. Mr. Leslie Burke, secretary of that board, informed me that his people were able to cope with the situation and suggested that the department take no official action until after a full investigation was made by them.

"I instructed my deputy, Mr. Deane, in the San Francisco office, to keep in touch with the situation and offer our services at any time in an effort to prevent any acquisition by Japanese interests.

"May I ask you to give me concrete information, which I assume is at your disposal, in order that I may be fully advised of the situation?"

HOOVER HAS FAITH IN STATE'S FUTURE.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 13.—Announcement of the purchase of a 2500-acre tract of farming land in Kern county, between Shafter and Wasco, by Herbert C. Hoover and Ralph P. Merritt for the development of a cotton, vineyard and orchard enterprise, was made by Merritt here today. Merritt would not name the consideration, but said the land was purchased from the Kern County Land Company. Planting of the land has already begun, Merritt said. It will be known as the "Hoover farm."

Both Hoover and Merritt will participate in the management of the farm, Merritt said. They will not live on it, however. "The farm was purchased by us because of Mr. Hoover's faith in California land investments at the present time," Merritt said. "It is purely a personal and private proposition, but intended at the same time to give renewed assurances to prospective investors."

It is a significant fact that since that day nineteen years ago THE SUN DRUG CO. has never ceased to be a local institution in fact and in spirit.

At no time in the SUN DRUG CO.'S history has any but local initiative and energy or any but local capital been called to its assistance.

The men who have built THE SUN DRUG CO. to its present eminence are local men who look to no "foreign" owners for orders. The money invested in this business is local money which does not pay a cent of interest to ouside capitalists.

In oher words, THE SUN DRUG CO. is by, for and of the people of Southern California! The phrase, "Your Home Druggist," is no idle slogan, but a vital fact which means exactly what it says.

We believe these facts are "SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT." This is a local organization—yet we do not appeal for your patronage because of this fact alone. But we do believe you will see the wisdom of buying from a local organization when it delivers to you drug store service second to none in America.

FOR SALE—

"BUY IN THE SOUTHWEST."

No other section of Los Angeles offers the prospective home owner so many advantages or better values than can be found in the SOUTHWEST.

This section bounded on the north by Exposition Boulevard, on the east by Main st., running south to the city limits and west to the Angeles Mesa highlands, includes beautiful Vermont Square, Manual Arts, Florence Heights, [illegible] Square, Angeles Mesa, etc.

Prices have not been inflated in the SOUTHWEST—good homes and lots can be bought for 25 per cent less than other parts of the city.

Vermont ave. with the proposed boulevard extension to the sea should become one of the best business streets in the city. Western ave. is now being paved from West Adams to Slauson and when completed will make an unbroken straight ribbon of asphalt from the foothills in Hollywood clear through to the sea. Street car lines running into the SOUTHWEST have long been known as the best in the city, so that transportation facilities to and from any part of the Southwest are unsurpassed. THIS MEANS A GREAT DEAL TO BUSY BUSINESS PEOPLE.

EDUCATIONAL ADVANTAGES UNSURPASSED. Almost within walking distance of any part of the SOUTHWEST is the MANUAL ARTS HIGH SCHOOL and the UNIVERSITY OF SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA, and scattered over the section are many public grade schools.

Here is another important fact. This a NEW section, practically all the homes have been built within the last 2 to 10 years. You know what that means—that lots will steadily increase in value and building of new property will continue for years. Right now there are hundreds of new homes being built in all parts of the SOUTHWEST.

See this section before buying. Compare values with other parts. Drive over SOUTHWEST blvds. See the beautiful Southwest homes.

You will surely find that California home you've longed for.

Call on any one of the following reputable and established real estate dealers and let them show you this beautiful SOUTHWEST section:

AN ESTABLISHMENT.
IN ITS OWN PARK
OF
FOUR SUPERBLY LANDSCAPED ACRES ON BEVERLY HILLS.
The pinnacle achievement of California's master builder, submitted to those whose opportunities and inclinations have made them judges of life's real luxuries.
This home unquestionably represents the purest conception of Spanish architecture, introduced on the Pacific Coast, and while modern to the nth degree, it still preserves the atmosphere and quiet dignity of old Madrid.
ITS SITUATION ON A GENTLY SLOPING HILLSIDE COMMANDS A VIEW OF UNSURPASSED BEAUTY, EMBRACING AS IT DOES THE MOUNTAINS SURROUNDING, THE LOW MESAS, AND IN THE NEAR DISTANCE, THE BLUE PACIFIC.
THE INTERIOR, WHILE OF MAGNIFICENT PROPORTIONS, MOST SUCCESSFULLY CONTRADICTS THE ADAGE "YE CAN'NA BE BAITH GRAND AND COMFORTABLE."—IT IS OLD WORLD CATHEDRAL IN THE SPLENDOR OF ITS DECORATIONS AND APPOINTMENTS, AND STILL AS "[illegible]" AS A BACK BAY COUNTRY CLUB.
Purchase optional.
With or without furnishings.

INVESTORS. INVESTORS.
READ THIS CAREFULLY.
I invite the business man and investor to investigate a piece of gilt-edge improved property I own on FLOWER STREET near NINTH only a short distance from ROBINSON'S DEPARTMENT STORE AND BROCKMAN BUILDING AT SEVENTH AND GRAND AVE. Considering the proximity to BANKS, OFFICE BUILDINGS, HOTELS, DEPARTMENT STORES, where can you find an investment as safe as this and where the ground values are as sure to increase? This property is improved with a good building and by further improving will pay a good income on the investment. Vacant property opposite is held at $800 per front foot and I will sell the entire property for $20,000. There is at least $10,000 profit in this property within the next few years.

CARLSBAD-BY-THE-SEA.

CARLSBAD is the fastest-growing district in San Diego county. Many hundred acres of irrigated land have been sold during the past months to experienced ranchers and truck growers.

A growers' and marketing association, with seventy-four members, has been organized and handles the sale of crops.

CARLSBAD, on account of its even climate, produces the most tender fruits and vegetables out of season, when they bring the very highest prices. Returns of as much as have been made from one crop. Two out-of-season crops are grown every year. And, mind you, this is not in the desert, has no extreme heat or cold; in fact, CARLSBAD boasts of having the most equable climate in the world.

You can't put the buildings, fencing, alfalfa, etc., there for $2500, but allow only that, that's total of $46,500. Imperial Valley.

FOR SALE—

POSITIVELY
The biggest bargain ever offered.

$46,500 is what the ranch is worth.

$28,000 is what you can buy it for.

$80,000 will be its value in 5 years.

WE CAN PROVE EVERY STATEMENT.

Ranch contains 320 acres splendid soil, full water right, 300 shares. Is located only ½ mile from good town with railroad station, bank, stores, hotel, fine new school. In the Niland-Calipatria district, Imperial Valley. Has nice new cottage, 10,000-gallon water tank, hog pens, fencing, 80 acres in alfalfa, 200 acres now going into barley, 60 acres already seeded. You can't buy raw land with water right for less than $100 per acre in this vicinity, and it costs $50 an acre to level and grade your land ready for irrigation. At $100 per acre, 320 acres figure $32,000. Add to this $12,000, being 240 acres level and graded and under cultivation at $50 per acre, total $44,000. You can't put the buildings, fencing, alfalfa, etc., there for $2500, but allow only that, that's total of $46,500. Land is fine for alfalfa, corn, any grains, grapes, grapefruit or any crops grown in the Imperial Valley. This is your opportunity whether you want to farm or buy for speculation. Terms can be had. Owner is compelled to make that tremendous sacrifice as is in urgent need of cash. HARRY B. GOODMAN CO., Exclusive Agent, 1006 Investment Bldg. 63586.

YOUR LAST OPPORTUNITY—In Central Alberta and Saskatchewan are rich park lands—open prairie ready for the plow, interspersed with trees, which afford excellent shelter for stock. Here grain growing, dairying and live stock raising are being carried on successfully. The country is ideal for mixed farming. The Canadian Pacific Railway is offering a large area of these fertile lands in Lloydminster and Battleford districts. This fertile land will become the home of thousands of prosperous farmers. On similar land Seager Wheeler grows the world's prize wheat. Near Lloydminster the world's prize oats have been grown, and butter of the highest quality is made. A man can soon become independent on a farm in this district.
These lands can be bought now at an average price of about $18.00 per acre. You pay down 10 per cent. If land is purchased under settlement conditions, no further payment of principal until end of fourth year, then sixteen annual payments. Interest is 6 per cent. M. E. THORNTON, Supt. of Colonization, Canadian Pacific Railway, 101 Ninth Ave., E. Calgary, Alberta.

Buy now while the buying is good. All the crop colors and shows much larger the prices will advance—they always do. Nothing pays as well as a good grove. Here's an excellent buy, though not yet an income producer. Every tree a pedigreed tree. Get that? Every bud taken from big producing, big-paying trees. It is $1400 an acre now, but it will go to $3000 an acre, then $4000, then $5000. Just as sure as tourists are coming to California. Don't put off till after January 1st. You'll pay more then.

No. 1000—20 acres, 10 navels, 10 Valencias and 10 lemons. $1400 an acre. One-third cash will handle it and long time on balance. Away up in the foothills, on paved boulevard. Has its own water and an extra amount. You'll always be proud of this grove; 6 years old.

They don't lie. Beautiful large modern house, gas, electricity and city water. If you have other property, $15,000 will handle it. Let grove pay the rest.

No. 1007.—20 acres navels. $45,000. Fine water right and lots of it. Seven-room modern bungalow. Half cash and time, perhaps less.

No. 1500—7 acres, navels and Valencias. $18,000. Splendid water right; small tractor. Five-room house. A big paying grove. In 1920 it paid $10,000. Let's look at packing-house record. $8000 and one-third out of crop till $8150 is paid; balance mortgage.

YOUR LAST OPPORTUNITY—In Central Alberta and Saskatchewan are rich park lands—open prairie ready for the plow, interspersed with trees, which afford excellent shelter for stock. I still have a limited acreage for sale at $5.00 per acre. No better investment can be made now than test holes in new territory. The country needs all the oil you can find, and you have a safe and sure market.

BUSINESS INVESTMENTS—

THE MAN WE WANT

is not looking for oil, mining, patents, nor scheme—nor is he satisfied with his outlook on life and business that opportunity means nothing to him.

He is hard-headed, active, successful business man—probably with ripe experience, either as executive or directing the business affairs and the selling of a product and organization worth while.

He is mentally alert, cautious, of good reputation, financial standing and has proven that he can handle his money, his business affairs as well as his associates and lead them on to success.

He must be able to command about $25,000, which is to be used gradually in a business which he will be proud to be part and parcel of—financially and otherwise.

To such a man an opportunity is offered to associate with a set of young, practical, able business men, who are using their brain, brawn and capital, manufacturing a product that has the potentialities of making merchandising history, as no single item ever had on its sheer merits and popular demand without competition.

The repeat business, the present important accounts, the associates, the standing orders, the methods of doing business—no advertising, no mahogany office outfit, no debts, no elaborate manufacturing equipment at present, and the results obtained up to minute will instantly tell this man that nothing in the world is to stop him from being on the merchandising map with an enviable product—if he is the right sort of a man.

If he is not ready now, an invitation is extended to him to negotiate for the near future. We can wait.

Address R, box 222, TIMES OFFICE.

WE are confident that we have a wonderful oil property. We have exceptionally good geological reports. Chemists' analyses of oil taken from seeps on our property show the highest gravity oil with a paraffine base and the highest percentage lubricating stock of any California oil.

We have 4000 acres of patented land, 2500 acres of commercial leases and 7240 acres of Federal permits and a practically new rotary drilling outfit and a well down 350 feet, with $5000 worth of casing on the ground; all in California.

We have 5000 acres of commercial oil leases in New Mexico.

We want to develop these properties and we offer to any person who will join us in this development a 1-3 interest in all of said properties. Party will be required to advance $10,000, which will be expended for the benefit of the property under the control of the investor. Entire amount will be returned to him within 4 months and until it is returned his money will be secured by all the foregoing properties. For details address RR, box 362, TIMES BRANCH.

WE CAN PROVE EVERY STATEMENT.

You can't put the buildings, fencing, alfalfa, etc., there for $2500, but allow only that, that's total of $46,500. Land is fine for alfalfa, corn, any grains, grapes, grapefruit or any crops grown in the Imperial Valley. This is your opportunity whether you want to farm or buy for speculation. Terms can be had. BUSINESS CHANCES—Wanted.

WANTED—This should be a most interesting ad to business men who have a high class business for sale, and we hereby challenge any business man in Los Angeles to put our story to the test. Last Sunday we advertised a business that for certain reasons had to be sold within one week. It involved an outlay of $30,000, most of it spot cash. The owners came to us and made this statement. "We are informed that if there is a broker in the city of Los Angeles who can make this turn in record time, it is the firm of W. S. Rattray & Co." This business was sold through us two days after our ad appeared in The Times for just $30,000 and the men who paid that price to us made the statement that they would not have considered for one minute consummating a deal of that magnitude in that short time except for the fact that they knew they were dealing with a firm whose reputation and ability was above reproach. If this statement is an untruth, won't some doubting Thomas please take us to task and show us up before the public as a firm of imposters. To those who are looking for that kind of service please call on us at 600 Title Insurance Building.

CITY TO HAVE CIDER TESTER.

Pasadena Sleuths Look After "Unlawful Kick."

Eight New Mail Carriers on in Crown City.

Many Enlist for Battleship California.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

PASADENA, Nov. 13.—So many Pasadena citizens have been showing up in Police Court following cider jags that the police have started a cider-testing crusade. They are visiting all the soft-drink emporiums in the city, taking samples of the cider and giving them to the city chemist, who will assay them and determine if they have an "unlawful kick."

Three cider inebriates were sentenced by Police Judge F. C. Dunham today for drunkenness. The three were J. S. Manners, C. E. Lowery and J. C. Ducey, each of whom drew a ten-day jail sentence. Judge Dunham has set that as the standard punishment for persons arrested for drunkenness.

MORE MAIL CARRIERS.

Eight new mail carriers will be added next week to the postoffice service in Pasadena, two in South Pasadena and two in Altadena, it was announced today by Postmaster Clark McLain. Every locality in the free delivery jurisdiction of the Pasadena postoffice will thereafter have not less than two deliveries a day.

MANY RECRUITS HERE.

Pasadena stood second this week in the number of recruits furnished in Southern California to the new battleship California. This statement was made today by Chief Gunner's Mate J. C. Hill of the Navy recruiting office in Pasadena, after he had received reports from all the other Southern California cities.

BOY SCOUTS TO FIFE.

The Pasadena Boy Scout organization is to have a fife and drum corps, which will accompany the local troops at all their public appearances and expeditions. Tallman H. Trask, scout executive, stated today it was hoped to have the corps ready to take part in the Tournament of Roses parade on New Year's Day.

PROMINENT LODGE MAN DIES.

George F. Vierow, who had a wide acquaintance in Pasadena and has been a prominent member of the Pasadena lodge of Elks for many years, is dead. He had been in failing health for a number of years. He was formerly employed by the Southern California Edison Company and the municipal light plant, but more recently had been working for local cigar firms.

Mother Injured While Rushing to Bedside of Daughter.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PORTERVILLE, Nov. 13.—While hurrying to the bedside of her daughter, Mrs. Homer Hamlin of San Jose, Mrs. Katherine E. Leffler and son-in-law, Vernon L. Hall, of this city, had a narrow escape when their automobile turned turtle on the highway north of Madera early this morning. Mr. Hall escaped uninjured, but Mrs. Leffler received severe briuses and cuts, suffering greatly from shock. The car was wrecked.

Mrs. Leffler received notification last night of the serious illness of Mrs. Hamlin's year-old son, while an early morning message told of Mrs. Hamlin's being rushed to the hospital.

Mrs. Vernon L. Hall and father-in-law, Alma Hall, left at once for the scene of the accident and communication just received states that Mrs. Leffler is resting at the hospital in Madera and can be brought to her home at an early date.

SMALL RETURN FROM ATTEMPTED ROBBERY.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

TERRA BELLA, Nov. 13.—Robbers attempting to loot the postoffice safe at Terra Bella last night succeeded only in blowing open the outer door, but took small change from the stamp drawer and emptied the cash drawer of J. A. Brumagin's store, in which the postoffice is located.

A rear door had been broken open seemingly with a crowbar and generous use of soap points to work of professionals.

No explosion was heard and no trails left. Discovery of the burglary was made when W. H. Doan, an employee came down to open the office for the day. Sheriff Court Smith and postal authorities are working on the case.

San Pedro Man Charges Wife With Bigamy.

Bicycle Thieves Escape Officers' Bullets.

Raid Alleged Bootleggers' Headquarters.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SANTA ANA, Nov. 13.—"Judge, she talked like an angel," said Edwin M. Glaze, 22, of San Pedro, here today, when asked why he married Irene Previance, 22, of Glendora, on October 18, at Seal Beach. But just after the ceremony, Glaze said, she tried to "work" him for a large sum of money and, when he refused, she left him, Glaze said as he swore to a complaint charging his wife with bigamy. He alleges his wife was married to Charles Gibson or Charles Gibson Bassett in 1916 and that they had never been divorced.

Glaze alleges Bassett is wanted on a felony charge filed three years ago by a Los Angeles typewriter company, and the money sought from him by his bride, Glaze alleged, was to have been sent to his wife's first husband.

ESCAPE OFFICER'S SHOTS.

Despite three revolver shots fired by Officer Ballard, two Mexican bicycle thieves escaped, after dropping the stolen wheels and making their way through the Santiago Creek and near-by orchards.

The men were seen taking a bicycle from a rack at the Lincoln school, but had too great a start on their pursuers and outdistanced them.

Four quarts of vicious grape brandy, a five-gallon brown jug with an old-fashioned smell and a quantity of empty bottles and corks was the evidence in officers' hands here today against J. M. Maldonado, a Mexican, alleged bootlegger, whose place was raided by officers today. Maldonado is alleged to have received $15 per quart, and officers think business must have been brisk, as he had $117 in cash when arrested. Prohibition enforcement officers from Los Angeles came this afternoon to take charge of the prisoner.

FIGHTING DOCTOR.

New Surgeon at Soldiers' Home has War Record.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SOLDIERS' HOME, Nov. 13.—Maj. Vernon Roberts, World War veteran and former surgeon in the northwestern branch of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, and to which office he was reinstated at the close of the war, has been transferred to the Pacific branch as its chief surgeon. Maj. Roberts, though still a young man, has had an extensive and varied medical and surgical experience since attaining his professional diploma.

In 1909 he was appointed surgeon of Battle Mountain Sanatorium, Hot Springs, S. D.; transferred from there as surgeon to the northwestern branch, at Milwaukee, where he remained until proclamation of war with Germany. Unable to resist the call for medicos, he entered the World War army and was made surgeon of Provisional Regiment of the Fourth Division, and took active part in several of the chief overseas centers of engagements at Fort Evans Hospital, France, afterwards at Coblenz, Germany, until peace was declared, then remained in the Fourth Division, Army of Occupation, until May, 1919, when he returned with the troops to Camp Dodge in time to take part in the strike at Geary, Ind., and was discharged from the service in August, 1919.

Maj. Roberts, who is a native of Iowa, and his wife arrived at the home a few days ago, and now occupies the chief surgeon's quarters opposite the hospital.

Dr. Lawrence R. Hill of Los Angeles is another appointment, as junior assistant surgeon of this branch. Vacancies left by the resignations of Drs. Baker and Bogue, are now filled. The former expects to practice in the East, and Dr. Bogue, one of the most popular of the medical staff in the home, has a number of friends in Sawtelle, as well as in the home, who have prevailed upon him to take up an office in that town.

BRINGS HEAVY CARGO.

Boat Lands at Harbor with Tons of Steel Girders.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

LOS ANGELES HARBOR, Nov. 13.—With 800 tons of steel consigned to this port the steamer Eastern Merchant arrived here from Baltimore this morning. Among other articles she brought thirty-three girders for a Long Beach bridge across the flood control channel, which have an aggregate weight of nine and one-half tons; these are the heaviest single objects ever handled here, made of steel, with the exception of a fifteen-ton engine which was loaded on the Panama Maru when she sailed for Yokohama, November 10.

Steel shipments to this port are becoming heavier all the time with a prospect of the importations becoming greater. Both the Steel Exporter and Steel Maker brought cargoes here while others are expected soon, including the Steel Inventor.

The Alvarado, now in the harbor, brought 800 tons of pig iron from New Orleans and the West Apaum, which left here for San Francisco Thursday, dropped 500 tons of the same metal on her trip up the coast.

When the Point Bonita arrives here tomorrow from San Francisco she will prepare to take on 500 tons of general merchandise for the East Coast.

And after all, the successful marketing of the real estate mortgage will be an important factor in the solution of the housing problem which now exists throughout the country. There is no doubt but much legitimate building has been hampered not alone by high building costs, but also because of the inability of the average man to raise the money for building purposes. Given the opportunity to obtain the funds at a reasonable rate of interest, the man who has been putting off the day of building until mortgages become more readily marketable and building costs are lower, will once more turn his attention to home-building.

The Second-street Tunnel.

Apparently the Second-street tunnel project, which has been the subject of debate and litigation for the past ten years, is nearing a conclusion, and we are promised by Contractor Hays that the first of the year will see the dirt actually moving in the neighborhood of Second and Hill streets. Several months ago Contractor Hays made a similar statement, but no dirt has been displaced to date. All obstacles in the path of this undertaking have been at last cleared away, it seems, claims and objections have been passed upon by the courts, and the matter of assessments has been settled.

The need for another outlet to the western part of the city has grown more pressing during recent months. One needs to stand on Hill street at the corner of Sixth, Seventh or Third streets for only a few minutes, observing the pressure of traffic along these streets, to be convinced of the need for a new westward artery of travel. All of this has been discussed many times before; there is no necessity for pointing out the need of opening up Second street to the western portion of the city. But now that the legal and technical objections which have stood so long in the way of this needed improvement have been cleared away, let the work be started with the least possible delay.

Recent months have also shown how inadequate the Third-street tunnel has become. It is to be feared that this tunnel was built more with an eye to the immediate economy than to the future growth and expansion of the city to the westward, a growth which has been phenomenal during the past year. Several plans have been advanced for relieving this condition, but all of them entail the expenditure of much money, labor and time. It is inevitable that it will be found necessary to increase the capacity of this tunnel, but the speedy construction of the Second-street tunnel will serve for the time being to assist in caring for this traffic, and the latter project should therefore be given the preference, and vigorously prosecuted to a conclusion. In the meantime a plan for enlarging the Third-street tunnel can be worked out, ready to put into operation when the Second-street tunnel has been completed and is in use.

WATER BOARD LEASES OLIVE-STREET LOT.

A five-year lease on the property at the southwest corner of Fifth and Olive streets has been given by the city water board to Houston & Howard for a rental of $24,000. A concrete floor will be constructed over the excavation which was formerly used as a newsboys' ground, and the property will be used by the lessees as a parking place. The lease is held by Houston & Howard subject to the sale of the property, in which case the water board will absorb a portion of the cost of improvements.

SKILLED WORKERS COMING IN GREATER NUMBERS.

Labor Supply is Still Short in Some Lines Despite Influx of Workmen from the East.

That the supply of labor is becoming more adequate on account of the fact that skilled workmen are coming here from other cities, where building activities have quieted down, and that the building program of Los Angeles will show an increase rather than a decline is the opinion expressed by H. B. Webster, secretary of the Builders' Exchange.

Normally a large number of workmen come to Los Angeles at this time of year from other parts of the country, where construction work is hampered by cold weather, but this year the influx of skilled labor is greater than ever before, declares Mr. Webster. Correspondence with the secretaries of the builders' exchanges of eastern cities reveals a decided slackening in building activities there, with the result that these workmen are turning toward Los Angeles, where there is promise of plenty of work for them. While the influx of carpenters, plasterers and plumbers and other workmen in the building trades will exceed that of previous years, according to present indications, there is enough work on hand and in prospect to keep them all employed, and in some lines there is still a shortage. The greatest present shortage, says Mr. Webster, exists for plasterers and plumbers, and carpenters are also hard to find, particularly those who work in hardwoods and in the finishing processes.

Mr. Webster also believes that the building situation will be improved by the easing up of the money situation, and that building activities in Los Angeles, although they have broken all previous records during the past few months, will be greater than ever next year. "Money is easier to obtain for building purposes than it was a month ago, and it is believed by local builders that if the efforts which are now being made at Washington to get real estate mortgages exempt from income taxation are successful, a long step toward the solution of the housing and building problems will have been taken.

FINANCING DIFFICULT.

"I don't believe," stated Mr. Webster yesterday, "that many people are deferring building on account of the high prices for building materials. It is simply that they are unable to obtain money to carry out their plans. It is a well-known fact that more building is done in California on borrowed money than in almost any other State. Some individuals, who are planning on building a home, may be holding off until material prices recede, but they are very much in the minority.

"Neither can I see any indication of building material prices taking a drastic drop in the near future. Recently announcement was made of a decline of 40 per cent in the price of lumber, but these figures were based upon a comparison with the topmost prices which prevailed right after the war period with present prices, which is not a true basis of comparison. There has been no such decline in lumber prices recently. A few of the hardwoods have declined slightly during the past few weeks, but there has been nothing like a 40 per cent drop even in these lines.

CHEAPER HARDWARE.

"There are indications at present, however, that hardware and plumbing goods may be cheaper in the near future. The decline of building activities in the East and Middle West is resulting in the shipment of a large amount of these materials to Southern California, where there is a great demand for them, and we may, as a result, be able to get these supplies at a lower cost. Brick, tile and lumber cannot profitably be shipped from the East, however, at the present freight rates, and there is no promise of a decline in these materials. Continued building activity here at the present rate may even cause these materials to advance slightly.

"I can, however, see no reason why cement should remain at its present high level, or why it should be advanced, for great quantities of it are produced right here. Whether the prevailing high prices are the result of a combine or of a great demand I do not know. It is possible that the heavy demand has kept it up, for it is being very extensively used in the construction of many of the big downtown buildings, and in residence and street work. That is the only explanation which I can advance for the high cost of cement.

"There is certainly no indication of a decrease in building activities, and when the financial situation becomes easier, as it is now doing, I expect to see a still greater increase in building."

BROADWAY BLOCK IS AGAIN SOLD.

New Stores to be Built on West Sixth; Lease Taken on Figueroa Street.

The Tajo Building, a five-story and basement building of class B construction, situated at the northwest corner of First and Broadway, recently sold by the estate of Simona Bradbury to J. B. Lasky of Detroit, Mich., has been resold to Fred E. Keller. The structure contains five stores on the ground floor, while the upper stories are divided into seventy offices. The building has a frontage of sixty-six feet on Broadway, with a depth of 160 feet on First street. About $10,000, it is stated, will be spent in alterations and improvements, including new store fronts on the Broadway side of the structure. The sale was made by G. Y. Ridenbaugh and Glenn E. Duel of the Wright-Callendar-Andrews Company.

Mr. Keeler has also purchased, through the same realty brokers, the lot adjoining the northwest corner of Sixth street and Grand avenue, with a frontage of eighty-seven feet on Sixth street, and a depth of 115 feet. The property was formerly owned by Rosalia B. Shaffner. Plans are now being prepared by Architect William Lee Woollett for a two-story building, containing two storerooms on the first floor, and fourteen offices on the second floor, to be erected by Mr. Keller on this property.

A ninety-nine-year lease has been taken by Mr. Keeler on the property adjoining the northeast corner of Sixth and Figueroa streets. The owners of the property, which has a frontage of eighty-five feet on Figueroa street, are George T. Gray and E. F. Spencer. Mr. Keeler, it is stated, is contemplating the improvement of the lot with a new store building.

ARCHITECTS MAY CONVENE HERE.

Local Chapter Bids for Convention Honors.

Other Pacific Coast Cities Join in Invitation.

New Officers Nominated for Ensuing Year.

The American Institute of Architects, with its forty chapters throughout the country, has been invited by the Southern California Chapter of the organization to hold its next convention, scheduled for May, 1921, in Los Angeles. Joining with the architects of Los Angeles, Pasadena, Santa Barbara and San Diego in this invitation are the Mayor and City Council, the Chamber of Commerce, the Los Angeles Realty Board, the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association, the technical societies of Los Angeles and the civic bodies and clubs.

According to telegrams which have been received by the local chapter of the organization, great enthusiasm has been expressed by the chapters of San Francisco and in Washington and Oregon over the possibilities of Los Angeles being selected as the city for the next convention of the institute. The selection of a location is to be made at a meeting of the board of directors of the institute which will be held in St. Louis on November 19 and 20.

It was pointed out yesterday by R. Germain Hubby, secretary of the local chapter of the institute, that Los Angeles is in a position to make a strong bid for the next convention. Its building activity, as shown in the building permits, places it second to New York in the entire country. A great many worthy examples of good architecture have grown out of this activity, and also many problems in the building industry which have been solved here are deserving of study by visitors from the East.

NEW OFFICERS.

At the regular monthly meeting of the local chapter, held at the City Club on Tuesday, officers to serve for the coming year were nominated. The election of these officers will be held at the next regular meeting in Demember. Edwin Bergstrom, president of the local chapter, was renominated to serve for the coming year. H. F. Withey, vice-president, and R. Germain Hubby, secretary, were also renominated. Robert H. Orr, who has been serving as a director of the chapter, was nominated to the office of treasurer, and D. C. Allison received the nomination for director to take the place of Mr. Orr.

Other subjects taken under discussion at the meeting were city planning, architects associated for public service, medal awards, affiliation with landscape architects, jurisdictional awards and new members. The appointment of H. F. Withey to the City Planning Commission was also announced at the meeting. The committee on public information, of which S. B. Marston is chairman, is now working out plans, to be presented later to the chapter, by which the purposes and the work of the architects may be presented to the public without violating the professional ethics of the organization.

RE-ENTERS LOCAL FIELD.

Frank E. Hartigan, who, for thirteen years was engaged in the designing and building of houses in Los Angeles, has re-entered the building field after three years of operation in the automobile business. More than 200 houses were built by Mr. Hartigan in all parts of Los Angeles during the time he was engaged in this business. Mr. Hartigan has opened offices in the Story Building under his own name, and will again design and build the Hartigan houses.

Here Is Unquestionably The Biggest Bargain On The Market Today

40 acres principally full bearing orange trees, loaded with fruit. A crop conservatively estimated at $30,000 goes with the property.

The grove is planted to several standard varieties, Washington navels, St. Michaels and Ruby Bloods, also 4½ acres of Eureka lemons.

Last year's crop sold for $20,000 spot cash on the trees, not including over 5000 boxes of lemons.

The trees are in excellent condition, always having had the very best of care, in fact they were fertilized and fumigated last spring and again fertilized in October.

The soil is a deep rich loam, an underground cement distributing system covers the entire property. 85 shares of Temescal Water Company's stock is included, having a cash market value of $100 per share. This gives an abundant supply of water at a minimum cost.

The ranch is located approximately two miles southeast of Corona in what is proven to be a frostless district.

Anyone interested in purchasing a first-class grove of this character is invited to give this place a most rigid investigation. Owing to the present circumstances of the owner,

BUILDING IS VERY ACTIVE IN ARIZONA.

Shrine Temple in Phoenix Near Completion; Elks to Erect Fine Clubhouse.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) Nov. 13.—Building operations in Arizona still are extremely active, despite the slackening of mining work and production. An entirely new industry may be added in a pencil-wood factory at Flagstaff to handle juniper, which, in three varieties, is abundant at a slightly lower altitude than that in which the pines are known. The wood of at least one variety is pronounced excellent for the purpose. Safford has a new 100-barrel roller flouring mill. Chandler is to have a $40,000 ice plant, owned by H. J. Robichauf. At least a dozen new long-staple and short-staple gins were added during the summer to the cotton handling equipment of the larger valleys.

Work is being pushed on the big Shrine Auditorium in Phoenix, which may be ready for the proposed inaugural ball early in January. In size it is 100x188, and it will cost about $130,000. The Mason Building on Central avenue has been sold for $75,000 to Mose Drachman of Tucson. Phoenix Elks are planning a large office building and clubhouse, to cost at least $200,000, and Winslow Elks are to build a $50,000 clubhouse.

At the Pioneers' Home at Prescott accommodations are being provided, at a cost of $65,700, for sixty-eight more old Arizonans, bringing the gross number to about 130.

In Phoenix the new six-story Walker Hotel is nearing completion. At Litchfield the Southwest Cotton Company is to build a resort hotel somewhat similar to the Hotel San Marcos at Chandler.

In Mesa plans are expected to arrive soon from Salt Lake for the new Mormon temple, a structure to cost more than $500,000. In preparation for the work, a number of cottages are being built for the workmen, to later house the temple attendants. The Mesa Commercial Club is setting aside $200 a month in a building fund and hopes next year to have a home of its own.

APPOINTED AGENTS FOR HUNTINGTON PROPERTY

The exclusive agency for the properties of the Huntington Land and Improvement Company has been taken over by the Frank Meline Company. These properties include holdings at Oneonta Park, Oak Knoll and other tracts near Pasadena, and they are rated at more than $10,000,000 in value. In order to handle the sale of these properties more efficiently, the Meline company will open a new office in the Maryland Hotel building in Pasadena, and a tract will also be established at Oneonta Park. The new Pasadena office will be the fourth to be opened by the Meline company, others having been established at Beverly Hills, Los Angeles and Hollywood.

APARTMENT BUILDING TO RISE SOON.

Seventh and Westmoreland Will be Site of Modern Five-Story Structure.

Announcement was made yesterday that the plans for the new De Leon Apartments, to be erected at the southeast corner of Seventh and Westmoreland by the Westmoreland Apartment Corporation, are nearing completion, and that the construction of the building, which will cost approximately $250,000, will be started early in January. The property for this structure, situated four blocks from the California Hotel, was purchased by the corporation several weeks ago, and architects have been at work on the plans for the building.

The De Leon Arms will be a five-story-and-basement structure of class A construction throughout with the exception that the floors will not be of concrete. According to the plans, which have been prepared, the basement will contain a billiard room, an auditorium, a laundry, and storage rooms for the use of the tenants. On the first floor there will be a large lobby, 68x150 feet, with a ladies' parlor adjoining. The building is to contain in all sixty apartments of two and three rooms each. Each of the inside apartments will have an air vent extending from the basement to the roof, insuring sufficient ventilation facilities.

The Westmoreland Apartment Corporation, which will erect the structure, was incorporated early in September for $250,000. The president of the company is Leon E. Goodkind, while the secretary is R. T. Leonards, and H. B. Boesche, formerly the attorney for the Cudahy Packing Company, is the attorney.

AGENCY TAKEN OVER.

NEW BUSINESS BLOCK.

Building for Fuel and Feed Company Under Way at Van Nuys.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

VAN NUYS, Nov. 13. — Another brick business building on Sherman Way was started this week at the southeast corner of Delano street and the boulevard. The building is being erected for Mrs. Jessie P. Morgan of Hollywood, who has given a three-year lease to the Van Nuys Feed and Fuel Company of this city, which expects to move from its present location in the Stanford Block about January 1.

The new structure will have a frontage of fifty feet on Sherman Way and 100 feet on Delano. The walls are being built heavy enough to provide for a second story in the future. Two storerooms will be constructed in the front of the building one of which will be used by the Van Nuys Feed and Fuel Company for a salesroom and the other will be sublet. The rear, including about 2600 square feet, will be used by the feed and fuel company for a warehouse and storage and will have an entrance from Delano. L. W. Serrell, proprietor and manager of the company, stated this week that he has placed the contract for the equipment for the building.

As soon as the company moves from the Stanford Block, the entire lower floor will be taken over by the Rock Bottom Grocery, which is planning to greatly expand its business in Van Nuys.

EFFORTS BEING MADE TO HOUSE NEWCOMERS

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

REDLANDS, Nov. 13.—To relieve the housing shortage, real estate brokers and residents of the city are co-operating in finding accommodations for new arrivals in Redlands. Realty men are working without commission in an effort to get people who are coming to this city placed in homes, and residents who have spare rooms are offering them to newcomers. Old houses, some of which have been unused for several years, are being repaired for occupation, and many of the fine old barns of Redlands are being moved to city lots, and remodeled into attractive homes.

Improvements Planned by New Owners at Terra Bella.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

TERRA BELLA, Nov. 13.—The F. C. Ensign Company reports the sale of four lots of the Norwood Rancho, one mile northeast of Terra Bella, to Robert L. Burton of Richmond Calif. Mr. Burton expects to take up his residence upon the property early next month, erect a new residence, and next spring the entire tract will be set to trees and vines. The same agency has also sold eighty acres just west of the Sausalito school to N. Boras, N. Smolen and John Soldo of Los Angeles. Mr. Boras, an experienced orchard man, will put down a well and install a pumping plant sufficient to supply the entire eighty acres with water. At least forty acres, it is stated, will be set to vines during the coming year.

D. M. Stanley has purchased the property adjoining his orange grove in the Grand View Heights section of the Terra Bella irrigation district, and will improve the property. Contracts have been awarded for the construction of a five-room modern bungalow to A. L. Dutro of Porterville. Mr. Stanley has been identified with the Terra Bella district for the past eleven years, during which time he has planted several hundred acres to citrus and deciduous fruits, including the first orange trees planted in the Grand View Heights section.

Two Announcements

and a message to people who want homes

The Frank Meline Company has been made the exclusive agent for the Oneonta Park, Oak Knoll and other Pasadena properties of the Huntington Land and Improvement Company.

The Frank Meline Company has opened a Pasadena office: 371-373 E. Colorado Street, in the Maryland Hotel Building. This makes four active offices devoted to its real estate business.

Oneonta Park

Here's a remarkable thing about it.

Just because it is so near,—at our very door-step, just under our eyes, we've passed it by; perhaps with the thought that a property so splendidly located must be high priced.

And it should be

But the astonishing fact is, that with all its charm of location, of scenic beauty, of nearness, of the improvements which we'll tell you about, you can buy it today at the same price, before the value of the dollar started skidding. Not a penny more. Someone has been asleep at the switch. Overlooked!

Values? Considering its character, there's nothing like it anywhere around this entire country, at anywhere near its price. 50x175-ft. lots as low as $1250: terms if desired.

What is it that makes the ideal homesite?—location, accessibility, nearness to schools and to marketing; the right neighborhood, and the necessary improvements such as street work, water, gas, light, sewer.

Oneonta Park has them all,—and more. Most beautifully situated on high ground, with freedom from the disagreeable fogs of the low lands. A wonderful view of mountain and valley; a frequent and rapid car service—just twenty minutes to the very heart of Los Angeles, and fifteen to Pasadena. A neighborhood that represents the best type of American citizenry.

Oneonta Park is ideal! No uncertainty as to what the neighborhood may develop into; it's already established. No pioneering here.

A moderate priced home in Oneonta Park will give more satisfaction; more home comfort, more value for the investment than a more pretentious home in a less favored region.

Come out to Oneonta Park today! Let the courteous members of the Meline organization show you about. A temporary tract office to be open every day, has been opened right on the ground. Just off the Oneonta Park station. Look for the big Meline sign.

How to get to Oneonta Park?

By red car line from the Pacific Electric station at Sixth and Main streets; all cars stop at Oneonta Park.

Or, drive out by way of North Broadway and Huntington Drive to Oneonta Park. Watch for the Meline signs and the Meline tract office.

Come out today, if you can!

Why has the Meline Company opened an office in Pasadena? The best of business reasons.

To spread a further knowledge of the charm and beauty of this favored section.

To list, and sell Pasadena property, whether homes or income property.

To design and build homes, "Meline built;" which have added beauty, dignity and distinction to the Wilshire, Beverly Hills and Hollywood sections.

To develop the branches of its business devoted to Investments, Loans and Insurance.

FARM LANDS NEAR McFARLAND SOLD.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

McFARLAND, Nov. 13.—McFarland has been the scene of several important real estate deals the present week. Herbert Grover of Milwaukee, Wis., has purchased sixty acres of undeveloped land, situated two miles south of town, and east of the railroad tracks, from John Nill. The Grover land is the undeveloped portion of a farm bought by Mr. Nill about a year ago.

J. E. Reno has purchased from Mrs. Elizabeth Spencer the twenty acres of uncultivated soil that adjoins his thirty-four-acre improved ranch on the south, thus giving him fifty-four acres to manage. The price was reported to be $200 an acre, and the new acquisition will be planted to grapes, it is stated.

P. F. Davis and Martin Olson recently bought fifty acres of raw land a mile northeast of McFarland, which they expect soon to have under plow and harrow, and Dr. R. F. Gettings, a veterinarian, has bought eighty undeveloped acres on the Pond Road, across from the Genetoni ranch, which, after being cleared of sagebrush, he plans to use for general farming purposes, planting a portion of it to grapes.

RESIDENCE WILL BE USED FOR REST HOME.

The sale of the residence of Thomas Hughes, Harbor Commissioner, at 7619 Winship avenue, Palms, to Dr. S. E. Wilson is reported by Bryan & Bradford, through whom the transaction was handled. The property consists of a large residence, together with twenty-two acres of land, and the sale price was reported as $30,000. Extensive alterations and improvements, including the erection of a number of bungalows, are planned by Dr. Wilson, who will convert the property into a rest home.

The same firm reports the sale of the furnishings of the King Edward Hotel at 119 East Fifth street to Thomas Dodge for $100,000. The lease on the building was taken up by the owner, John Parkinson, and a new lease, to run for ten years, was given to Mr. Dodge. The total consideration, including the lease and furniture, was in excess of $225,000.

DECLARES OIL INDUSTRY CAN'T FILL CONTRACTS.

Eastern Expert Prophesies Production Curve Will Point Down in Three Years Never to Rise Again.

All the world knows that this is the Day of Petroleum, but what is the time o' day? Does the clock mark forenoon, high noon or afternoon? Have we gone on the petroleum basis with a reasonable assurance that the reserves will enable us to honor the inevitable demands upon them, or are we presently to find ourselves committed to a petroleum expenditure beyond the power of nature herself to meet?

These are the questions put forth in the introductory paragraph of "The Petroleum Outlook," a monograph issued by Arthur D. Little, Inc., chemists and engineers of Cambridge, Mass.

And the answers, summarized, are that the outlook is for a rapid exhaustion of the nation's petroleum reserves unless immediate steps are taken to do away with the wastefulness which has characterized methods of production, distribution and use, and that in reality the industry is now committed to make deliveries to the nation's industrial life which cannot possibly be filled.

Oil energized a whole new system of warfare after 1914, says the monograph—changed methods of fighting on land, at sea and in the air. Then coal production broke down, and oil was there as a substitute. Cessation of the demands of war did not lessen the call for oil and oil products, except for a period only long enough to enable the industry to replenish its depleted reserves, and now once more, as in 1917, the demand exceeds the supply.

Discovery of great new oil fields large enough to glut the market is considered impossible by this authority, and the prophecy is made that within three years after the close of 1920 the production curve in the United States will have assumed a downward trend and will never again be lifted above the altitude of present or past high records.

In the United States there are seven major sources of supipy, and four are said already to be markedly on the decrease. The Appalachian field, dating from 1859, has shown a diminishing production since 1900 The Lima-Indiana field, discovered in 1886, has been on the downgrade since 1896. The Illinois field, discovered in 1905, reached its prime in five years, and has been declining ever since. The Gulf Coast, says the expert, will probably never enlarge its output beyond the present maximum.

The Rocky Mountain field, from Boulder, Colo., northward into Wyoming, Montana and Utah, may in time treble its present output of 13,500,000 barrels annually but, geologically, cannot be expected to do more than this.

Concerning the oil production of this State the monograph says:

THE CALIFORNIA FIELD.

"The California field was added to the list of important producing sources in 1898 and has been steadily increasing in importance ever since, with the exception of the year 1915, when the war upset market conditions and caused a temporary slump. The present rate of production exceeds that of all five of the older fields put together and makes up almost one-third of the country's total.

"The extent of the field, geographically, is not in keeping with its producing magnitude, but the producing centers are characterized by a tremendous and sustained cacapacity.

"The limits of the field cannot be said to have been entirely bounded, but the chance of disclosing a worthy successor to the Midway-Sunset district is distinctly remote and more than passing significance, is to be attached to the general flattening of the production curve since 1913. Primarily this was caused by the market depression already noted, but on the other hand the developments of the past two years have been abnormally forced.

"In a large way the California field bids fair to reproduce the past history of the Lima-Indiana and Illinois fields from around 1902 to 1908, respectively, which is to say that the course of the next three years will see the field set for its slow but sure decline."

These same findings are applied by the monograph to the great mid-continental field, extending from Kansas City southward through Kansas, Oklahoma, Northern Texas and Louisiana.

Important as the Mexican fields are to American oil consumers, they cannot be counted on, says the pamphlet. The well yields range from 50 to 100,000 barrels per day, but the great wells with enormous flows, "show a disconcerting disposition to pass suddenly over to water."

Even though the two main Mexican fields have not been thoroughly explored, and even though they will almost certainly yield largely, "there is the other cold fact that even what has been developed is unreliable in the extreme." The conclusion as to Mexico is that though it is still in "its producing infancy" it has probably been "greatly overestimated in the public mind."

Since the industry cannot go on expanding, it cannot go on meeting in full, the obligations which it has assumed and which it has encouraged to increase, and finds itself in need of retrenchment, the writer finds. Gasoline is the prime need, it is held, with kerosene next. These supplies must not be diminished, and, therefore, the producers will have first to cut off gas oil, and finally will have to stop selling crude oil for fuel and refine their entire product.

In support of this conclusion the monograph cites the case of one of the great refinery interests which some months ago withdrew gas oil from the market, and has now arranged to discontinue the sale of fuel oil entirely.

Concerning exhaustion of the nation's oil reserves, the following comment is made:

"The United States Geological Survey is authority for the conclusion that the country's oil resources are more than 40 per cent exhausted, and credits a reserve which would be a sixteen-year supply at the present rate of consumption.

"With the estimate, itself, there is no fault to be found, but the choice of terms is misleading, for its sarcasm may be overlooked. What remains, underground is there, not as a reserve, but in defiance of the wildest extravagance of effort to get it out. ith any number of operators and would-be operators after the oil in a given reservoir, the whole aim is to get it out before somebody else does.

"What crude oil is not now needed for refining is not held in reserve against the time when it will be so needed, but is got out just as fast as possible, and what is non-essential for the moment, goes to serving non-essential ends in competition with coal."

FIRM WANTS NO MONEY PAID IN.

Will Refuse Cash, but Take Checks for Any Amount, Large or Small.

A large corporation with a $5,000,000 capital which maintains a branch office in Los Angeles announced yesterday that it has completed plans to conduct its business without the use of money. The new scheme goes into effect tomorrow.

The Todd Protectograph Company, with branch offices in the Grosse Building, has instructed all its branch managers to eliminate cash entirely from its business; that hereafter all bills, be they for a 1-cent stamp or a $10,000 machine, must be paid by checks.

"No currency of any amount or denomination is to be carried in any form as company property," the order states, "as all legal tender should be left in the banks as the basis of credit and paying bills."

BUTTER-MAKING PLANT NEARING COMPLETION.

The four-story building now being erected for the Cocoanut Products Company at Sixth and Alameda streets, is nearing completion, according to John J. Frauenfelder, architect for the structure. Machinery for the plant is now arriving, and part of it is being installed in the factory, which, when in full operation, will have a capacity of 50,000 pounds of butter per day. The cost of the building, together with the machinery, will be in excess of $100,000.

CUTS DANGER OF FIRES IN WOODS.

New County Ordinance Puts Up Many Safeguards.

Disaster Like Last Year's is Unlikely to Recur.

Heavy Penalties for Those Who Peril Watersheds.

Recurrence of the great forest-fire disaster of one year ago, when 160,000 acres in the Sierra Madre foothills were swept bare of brush cover is lessened materially, in the opinion of County Fire Warden Flintham, by the adoption of a county ordinance by the Board of Supervisors, making it necessary to secure permits to build fires which may menace grain fields or hill brush land.

The ordinance has just gone into effect, with the result that any person burning brush and weeds, or responsible for a campfire within the county who has not taken out the proper permit, will be liable to a fine of from $25 to $500 or from fifteen days to six months in jail.

FOOTHILLS FIRES.

Warden Flintham, who is also the county forester, says that the ordinance will undoubtedly work to prevent many fires that originate in the foothills and later work upward into the watersheds. More than 75 per cent of the fires that ruin watersheds start in the foothills on farm lands or sweep in from lower ranges of the hills, he says. His contention is supported by District United States Forester Redington of San Francisco, who has congratulated the county on the ordinance, expressing the belief that it will have much to do with defending the domain of the people from devastation.

The ordinance specifies that in the county outside of incorporated cities "It shall be unlawful to use fire for clearing land, or to burn brush, slash, grass, stubble or other inflammable material upon land, the exterior boundaries of which are within 500 feet of any forest, brush or grass-covered land, without first obtaining a permit from the County Fire Warder, his deputy or the State Fire warden."

LATITUDE ALLOWED.

The ordinance allows latitude by stating that it shall not be necessary to obtain a permit for a small campfire which is at a safe distance from lands covered with inflammable material, providing that it is extinguished with water and dirt before being left. Fires may also be started in a public road or railroad right of way when confined to small heaps or piles, and they may be allowed without permit in corrals and back yards, or in plowed fields when fifty feet away from any woodland or inflammable brush or grass. It is also allowable under the ordinance to set a backfire near woodland or brush cover in order to prevent an approaching fire from gaining access to the hills.

The ordinance also prohibits the maintenance of charcoal pits or the use of dynamite and other explosives within 100 feet of lands covered with inflammable material. All the restrictions of the ordinance are in effect during the period from May to December, which is the time of the greatest fire hazard in the county.

Permit blanks are being sent out this week by Mr. Flintham to men in all parts of the county who have been appointed deputy fire wardens, and the Federal forest rangers are also co-operating in fire control with the county office.

OPEN ELECTRIC HOME.

Modern Labor-Saving Devices are Placed on Exhibition.

A complete exhibition of modern electric labor-saving devices is contained in the modern electric home, which has been completed at 900 North Kenmore Place by Edwards & Wildey, who erected the house for the electric industry. The house, which has been completely furnished and decorated throughout, contains about thirty practical electrical appliances. The kitchen and laundry illustrate the uses of electricity in the home. Cooking is done by electricity, the dishes washed by electricity, and the laundry washed, dried and ironed by electrical appliances.

The house will be open for inspection by the public during afternoons and evenings until November 28. Expert domestic science teachers are maintained to demonstrate the various rooms and electric labor-saving devices. The exhibition is being conducted by the electrical industry at large, and visitors to the house will be cordially welcomed to inspect the various devices which are to be exhibited and demonstrated.

PASTORS TO AID RED CROSS PLEA.

Hundreds Will Back Roll Call in Sermons Today.

Firemen and Police in Keen Rivalry Over Cup.

Thousands of ex-Service Men Need Help Here Now.

This is Red Cross Sunday in the churches of Los Angeles.

Two hundred and seventy pastors will tell their flocks what the Red Cross has been doing, what it must continue to do if the great post-war work of rehabilitation and reconstruction is not to be interrupted.

The Red Cross fourth annual roll call which opened Thursday will end Thanksgiving Day. One hundred thousand dollars is the quota for the Los Angeles chapter. Inasmuch as the Red Cross spent $195,000 in Los Angeles in the last twelve months, it is apparent that $100,000 for the next year will be little enough. There are 4000 soldier and sailor cases awaiting final adjustment and hundreds of families of ex-service men are absolutely dependent upon Red Cross assistance until the bread-winners shall have been restored to health or usefulness. There are also thousands of men from overseas who must be placed in employment.

INTENSIVE CAMPAIGN.

Rex B. Clark, general chairman of the roll call, has arranged for an intensive campaign during the coming ten days. The cinema studios, the schools, the clubs, hotels, banks, lodges and industrial plants are all organized. The film colony, spurred to action by J. C. Jessen, promises to produce at least $10,000 for the roll call.

The studio which first reports 100 per cent enrollment of all employees will receive the silver loving cup donated by Gore Brothers and Sol Lesser of the Kinema Theater. The studio which reports the greatest number of memberships will receive the cup donated by Cecil B. De Mille, of Lasky's.

The University of Califrnia girls who canvassed the downtown streets yesterday will make their final report to Red Cross headquarters at 226 South Broadway tomorrow. Their total sales aggregated more than 5000 and may approximate 10,000. The University of Southern California girls will have their day next Saturday and if they can beat the record of memberships attained by the U.C. girls they will win the beautiful loving cup donated by Fred A. Miller, general manager of the California Theater.

EIREMEN WORK HARD.

The Los Angeles firemen are working hard in the Red Cross roll call. Chief Ralph Scott sent his men out Friday and they came back with 1600 memberships and $1600 within eight hours. The firemen have requisitioned 11,000 buttons and are going to try to win the cup offered to the uniformed body gaining the most memberships. Chief of Police Pendegast has instructed his policemen to beat the firemen.

CLUBS BUSY THIS WEEK.

The Friday Morning and Ebell clubs will have their campaigns in full swing this week. Already they have secured many hundreds of members.

Mrs. A. D. Houghton, who is directing the roll call from the First National Bank, has bought nearly 2000 buttons from the Red Cross roll call headquarters. Mrs. S. M. Horwitz, Mrs. Nettie Stiefel and Mrs. Etta Speyer of the council of Jewish women, have enrolled hundreds of new members and expect to produce big results this week in their canvass of downtown stores, street railway stations and banks.

The Women's University Club will sign up Red Cross members at thirteen of the biggest stores in town all week. The postal employees will go to work tomorrow.

SEAL AND HORSE.

Experiments Prove Unfamiliar Diet Both Digestible and Appetizing.

"Seal a la Americaine" may grace the menu card of many a famous restaurant in the near future. Also appetizing forms of "horse d'oeuvre," "rabbit steak" and "kid a la Newburg" may appear. Such is the cheering information gleaned from some recent experiments conducted by the Office of Home Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture and set forth in a recent issue of The Journal of Industrial and Engineering Chemistry.

The experiments were tried out with a view to ascertaining the amount of nourishment, such as protein and fat, and the digestibility and the taste possessed by these unusual varieties of meat as compared with the more common cuts. The conclusion was that the food value of all four fully equaled that of more widely known flesh.

The tests were conducted on groups of young university students, the men being in each case unaware of the meat being supplied. In each case the meat tested was chopped fine, seasoned and cooked in the form of meat cakes. All went smoothly in every case. The men ate the well-balanced diet supplied, each meal being carefully planned, and no ill effects in the way of insufficient nutrition and indigestion were recorded. In every case the meat gave a similar amount of nourishment to that produced by more ordinary food and the men evinced every symptom of enjoyment and health.

According to the authors of the article, Arthur D. Holmes and Harry J. Drexel, Jr., there is a sufficient supply of horses, should horse meat become as common an article of diet in the United States as it has been in Europe since the war; a large number may be had from ranches in Montana in carload lots "of good flesh and health," but unsatisfactory for ordinary purposes on account of undersize, inbreeding or other deficiencies. Horse meat resembles beef very closely, though it is a deeper red in color. Incidentally a short manual was prepared during the war, for mess officers' use on the value of horse meat as food.

The use of goat meat as a food dates back to the Biblical ages and kid flesh for some time has been considered a desirable adjunct to the diet by many races. In this country comparatively little is eaten, and that largely by those of foreign birth.

Rabbits are a more familiar item of the diet and can be purchased in open market. In the tests, the meat of the domestic rabbit was studied, that of wild ones not being available. The two are practically the same, except that the flesh of tame rabbits is lighter in color.

Seal meat, though valuable to Arctic explorers, is generally unknown in warmer climates. Records show that 30,000 to 40,000 seals are slaughtered every year, and from all accounts seal contains the elements of a valuable food. Seal shoulder, as it is called, is packed in dry salt and later in brine. In preparing the meat for serving, more elaborate preparations were necessary than in the case of horse meat. The shoulder had to be soaked for eighteen hours to remove the salt and then boiled until tender. At the end of the process the result was that the unsuspecting class identified the meat cakes as familiar Hamburger steak and ate them under that impression.

The Department of Agriculture is constantly at work on experiments similar to the foregoing, with a view to increasing the available food supply and the beating of the old enemy, H.C.L.—[New York Times.

JEWELED PIPES FOR WOMEN.

Yet another stronghold sacred to men has fallen before the advance of modern woman—the briar pipe.

For some time past the continent has accepted the coming of the pipe for women. The new fashion has now reached England, and pipes of dainty appearance, graceful in outline and elegant in proportion are now being made by experts in the west end of London.

These pipes have tiny bowls, some of which are shaped like an egg or bell, and which hold about the amount of tobacco contained in a couple of cigarets. Some of the women smokers like them with a plain gold band for mounting, while others favor a dainty circlet of jewels around the stem.

"We have on the average five new customers a week," said a member of a firm which is specializing in the work. "There are many hundreds of women pipe smokers in England. They find it costs less than cigaret smoking. Some of our customers are only 20, while others are 50 and older."—[London Mail.

RENEWAL OF FRIDAY SALE MOVEMENT.

New York Cotton Market in a Decline; Census Report is a Factor.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—There was a renewal of Friday's selling movement in the cotton market at the opening today owing to unfavorable week-end reviews of the goods situation, the easier ruling of southern spot markets late yesterday and spot selling presumably to hedge purchases made at an easier basis in the South.

The census report showing domestic mill consumption of only 390,087 bales against 556,041 for October last year was a factor in the decline.

WEEKLY FINANCIAL REVIEW.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—Additional downward revision of values in the securities market this week accompanied the further leveling of prices in the commodities markets. Losses of 5 to almost 25 points in a wide variety of stocks established low records for a period of one to three years.

Heavy accessions to the country's unprecedented gold holdings and return to this market of vast sums released from crop-moving centers failed to bring any relief to the strained monetary situation save for a temporary easement of demand loans.

In the steel and iron trades and more particularly in the textile and kindred industries, the reversal made greater progress with consequent reduction of wage schedules, contract payrolls and increased unemployment, several of the leading railway systems announcing further laying off of employees.

The break in international remittances comprehended practically every financial center of importance on the Eastern Hemisphere excepting the British Isles. It extended to South and Central America, where serious trade dislocations threatened the enforced rejection of extensive obligations with business interests in this country.

The note of qualified optimism sounded by the Federal Reserve Board respecting future conditions was shared by conservative banking interests which, however, again stressed the importance of limiting credits to essential projects.

For the first time since the early autumn no new capital issues were announced and the trend of the bond market suggested that latest events had prompted increased caution on the part of investors.

Time Only Emphasizes the Economy of Building of "Heath" Hollow Tile

When you contemplate the building of a home, consider not only the initial cost—but the cost of maintenance and repairs—consider the depreciation—consider the comfort you and yours are to enjoy through the years to come.

The economy of "Heath" Hollow Tile construction is only emphasized by time.

It is as enduring as the ages. Its life is unlimited. Its first cost—though a little more than the cost of frame construction—is its only cost. No repair or painting expense to look forward to—no depreciation—no liability to destruction by fire—and always the utmost in comfort—free from dampness—cool in hot weather—easily heated in cold weather.

It is the logical, the economical class of construction for any type of home or commercial structure.

It is advisable to order in advance in order to allow ample time for delivery.

Corn at High Price Shortly After Opening.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, Nov. 13.—An oversold condition was disclosed in wheat when shorts started to cover. While there was heavy selling at times the close was at net gains of 1@1⅝ cents. Corn was ⅛ cent lower to ¼ cent higher; oats ⅝@⅞ cent lower, rye 1¼@2½ cents higher, and barley 1⅝ cents lower.

Liquidation was on in all grains during the last week and while the finish was on a rally wheat finished with net losses of 10¼@11 cents. Corn declined 6⅝@7 cents, oats 4¼@4½ cents, rye 4½@8½ cents and barley 7½ cents.

General buying of wheat in small lots by commission houses found limited selling orders early and prices advanced 5@5⅜ cents but around 1.83½ for December offerings increased materially and a reaction followed.

The December-March spread widened to around 10 cents at one time, compared with 1½ cents on Tuesday, but the last December was 9½ cents over.

Corn made its highest price shortly after the opening when local shorts covered on the strength in wheat but the upturn was lost later with December closing at the same price as on Friday gaining ⅛ cent on the May. There was some selling of May and buying of July which widened the difference ⅛ cent.

December oats showed fair strength early but later broke sharply to the low point of the previous day with the close the lowest on the crop.

Tomb of Napoleon III.

The body of Napoleon III lies in a tomb in the Church of St. Michael at Farnborough, England. This chapel was built by the ex-Empress Eugenie as a memorial to her husband. In the crypt also is placed the tomb of her son, the Prince Imperial, who was killed while fighting with the English army in Zululand. The church is a magnificent building of white stone, and stands on the brow of a hill. It is surmounted by a tower and pinnacled with dozens of smaller shafts. The Empress used to visit the chapel daily. Ten priests were constantly employed by her to say masses for the dead.—[Exchange.

Why This Banker Bought Seven Lots in Belmont Shore Place

C. H. Gilchrist, a banker from Minnesota, now a resident of Long Beach, bought seven lots at Belmont Shore Place, Long Beach's only residence beach, last week. He paid cash for the lots and has started construction upon seven houses to be rushed to completion.

His case is typical of hundreds of other men of conservative but sound judgment who have bought lots in Belmont Shore Place. Many of them, like Mr. Gilchrist, have bought a large number of lots as an investment, because close students of realty values in Long Beach declare that prices in Belmont Shore Place will break all records for rapid return on the investment—even greater, they say, than the Ocean Avenue property adjoining Belmont Shore Place. Here lots rose in value from a few hundred dollars less than 10 years ago to $10,000 and more today.

Here is why Mr. Gilchrist invested his money in Belmont Shore Place:

1 It adjoins the highest-priced residence property in Southern California — the Ocean Avenue district, east of Bixby Park.

2 It was created by engineering exactly where it has been needed for several years—eliminating the usual period of years that most subdivisions require before the city grows to them. Lots across the street are being sold today for $7500. Lots in Belmont Shore Place average less than $1000.

3 The fill by which this property has been made removes the barrier between Long Beach and its wonderful inland boating and bathing harbor. This, Alamitos Bay, is the eastern boundary of Belmont Shore Place.

4 It gives Long Beach its first residence beach.

5 It provides a site for a second business district in Long Beach. Belmont Pier is already built as a nucleus, and Belmont Shore Place has more people directly tributary than Venice, Ocean Park and Santa Monica combined. Yet these towns support three business districts with property values twenty times as great as the present selling prices of business lots in Belmont Shore Place.

6 Belmont Shore Place is ideally restricted—it will never be a cheap beach. It is the only subdivision in Southern California sold with heavy concrete streets, curbs and sidewalks; water, electricity, gas and sewers included in the price of every lot.

You have seen fortunes made off beach property in Southern California—yet those in position to know say Belmont Shore Place offers a greater opportunity than any of them.

If you have not seen Belmont Shore Place drive there today, or use the attached ticket any day next week.

BANKER SEEKS RIDDLE ANSWER

Why Does British Cotton Hunt American Outlet?

Los Angeles Financier in Notable Address.

Unselfish Co-operation Will Save the Day.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

DOUGLAS (Ariz.) Nov. 13.—J. Dabney Day, a financial authority on cotton in the Southwest and on the Pacific Coast, and vice-president of the First National Bank of Los Angeles, in an address before the Arizona bankers' convention at Douglas today, discussed the cotton situation as it affects Arizona, New Mexico, California and the Imperial Valley south of the American line.

As Mr. Day is chairman of the clearinghouse committee of Los Angeles bankers which is financing the present cotton crop, his discussion of the present situation in cotton is of particular interest. Mr. Day said in part:

"The fundamental causes for the dislocation of the cotton market are (1) the readjustment problems within the United States; (2) Japan's financial troubles; (3) the inability of European countries to purchase their usual amounts of raw cotton, and (4) the failure of British buyers who are able to purchase cotton to place orders.

"British traders are far-seeing individuals, who have been educated in the habit of working together. I am wondering if the failure of Great Britain to come heavily into the market at this time, notwithstanding her recent coal strike, is not a clever move on her part? I am also wondering why British-controlled Egyptian cotton should be shipped to the United States this season? It looks a little too much like carrying coals to Newcastle to be accepted strictly on its face as a legitimate effort on the part of the Egyptian cotton grower to market his goods.

NO PLACE FOR BEARS.

"My opinion is that it is not wise to stay on the bear side of either the United States or of its chief raw product—cotton. The return to normal business conditions, however, will be gradual, and while the depression which we are now experiencing is the most severe which we will encounter, still we may expect continually lessening ups and downs until the circle of present disturbed conditions caused by the plummet of war shall ripple off into the placid waters of commercial peace.

"We may have a 'long, hard business winter,' but we need not be discouraged. As I see it, the present situation is principally one of price adjustment; and the banking system of the country should be able to meet the emergency. The recent report of the Comptroller of the Currency shows our combined banking assets to be in excess of $54,000,000,000, exceeding the combined totals of all the leading nations of the world—and the assets o fthe Federal reserve banks are not included in these figures.

BANKS MUST HELP.

"It is the duty of the banks to care for every legitimate demand in times such as these. By legitimate demand I do not mean either the pressure or demand for the carrying of the products for a speculative rise, but rather for the carrying of the product beyond the point of harvest for the protection of the producer. Ordinarily it would not be the function of the banker to finance the carrier much, if any, beyond the point of harvest, but when an untoward condition arises which results in a market reduction almost to the point of disappearance, then does it become the obligation of the banker, temporarily, at least, to afford some protection to the producer.

"Cotton and other products of the soil are the very basis of our banks' business growth, and we should come to the aid of the cotton producers in a manner that will materially strengthen the position of the market and more quickly bring about normal conditions.

THE THREE C's.

"I know of no better example of unselfish co-operation than was recently evidenced by the banks of Los Angeles in subscribing several million dollars to a fund to be used by the banks in Southern California, Arizona and New Mexico to be loaned their growers to assist in the gathering, storing and marketing of this seasn's cotton crop.

"I want to say that no section of the United States is fundamentally stronger than the western district, and certainly no section offers greater commercial possibilities. There are literally thousands of acres of land available for cultivation, and it has been fully demonstrated that not only cotton, but many other products can be grown to advantage.

"If I were asked to name the most essential elements needed in our program of readjustment, I would say Co-operation, Confidence and Conception.

"Co-operation with foreign countries in their efforts to reorganize their business forces. Co-operation between the consumer and producer with less evidence of the middleman. Co-operation between capital and labor, dwelling upon the brotherhood of man rather than the brotherhood of unions.

Confidence in the integrity of the nation's banking system. Confidence in the chief product of our soil. Confidence in the ultimate victory of the unselfish and altruistic spirit that was so fully manifested during the late war.

"A conception of our duty toward those nations which are so embarrassed by the prostration that follows in the wake of war. A conception of our privilege to stimulate production by properly caring for the requirements of the producer. A conception of our opportunity to prove ourselves unselfish, nonprofiteering, altruistic soldiers of finance.

LOOKING FORWARD.

"As we look into the future, imagination is justified in painting two pictures, one depicting disturbed domestic and foreign relations, internal business dissentions and financial chaos; the other presenting an international amalgamation of efforts and interests, a union of forces working in harmony, and a resultant national prosperity.

"One of these pictures, the first, may be produced by applying the rule of gold, and the latter can be created by nothing less than the employment of the golden rule."

PRODUCE PRICES ARE FIRM AND UNCHANGED.

POTATOES DROP 15 CENTS PER HUNDRED IN CARLOTS; LETTUCE IS WEAKER.

Prices again ruled firm and unchanged on the wholesale produce market yesterday, no fluctuations being recorded during the session. Trading was very quiet throughout the day, but arrivals both from the country and by rail were light, with the result that there was no downward tendency in evidence. Most of the good stock was moved at the closing level of Friday's market; some of the poorer offerings, for which there was practically no demand, were offered at a lower level, but the undertone of the market was not affected.

A few small changes were recorded in the shipping and carlot markets. Stockton Burbank potatoes, in carlots, declined about 15 cents per sack, the top price yesterday being $2.35 per hundred, as compared with $2.50 of the preceding day. The shipping market for lettuce was very dull, and the movement of this commodity was slow, but prices were mostly unchanged, holding steady at the level of Friday's session. Tomatoes of good quality were in very active demand for eastern shipment, and although prices showed a wide range, fancy stock was selling readily at $2.50 per lug. Cauliflower continued weak and in slow demand, with comparatively few sales transacted during the day.

Richfield Union
Drills Should Be Next to Send Out Cry of 'Gusher'
"Proving Up" Days of Placentia Are Here

Placentia Passes Richfield in Riveting Public Interest

"Smoke screen" days of "Richfield Field" are over. The public begins to realize the truth—the same truth we told them from the very first. The "Richfield end" is the "tail end"; its glory is growing dim. The "Placentia end" is the "head end." Its glory is about to burst into brightness.

Final Drive on Last Handful of "Dollar Stock"

This is a "last warning" to all to "get aboard" with the other lucky ones, or forever hold your peace. First come first served. Only a handful of this "spotlight" stock is left. The block dwindles every day. You have waited as long as it is safe.

Send for new booklet, "The Real Truth About Richfield and Placentia," and "wise up" before our "dollar stock" goes shooting up with the glad cry of "another gusher."

Richfield Union in Last 700 Feet

We are on the "home stretch." The public is beginning to stand on the tiptoe of expectancy. Our "log" gets better now with every foot. We are running true with the "Chapman Gusher" and the "Standard Oil gushers" which, step by step, have come straight toward us along the ridge.

Dutch Shell Oil Co. is now coupling up the "missing link" between those gushers and our Placentia leases and well, by drilling "Kraemer reservation," just across the road from us.

That company paid "one-half to three-quarters of a million dollars" for these 200 acres—two to three times the amount paid for Chapman and Standard leases—on the same "ridge" with the reservation and with us.

They must have also thought that Placentia is the "head end" to have paid that price. We have said so all the time. Now our drills are about to reach oil sand depths. We have staked our reputations, our well and our money that they will bring in "another gusher." We confidently await the result, the same as Harding did.

DAILY TRADE TALK.

Week in Review; Import and Export Straws; News Puts and Calls.

BY CHAPIN HALL.

The week which ended yesterday was featured by a greater unrest than any of its predecessors within recent months. The stock market was more or less demoralized. The public apparently realizes that a new era has been ushered in as a result of the election but there is still some uncertainty as to just what form the readjustment will finally assume.

Observers agree that the price decline is definitely under way, and some go so far as to say it has quite or nearly attained its maximum movement. Others feel that it has scarcely begun. Retailers are slow to meet the wholesale and manufacturing cuts, and this serves to irritate the consumer who is retaliating in a measure, by withholding his patronage.

This condition has served to slow down, somewhat, the trade volume, but looked at from another angle this cannot be very serious for the gross is considerably greater than it was for the corresponding time last year when prices averaged higher.

Intervention of Armistice Day was a disturbing factor and in the last two days of the week, business did not fully regain its stride. Holiday trade is slowly getting under way, but the shop-early slogan is less frequently heard, and there is still more or less uncertainty as to just what angle the Christmas business will take.

MORE SENSIBLE BUYING.

Los Angeles stores are well stocked with a more sensible line of merchandise than was carried in 1919 and there is less call for extravagant gew gaws. While fewer records were broken during the week, there has been a strong undercurrent of confidence and a rising trade volume may be confidently expected from now until the first of the year.

The bond market is strong and active, and the investment power of the community appears to be unimpaired. Municipals and public utilities are in good demand, labor continues to be about 90 per cent employed, building is going forward on a comprehensive program, money is somewhat easier for legitimate purposes, and for home construction, uncertain promotion schemes are having harder sledding than formerly, collections are fair to good.

FOOD PRICES.

Food costs still fail to record material changes in spite of the heralded era of low prices. Some other commodities are cheaper, and there appears to be a definite movement towards a lower level in men's clothing, women's garments; in fact, practically all woolen, cotton and silk goods.

Throughout the country there has been a reduced production, and several large manufacturers have either temporarily suspended operations or have materially reduced their forces.

All this, however, is in line with the readjustment which started several months ago and which has been proceeding upon a well-ordered basis, far removed from panic. The financial situation of the country is essentially sound, and there is reason to believe that in a few more weeks the new level will have been reached at which business can proceed on a stable basis. Temporarily there is a wide divergence between what retail dealers and the farmers are willing to accept and what the consuming public is willing to pay.

LONG WAY TO GO.

Bradstreet's index of ninety-six articles may serve as an approximate guide to the cost of production. During the past twelve months this index indicates that prices averaged fully 100 per cent above 1913. The average is now about 80 per cent higher, and promises a still further reduction. These figures give some indication of the long road we have still to travel before the prewar standards again prevail.

All these things have been discounted. There has been nothing sudden about the transition, and no excuse for a failure to prepare. Those who have kept step with the times have readjusted production costs, selling costs, and demand and are doing business at a profit. The country is full of wealth, and there is nothing fundamentally alarming in the situation.

BRITISH INVESTMENTS.

British new capital issues for the first nine months of 1920, according to the "Bankers Trust Company, amounted to 314,574,331 pounds or 45,000,000 pounds more than Great Britain's national revenue in the first year of the war.

THE WAY OF THE WORLD.

Import and export situation is just now of especial local interest. Los Angeles business of this character is growing every month and a greater number of persons are constantly interested in the cause and effects of statistics governing the ebb and flow of this important branch of our industrial, commercial and financial activities.

To the Pacific Coast, especially, the growing trade with the Orient is impressive. The 1920 exports to Asia and Oceania will exceed $1,000,000,000 while in 1913 they were only $208,000,000. To South America the total for 1920 will exceed $500,000,000 against $147,000,000 in 1913; to Africa $140,000,000 against $29,000,000 in 1913; to North America, other than the United States about $1,800,000,000 against $601,000,000 in 1913, and to Europe over $4,000,000,000 as against $1,500,000,000 in 1913.

On the import side we have reciprocated this friendly attitude on the part of our oriental customers, for our yearly imports from the Orient in the calendar year 1920 will approximate $1,600,000,000 as against $316,000,000 in 1913.

The value of furs imported into the United States this year, according to an estimate of the National City Bank, approximate $125,000,000 as against $75,000,000 in 1919. This total, when ready for use, plus those produced in the United States, will represent a cost of about $500,000,000 to the consuming public.

BRITISH TRADE.

British trade shows an increase in imports for the first nine months of the year of 28.7 per cent. This increase was greatest early in the year, but has been steadily declining. On the other hand total exports have increased over 85 per cent over the same period a year ago.

No resume of the export market would be complete without reference, at least, to the cotton situation, and to food supplies and manufactured articles held up in large quantities awaiting more propitious exchange conditions.

The surplus of the United States this year will include about 8,000,000 bales of cotton, 300,000,000 bushels of wheat, $750,000,000 worth of semimanufactured raw materials and finished manufactured products. European countries are in the market for a greater part of this surplus, but payment in gold before the goods are shipped cannot be made in any significant amount.

Financiers realize that plans must be laid for the financing of this movement, and it is to this end that the executive committee of the American Bankers' Association will work at a meeting to be held soon in Chicago, where Los Angeles will be represented by W. D. Longyear, vice-president of the Security Trust and Savings Bank. The problem will find solution, in all probability, in the formation of an export corporation capitalized at $100,000,000 for investment in foreign countries through foreign trade financing.

FINANCING THE WORLD.

This corporation will be organized under the provisions of the Edge law and its capital distributed as widely as possible throughout the United States, so that all localities may receive the benefits of its operation.

With a capital of $100,000,000, the power of this corporation for benefiting the foreign trade of the United States will be almost unlimited. A corporation organized in accordance with the specifications laid down in the Edge law may issue debenture bonds for sale in the United States, and the extension of credits abroad up to ten times the amount of its capitalization. Thus,

NEARBY SHIPMENTS OF BARLEY ARE WEAKER.

Although barley held firm and unchanged in the outside markets, prices declined sharply for most of the shipments during the session on the local exchange today. Buying power was lacking, and there was little interest taken in any of the deliveries, either near-by or future. At the close of the call, all of the immediate shipments were down 50 to 75 cents per ton, with no sales recorded. December barley was unchanged at the close, as was also milo, in which there were no transactions.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—The short session of the stock market today was characterized by continuance of the recent heavy selling element, many popular issues registering new lows for the year, in some cases a much longer period.

Prices reacted for the long account again, giving the bears a free hand. Not all of the day's selling was of that sort, however, signs of more involuntary liquidation being observed.

Extreme declines of two to five points in the more volatile issues were effected with little difficulty. Rails and shippings were relatively steady for a time, but even those shares, including Southern Pacific and Reading, broke sharply at the weak close. Sales mounted to 700,000 shares.

Week-end advices regarding industrial and commercial conditions gave impetus to the market's extended reaction. The commercial agencies made pointed allusion to the rapidity with which "price readjustments" are proceeding, this being confirmed by drastic cuts in the Chicago market.

Advices from New England, the Middle West and the South told of further curtailment in the textile industry and of acceptance of a 25 per cent wage reduction by the mill hands of a large cotton company in Virginia.

Bonds were heavy, all the Liberty issues reacting on free offerings.

Total sales, par value, $8,125,000. Old United States bonds were unchanged on call during the week.

Oil Affidavit

By William E. Stephens

Huntington Beach Field

In order to further prove the efficiency of my method of locating oil, I herewith publish the following affidavit, to the effect that Standard No. 3 will be a good commercial producer and that its No. 5 well will not produce oil in commercial quantities.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF LOS ANGELES. } ss:

WILLIAM E. STEPHENS, being first duly sworn, deposes and says:

I.

That on Tuesday the 9th day of November, 1920, during the forenoon thereof, this affiant surveyed and tested that certain well known as No. 5, and now in the course of drilling, at Huntington Beach by the Standard Oil Company, and that according to the test and examination as therein mentioned, the said well is located approximately 300 feet from the edge of the oil streak.

II.

That by reason of the said location of said well, this affiant on the date thereof classifies the said well as in a precarious position; that the possibilities are said well may produce small quantities of oil coming from a seepage source in view of its close proximity to the said oil streak, with a possibility that it may be entirely dry.

III.

That at the same time and date this affiant tested and examined Well No. 3 of the Standard Oil Company, now drilling on the same or adjoining lease.

IV.

That by reason of the said location of said well, this affiant hereby classifies the said well as on a very favorable position and that the said well will be a producer in good commercial quantities.

V.

That the said test and examination was made in the presence of S. W. Beatty and R. L. Van Epps.

WILLIAM E. STEPHENS,
Affiant.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 12th day of November, 1920.

LESTER A. THORNE,
Notary Public in and for said County of Los Angeles, State of California.

NOTE

My examination of this field shows that the Standard Oil Company controls the entire oil streak in the vicinity of the wells now producing.

Forty Acres Oil Land Worth $40,000

Reported this sum paid for lease from Piney Crescent Oil Company of Wyoming.

The Big Piney Examiner, in its current issue, contains the following which indicates that Lincoln County oil land is bringing sensational prices.

"One of the largest transfers of oil land ever made in the state was this week closed, when Piney Crescent Oil Co. sold forty acres of land to California parties for the sum of $1,000 per acre.

GET IN ON THE RIGHT THING AT THE RIGHT TIME IN OIL.

Before oil was discovered in Wyoming near this piece of land you have just read about, land was selling for only a few dollars per acre.

Would you like to get in at a few dollars per acre on land that is being drilled, that may be worth $1,000 to $10,000 very shortly when the wells are producing oil?

We handle just such propositions on a large scale.

We can place you in right up against wells down, as we believe, almost to the oil, with strong showing now of oil and gas.

Why Well No. 1 Looks Good!

Orange County Park Field Scene of Big Activity

William E. Stephens is enthusiastic. His locating of this well by scientific methods has secured the backing of experienced oil men. They have watched Mr. Stephens and know with what remarkable certainty his past predictions have proved true. They are enthusiastic over the showing of the well, which has so far carried out the prediction that the ORANGE COUNTY PARK FIELD WILL PRODUCE AND PRODUCE BIG!

Three crews are working night and day. Drilling is proceeding with remarkable speed toward the deep pool which Stephens is confident underlies the entire 590 acres of the National Security Oil Company's holding in Orange County Park Field.

And just as rapidly is—

the maximum financing power of the corporation will be $1,000,000,000, an amount equal to more than 9 per cent of this country's total foreign investments.

LOS ANGELES STOCKS.

There was a marking of time throughout the short session yesterday and the most exciting thing that happened was 12 o'clock. The New York market continued in a highly nervous condition, and there was no attempt made here to start anything. Prices on the few stocks edging their way into the sales column sagged, and had the trading been heavier some of them might have broken.

Everything was weak. Associated Oil sold down to 106.25, but closing bids were one-quarter better than that figure. A few shares of General Petroleum sold at 135. United Oil dropped to 56 cents, but Union of California held its own around 176, although Delaware Union broke to 25.75. Mines were weak. Tom Reed opened at 1.37, but moved up to a close at 1.38. United Eastern declined to 2.70 and 4000 shares of Telluride went over at 24 cents.

Industrials were in bad shape, but few sales were recorded. Last bids for Los Angeles Investment were 75 cents, while the Goodyear stocks were bid at 74 and 75, respectively, for the tire and rubber and the textile.

Business for the week on the Los Angeles exchange totaled 277,908 shares of stock having a value of $531,375.53. In the bond list sales of 974 are recorded to a value of $376,968.50.

A FEW RAISINS.

The California raisin crop this year will be about 175,000 tons, of which the California Associated Raisin Company will handle 150,000 tons.

CATTLEMEN TO MEET.

Cattle growers in the Los Angeles district are planning to attend the annual meeting of the California Cattlemen's Association in San Francisco on December 11.

SPREADING THE GOSPEL.

Southern Pacific has recently issued a new and attractive folder which contains much of interest to the tourist about California.

ARIZONA BANKERS MEET.

Arizona State Bankers' Association was in session Friday and Saturday at Douglas. Because of cotton financing, the condition of the copper market and other important factors the convention this year was of greater importance than usual. Several California bankers were in attendance. The convention is usually held in Phoenix during the State Fair, and the departure from custom was expected to enable the bankers to concentrate more definitely upon the matters in hand.

COFFEE PRICES.

Los Angeles coffee dealers say prices of the standard breakfast fluid may be sharply advanced next year. The Brazilian crop is reported to be below the average on account of frosts, while high labor cost is also having its effect.

STANDARD AT HOME.

Operations of the Standard Oil Company, of California in the vicinity of Los Angeles are said to include a lease on 1200 acres of promising oil land at Hawthorne, near El Segundo. The Milwaukee Fountain Company brought in a 2,000,000 or 3,000,000-foot gas well on this property about a year ago, but trouble was had with the well, which never was completely finished. The Standard will start drilling a new well at once on the property, which is not far from the company's El Segundo refinery.

The Standard is now operating eighty-one strings of tools, forty-seven of which are engaged on new wells, and thirty-four on redrilling and deepening jobs. The company is now operating five rigs in the promising new field recently opened up at Huntington Beach, and eight in the Elk Hills. The Standard has had remarkable success in opening up new territory in recent years, but, as in the case of its competitors, field operations are still held back by the difficulty of securing casing and other materials.

SHOE PRICES.

Although retail shoe prices have been reduced, the public is not buying, says the Journal of Commerce, and wholesalers are advising dealers to display shoes selling under $8, as buyers are now practicing economy.

WORLD DO MOVE.

After fifty-two years of operating old-fashioned gas furnaces of limited capacity and unlimited hand labor the San Francisco mint has finally been equipped with a modern electric furnace increasing output 60 per cent and decreasing operating costs 40 per cent.

WAGE READJUSTMENT.

No immediate wage cutting is looked for. Before this can be successfully accomplished there must be further price readjustment and greater stabilization. It is a season of heavy liquidation. Farmers are paying their bills and merchants are deep in holiday activities. In the spring there will be stock taking and perhaps a fresh start.

BOND FIELD INVADED.

A number of the officials of the bond department of the Bank of Italy with headquarters in San Francisco are expected in Los Angeles tomorrow for a conference preliminary to establishing in this city a large, well-equipped bond department modeled after the Northern California department, which is now a prominent factor in the investment field in that part of the State. Leo V. Belden, general manager of the bond department of the bank; C. M. Noyes of the buying department and the manager of the Liberty bond department will be here for the meeting.

AS DUN SEES IT.

Dun's Review says:

"While the hopeful aspects in business are being rather more freely emphasized with strengthening of confidence in certain quarters, general conditions have not changed essentially. A belated turn to more seasonable weather in some sections of the country has given moderate stimulus to a retarded and restricted movement at retail, and holiday requirements may be expected to later bring at least a temporary revival of consumers' buying.

"The underlying situation in primary channels, however, is still characterized by the phases which have recently become familiar, and which find reflection in receding prices and diminished output, with a further lessening of operating forces in many instances. With nearly all purchasers waiting for evidence that the price readjustment has run its course before committing themselves for the future, comparatively few new orders are being received to replace those which have been completed, and manufacturers are not disposed to accumulate reserve stocks of goods during the present period of uncertainty.

"The proportion of inactive producing capacity, therefore, has increased in textiles, leather, iron and steel, and elsewhere an easing of conditions in the labor market, with some downward revisions of wages, is reported in various industries. Such developments as these, as well as the rise in the commercial mortality, are a natural concomitant of the economic transition which for some time past has been in motion, but business is gradually adjusting itself to a sounder basis, and the way is being shaped for subsequent progress along more conservative and wholesome lines. With the establishment of more stability in prices, which must follow sooner or later, the beginning of trade recovery may conceivably be witnessed."

ORANGES.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 13.—There are about 200 cars of Valencia oranges en route to and on track in eastern markets. Prices received are on a basis of $8.50 per box for fancy and $7 to $7.50 for choice. There are no Valencias remaining in California for shipment East.

Several cars of navels have been shipped from the Oroville district. Both the quality and the yield are reported better than last season. The total crop will run in the neighborhood of 300 cars. Placer county will ship around 100 carloads. Orland in Glenn county will ship only about 5 cars. The Mill Orchard Company at Hamilton City will get out about 30 cars. This 300-acre orchard is just coming into bearing.

Tulare county shipments to date total around twenty cars. The rains of the past few days were general throughout the Central California citrus belt and caused a lowering of the test on navels. Fruit that tested 9 to 1 before the rain dropped to as low as 5 to 1 in many districts, and picking was slowed down as a result.

Central California navels are quoted on a basis of $5 to $5.50 cash for shipment this week and $4 to $4.50 for next week's shipment.

The general opinion that there would be heavy shipments from Southern California districts during the next few weeks is not going to materialize. The fruit is not sizing up and with the exception of a few groves in favored locations, there is nothing in the way of suitable sizes worth picking. One grower is offering his crop of about ten cars for sale with the provision that the crop be picked at once. The fruit is reported well colored, but the entire crop runs 176s and smaller and buyers are not inclined to take on a deal of that kind.

The fact that not much early fruit will be shipped from Southern California districts is expected to strengthen the situation on the Central California deal as the eastern trade was holding back on orders in anticipation of a rush of fruit from both Southern and Central California districts.

Latest estimates are for a crop of 18,500 cars of navels from Southern California, 4500 from Central and 300 from Northern California.

Valencia estimates run 19,000 from Southern, 1700 from Central and 10 from Northern California.

Miscellaneous varieties of oranges will total about 2165 cars from all districts. Grapefruit about 580 cars total.

Florida oranges are averaging from $4.70 to $5.50 per box in eastern auction markets on best grades. The general run of fruit is showing improvement in color and maturity, according to advices from eastern markets.

LEMONS.

The market on California lemons is dull and lifeless. F.o.b. quotations are on a basis of $2.50 to $3 per box. There are 50 per cent more California lemons in storage this season than ever before.

There are 27,000 boxes foreign lemons on hand and available for sale within the next thirty days.

The new crop of California lemons is estimated at 10,000 cars in Southern California and about 250 cars in Central California.

Yellow Taxi Cab

Twenty-seven cities in the United States are using Yellow Taxi Cabs, and according to the President of the Walden Shaw Livery Co., manufacturers of the Cab, every company in operation is meeting with excellent financial success.

Dividends of several Companies are truly remarkable, and it is believed Yellow Taxi of Los Angeles will surpass in earnings all other cities.

One of the foremost Taxi Cab men of the country, who is thoroughly familiar with local conditions, said:

"Los Angeles was made to order for the Yellow Taxi and the local company will prove a veritable mint for its stockholders."

Investing without Capital

Many people now invest in high grade listed stocks and bonds without capital—that is, they buy them on the Kriebel Systematic Saving Plan and pay for them out of their monthly earnings.

They are finding it highly profitable. It is not a short cut to wealth, but it invariably yields liberal interest plus a profit.

What can be accomplished by this plan is told in Peter Perkins' story, "Getting Ahead." By investing $25 per month for 10 years he accumulated $10,000. The booklet tells you what stocks he bought, the dividends received each year, and the market advance of each stock. It's fascinating. Shall we send you a copy? It's free. Dept. 1.

L. J. Wilde, Esq., Spreckels Building, San Diego, California.

My Dear Mr. Wilde: Our Executive Committee from San Francisco visited the oil well at Morena. Thanks to the kindness and courtesy of Mr. Nesmith, we had a very interesting and instructive trip. They were lowering a casing in the well which seemed to be handled with great expedition and very smoothly.

We were all very much impressed with the fact that the crew carried out the work so evenly—without any fuss whatever.

All of us very naturally hope you will have a most successful well. Please let me express my thanks to you and also to Mr. Nesmith for the courtesies extended.

If it is not a secret matter would it be possible for you to let me have a copy of the log of the well? Mr. Douglass used to manage the Monarch Oil Co. of San Francisco, which was owned by Mr. A. B. Spreckels, and has a very good general knowledge of the oil business as they put down quite a number of wells, and he expressed a desire to have a copy of the log if you have no objections.

With kind regards, believe me,
Very sincerely yours, (Signed) W. CLAYTON.

We are pleased to submit a letter received from Mr. Clayton, Vice-President and Managing Director of the Spreckels Companies, giving his views about our work at Morena. The party referred to included the Executive members of the Spreckels interests at San Francisco.

So many people form a downtown opinion. If they do not see actual work they believe there is none.

THIEVES ARE BUSY AGAIN.

Just as It Looked as Though They Were Licked They Pop Up Once More.

Just when everything looked good for a record year in auto thefts, along comes the month of October and hands a smash to local hopes.

Yesterday the theft bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California went over the records for 1920 and found that the thefts of autos had decreased over 1919—but during October there was a strange and mighty increase.

What's the answer?

There are several, according to the auto club, but first a consideration should be given to the comparative figures. Up to Oct. 31, 1919, there were 1377 automobiles stolen in Los Angeles and immediate vicinity. To the same date this year, there were 1282 stolen, or almost a hundred less.

MORE MISSING.

Last year, to that date, there were 1126 recovered—with 250 cars never heard from after they were purloined. This year, there were 947 recovered—leaving 335 among the missing.

In October, 1919, there were 126 machines stolen, of which ninety-three were recovered. Last month there were 144 stolen, of which ninety-six have so far been recovered. It's a sad tale, mates!

This does not mean, say the authorities, that the hounds of the law are any less active than they were last year, or any less shrewd—but that Mr. Auto Thief is getting foxier this winter. Furthermore, it means that the transcontinental highways are in better condition and offer avenues of escape which please the thieves greatly and allow them to make quicker getaways.

CARELESSNESS.

After an investigation of the thefts reported during October, the auto club came to the decision that greater carelessness on the part of the owners themselves was evidenced. When the truth of the matter in most instances came out, it was found that the owner reluctantly admitted he had left his car unlocked in the downtown streets. In addition, when the theft bureau came to trying to recover the stolen cars, it was discovered that a large per cent of the owners were unable to give decisive identification information.

If an owner can't tell the law what his car is like, how it can be differentiated from thousands of other cars of the same make, then it is a pretty hard job to recover it, says the detectives.

TOO INDIFFERENT.

In fact, Detectives Erven, Hickok and Rose of the automobile club hold up their hands in dismay at the indifference of automobile owners who take no steps to protect their valuable property before it is stolen.

If owners won't register the identification marks of their cars with the theft bureau, say these detectives, then how can they expect to get an instant return of their property? And more than one-third of them cannot even give the motor numbers, and some even forget their license number and have to "look it up."

A large number of cars belonging to visitors from other States have been stolen here because these visitors have not taken the trouble to even register with the State license bureau or with the auto club. They forget that Los Angeles is one of the greatest pleasure automobile centers in America and for that reason is the mecca of slick auto thieves from all over the country.

NOT SO SAFE.

They are not as safe here as they are in Podunk Center. In addition, the auto thieves every year make this a sort of winter resort for their activities, and the club warns owners that from now on there will be more cars stolen every week than in the summer.

The total valuation of cars stolen in 1920 will be more than $1,500,000 at the end of the year, predict local authorities.

MANEY PROMOTED.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SYRACUSE (N. Y.) Nov. 13.—A. G. Maney has been appointed director of distribution of the Franklin Automobile Company. Mr. Maney has been serving as assistant to President H. H. Franklin in connection with merchandising, over which he now has direct supervision.

Let Only a Stop—Watch Satisfy you

As to Acceleration and Deceleration

EVERY time a Marmon 34 is demonstrated, we ask you to keep the records of a Marmon Score Card, so you will have a definite basis of comparison.

Note that when acceleration and deceleration are demonstrated we do it by stop-watch, so as to be accurate.

First comes the test of accelerating from 10 to 50 M.P.H. Then from 10 to 40 M.P.H. Note the pick-up, the easy, sure flow of power, the smoothness of attaining speed.

Then comes the deceleration test. From 50, from 40, from 20 M.P.H. to a dead stop.

These tests are simple. But they are the very items which make the Marmon 34 a favorite among the foremost automotive engineers — a majority of whom own Marmon 34s.

AL. G. FAULKNER COMPANY

[Distributor]

New Company to Handle Output of New Factory.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

TOLEDO, Nov. 13.—It had been generally assumed that the new Chrysler when manufactured would be sold through the Willys-Overland sales organization, Overland distributors handling the product. This assumption has been shattered by the announcement of the corporation that the Chrysler Company is to take over the sale of the new car and establish a distributor and dealer organization on an independent basis. General sales offices have been opened at the home at Elizabeth, N. J., and the organization, which will handle the distribution of the 500 to 600 cars per day production, is assuming shape.

Although it will be spring before the Chrysler factory will be producing cars, territorial applications are being received, and it is expected that by January the new sales plan will take form and distributor appointments be arranged in the larger cities.

The plan, which is being formulated by E. B. Wilson, general sales manager of the Chrysler motor division, Willys Corporation, contemplates establishment of distributing points to keep pace with production rather than a general distribution of sample cars over a wide area of territory, with a resultant wait for the delivery in quantities—a policy that will, no doubt, appeal to the trade. Willys-Overland factories at Toledo will resume operation November 15.

SANTA ROSA WILL HOLD TRACK RACE.

Application for a sanction for a 100-mile race at Santa Rosa, November 25, has been made to the A.A.A. through the California State Automobile Association. The application was filed by the Sonoma County Fair Association.

FAULTS IN YOUR DRIVING.

Etiquette is as Essential in an Automobile as it is at the Dinner Table.

BY FRED GILMAN JOPP.

When it was suggested that I should write an article giving driving advice to those who operate their own cars, I must confess that I felt no enthusiasm whatever.

I expect that, as a result of my little lecture, I shall be unpopular with a good many people, who will think that I am being exceedingly impertinent, accusing them, openly or by innuendo, of conduct of which they are entirely guiltless. The suggestions I make, however, are offered as the outcome of bitter experience and, oh, how bitter and costly is Dame Experience in teaching us the rules of driving.

A FEW OF 'EM.

I readily confess that my discourse is not directed at all drivers—not even the majority of drivers—but at a comparatively small number of motorists with driving experience which should have taught them better, whose handling of their cars leaves, in my opinion, something to be desired.

Although a method mostly used in correcting children, I can scarcely do better than frame my suggestions in the form of "don'ts." Hence, I begin thusly:

DON'T LOLL.

Ladies, don't loll. It is distressing to see even a mere man sprawled out behind a steering wheel, but far more so in the case of a woman. The woman who holds herself well has a way of making a good impression wherever she may be, and this applies equally whether she be sitting at a dinner table or behind the wheel of a car.

Don't take advantage of the fact that you are a woman, because, though most men drivers will make way for you even when you are in the wrong, they will think the less of you while they do so, and there are some who will insist upon their "rights" as automobile drivers. Should you encounter this last-named species there is likely to be a smash.

ATTEND TO BUSINESS.

Don't think about the possible impression you may be making upon other road users. Attend strictly to the business in hand. There still exists in the minds of a good many persons an idea that it is not safe for women to drive automobiles. Do your best to destroy this false impression by handling your car with care and consideration for others.

Don't imagine that other drivers will necessarily stare at you. If they do, it will not be because they are admiring you, but because you have done something that has made them doubtful of your ability to drive. Show them that you are a mistress of the art.

And just because some one told you that your electric horn is detrimental to weak-hearted pedestrians, don't neglect it altogether. The horn is your and the other driver's safeguard, and it is like rocking the boat not to use it.

DON'T TRY IT.

Don't "shave" things. Leave that trick to the razor. Good drivers give pedestrians, animals and other vehicles as much clearance as possible—not as little. Experienced drivers can, if they care to do so, miss an obstruction by an inch or so, but few think it good form to show off in this way. They have a habit of mentally cataloguing the driver who leaves inches between herself or himself and disaster when they could have left feet.

Drivers who turn corners on the wrong side of the street should be removed to lunatic asylums. If their conduct were to result merely in their own speedy demise, they might perhaps be left at large, but since their folly entails serious danger to innocent pedestrians and drivers who may be coming around the same corner in the opposite direction the wrong-doers should be summarily suppressed.

PINK SHEET NEWS SUMMARY

AUTOMOBILES. Speed demons of the very first water only will compete in Thanksgiving Day 250-mile race at Los Angeles Speedway. Red-hot competition for 1920 speedway championship promised by Chevrolet, Milton, Murphy and De Palma, with Murphy now installed as a favorite.

Greatly increased demand for inclosed bodies on automobiles will result in a tremendous production of these types during 1921. Several factories to turn out open and closed models in practically equal numbers, according to recently announced plans.

October was a wonderful month for the automobile thieves in Los Angeles, who broke out, after falling far behind last year's record, and got away with cars by the dozen. Detectives blame negligence of car owners, who admit that they failed to properly lock their machines in a good many cases.

Eastern schools are now teaching the youth of the nation what the common-sense traffic rules on the streets are and how to observe them. Scheme is being urged now upon the school departments of all the larger cities in order to cut down the traffic accidents to youngsters.

Reports from Detroit say that the beneficial results of the election of Senator Harding to the Presidency are certain to be felt by the automobile industry in very short order.

SPORTS. Veteran Tom Marshall tells of the triumph of American trapshooters twenty years ago over the best in Europe and urges the adoption of uniform rules for the great game to promote competition.

John Dougherty's column of checker problems and notes contains much of interest to all who like to study the famous game.

TEACH KIDS THE RULES.

Inclusion of courses designed to teach children the "rules of the road," will be urged upon school officials throughout the United States shortly by the textbook committee of the Highway and Highway Transport Education Committee of the Bureau of Education. While it is yet too early to say definitely what the recommendations for these courses will contain, some indication can be obtained from studies which are already under way in the Detroit public schools as well as in some others.

In Detroit, for example, the work starts with the kindergarten, where the child is taught to exercise care in crossing streets, always waiting on the corner until he is sure that nothing is approaching within a half block.

Later, as the child progresses to the elemental grades the course is broadened and the element of personal responsibility enters into the course, together with more detailed instructions as to rules of safety, always in language which is easily understood and which is confined to fundamental principles.

As a supplement to the vocal instruction, traffic games have been found a valuable teaching adjunct in Ohio schools, the child learning more readily in this way and also becoming more interested.

Thus, for example, in one kindergarten one child is selected as the traffic "cop." Others represent buildings, others machines, others are pedestrians crossing the street. The "cop" has a traffic sign with the words "go" and "stop" on it, and the pedestrians proceed according to the signs.

PRODUCTION OF CLOSED CARS TO BE INCREASED.

Almost Half of the Entire Output of Several Big Automobile Factories Will be Inclosed Models.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DETROIT, Nov. 16.—Inclosed models, which have been increasing rapidly in favor the past few years, will be more in demand in 1921 than ever before in the opinion of automobile manufacturers. Practically every factory will increase its closed automobile output. As a rule, the percentage of closed cars is much smaller among the lower-priced machines, although this rule does not hold good in every instance.

BIG PER CENT.

Figures obtained from sales representatives of various factories show that the Cadillac and Franklin head the list with approximately 50 per cent closed cars, with the Pierce Arrow and Lincoln Motor Company turning out about 40 per cent. The best figures obtainable show that the Buick production schedule includes from 30 to 35 per cent closed cars, while the Hudson builds 30 per cent of the closed style and the Reo comes next with 28 per cent.

Of all the Packard twin sixes built this year every fourth one, or 25 per cent, will be of the inclosed type. This is an increase of 10 per cent over last year and the total will be increased to 40 per cent of the last schedule. The Packard single six, which was recently placed on the market, has found so much favor among closed car users it is said that 46 per cent of the single six production is of the closed type.

HUGE INCREASES.

The Oakland Motor Car Company is building about 28 per cent of its product with closed bodies, which compares with 8½ per cent last year, and is an indication of the increasing popularity of the inclosed automobile. The Paige and the Liberty work on a schedule approximately 25 per cent, and the Hupp Motor Car Corporation closed car sales would approximate 30 per cent of its factory production if it could meet the demand. Up to the present time the output of Hupp closed automobiles has been limited by the inability of plant facilities to meet the requirements of the business. However, the company recently has taken over a body factory in the East, and as soon as the new plant has been systematized according to Hupp production methods it will be in a position to supply the demand for closed cars.

This year's production of Ford automobiles will include 12 per cent of the inclosed, and the ratio is increased every year. The Columbia Motors Company is building 14 per cent closed cars and is planning to increase this to 18 per cent in 1921.

EVEN MORE.

Dodge Brothers are working on a schedule of 15 per cent closed models, which is 5 per cent higher than last year and will be increased again next season. The Studebaker Corporation estimates the number of closed cars built throughout the year at 8 per cent of its production, but it is building approximately 20 per cent at present.

Inquiry at plants which build automobile bodies brought forth the same figure—25 per cent—as probably the correct percentage of closed bodies now required to meet the demands of the motoring public. The production of closed-car bodies is, of course, much increased at this time of the year. It is not unlikely that the average year's production of bodies of this type will increase annually.

NOT SO MANY.

Complete reports of automobile production for September are not ready, but are likely to show a decrease of 15 or 20 per cent from August records. During the first eight months of the year, from January to the end of August, the total number of automobiles shipped or driven away from 124 factories was 1,475,667, according to figures compiled by J. S. Marvin, traffic manager of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce. October, it is stated, is likely to show an increase over the September figures. While there was a slackened output at many plants in September, the situation is believed to have improved materially last month.

A two-passenger cabriolet with low top, wide doors and roomy interior is the latest addition to the Essex Motor Car Company's models. The after deck curves gracefully in harmony with the contour of the rear fenders. Smartness is added to the car by a patent leather sun visor, easily adjusted. Over the narrow black molding the body and top are covered with black grained leather. Otherwise the color is the standard Essex green. The chassis and fenders are in black. The upholstery is of wool fabric in a rich tone of gray.

SELL AUTOMOBILES IN CLASSY STYLE.

DUTCH DISTRIBUTORS HAVE BIG SHOWROOM, GARAGE AND OTHER FACILITIES.

The automobile dealers of Holland are not far behind the American dealers in the matter of magnificent buildings and elaborate showrooms. One establishment at the Hague resembles a fine old chateau, of a style of architecture of centuries ago. Others take on the aspect of a large bank or government building.

Neither are the Dutch dealers backward in the matter of sales. American cars have made a considerable inroad into the favor of Holland motorists and a great increase in the sale of these cars is predicted, according to information received here by C. W. McKelvey, Liberty Six distributor.

J. B. Scearce, district manager for the Liberty Motor Car Company, who is responsible for the information, states that there has been a marked increase in the exportation of its cars to Holland. One large retail automobile selling organization, with branches in the leading Dutch cities, known as the Haagsche Automobiel Maatschappij, has just taken over representation of the Liberty Six. The Haagsche company has its headquarters in the Hague, where it conducts a number of places of business—showrooms, garages and warehouses. It has other branches in such important cities as Amsterdam and Rotterdam. All of the units of this great foreign retail chain are to represent the Liberty Six.

Do You Change Gears in Traffic

POLICE records show that over 90 per cent of all auto accidents could be easily avoided. Watching the car instead of the road seems to be the motorist's biggest trouble.

Stand on any congested corner. Notice how the driver of practically every car is compelled to change gears when the traffic slows down even to 3, 4 or 5 miles an hour.

Packard drivers keep both hands on the wheel—the car easily throttles down to two miles an hour on high—and then can pick up to thirty in twelve seconds.

We say—no other car can give you such a wide range of speeds on high as quickly and as smoothly as a Twin Six.

Further, take Packard turning radius—the 136" wheel base of a Twin insures maximum riding comfort—yet the turning space required is no greater than that of ordinary cars which have a wheel base 10 to 20 inches shorter.

There is nothing radically new about Packard performance. Even those features which make it unchallenged in ease of handling and performance, are simply gradual Packard engineering developments, brought about by 21 years' continuous building of passenger cars.

To test performance—drive any car, both in traffic and in the open—then try a Twin Six.

After proving to yourself that Packard outperforms any other car—inquire for the facts that show a Twin Six is just as economical to run as many cars costing one-half to two-thirds as much.

NO NEED FOR EXCITEMENT

Keeping 'Em on the Farm is Not So Difficult.

The Automobile Seems to be Doing its Share.

Agriculturists Own a Lot of Motor Vehicles.

The talented gentleman who composed, "How Ya Gonna Keep Them Down on the Farm," evidently forgot all about the humble automobile. Should his eye happen across the startling figures contained in the following paragraphs he will have to admit that the answer to his burning question has been found.

"While much has been said as to the part played by the automobile in modernizing the farm, few of us realize how close it has brought community life to the door of the farmer and his family," said L. V. Starr, manager of J. W. Leavitt & Co., Oldsmobile distributors.

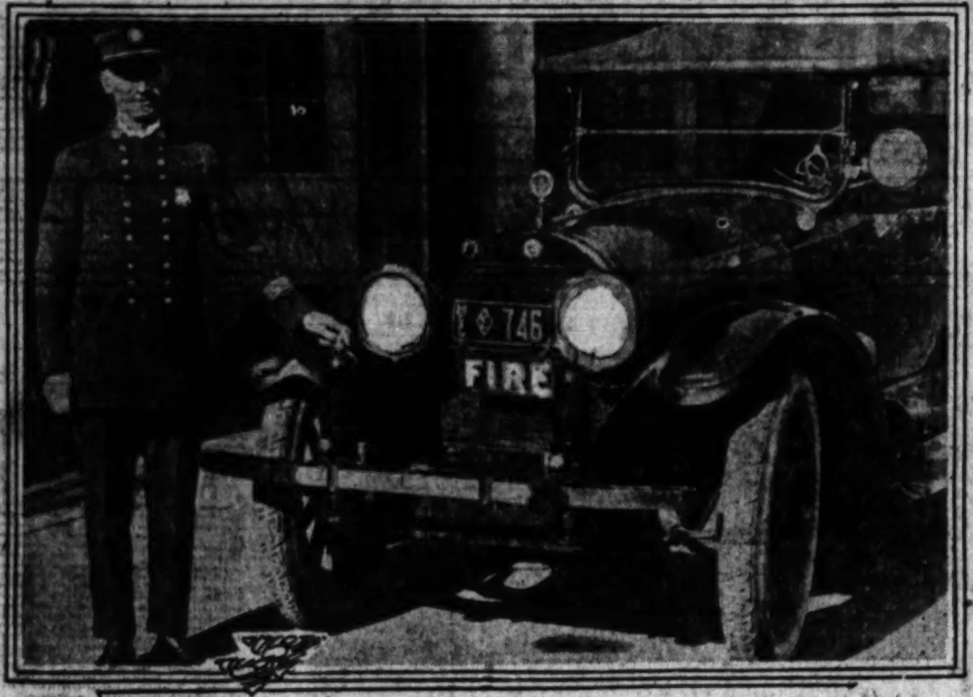
EXACT FACTS.

"Taking the exact figures as shown by the Farm Journal we find the American farmer credited with some 2,266,475 passenger cars—or about one-third of all the motor vehicles in the United States. To this number may safely be added several hundred thousand more, for the average farmer has a habit of waiting until his crops have been harvested before purchasing his next year's car. Although the buying was not so great this year as it was last, there was a big amount of business done with the farmers throughout the country.

"Trips to town take from one-half to one-third the time formerly required in the day of the horse and buggy. The farmer is thus enabled to enjoy the same social life of one living in a metropolis and still not neglect the care of his property. All this is aside from the commercial value of the car in agricultural routine."

BIG DEMAND.

"Our Oldsmobile dealers in the rural districts of the State report a marked demand for the car now that the crops have been harvested and, in most cases, marketed. Some attribute this improved condition to the result of the recent national election, which may be true to a certain extent, but it has been our experience in the past that sales in these districts begin to pick up about the same time the crops are safely in a freight car en route to the consumer. We are anticipating unusual sales activity in the spring, too, for with prices stabilized, buying from this class of customer will open up with renewed vigor."



He Rides Comfortably on His Way to the Big Fires.

Fire Chief Scott of the Los Angeles Fire Department found it well worth his while to equip his big Cadillac with Westinghouse shock absorbers so that he can whizz around sharp turns at high speed without the rocking motion which would otherwise ensue.

FULL SCHEDULE AT TRUCK PLANT.

The factory of the Federal Motor Truck Company at Detroit, Mich., is operating on a full-time schedule, according to an announcement made by M. L. Pulcher, vice-president and general manager of the company. Sufficient orders are on their books to warrant the assumption that there need be no fear of the curtailment of production in the future and the company is making every preparation for an even greater output during the coming year.

A new addition to the Federal plant adding 60,000 square feet to the 300,000 square feet of factory space in the Federal plant has just been completed. This new addition will house the final assembly and paint departments.

SPEED KINGS WORKING OUT.

Chevrolet; a Revere Special, driven by Eddie Hearne; a Thiele Special, driver un-named, and a car to be driven by Ralph De Palma. Two other entries which are tentatively known to have been considered, are to be driven by Joe Thomas and Art Klein. Whether they will be officially entered or not will probably not be known until next week, as the entries do not close until the 17th inst.

LOOKS WARM.

The prospects for a wonderful race for the championship continue good, with Jimmy Murphy beginning to loom up as the best bet for the title. Murphy's sensational running all year, his wonderful showing in winning the Fresno race and his class demonstrated in practice, have put him right up in first place in the minds of the fans, although in actual standings he is third.

Gaston Chevrolet, who has led the championship standings ever since the Indianapolis race, scarcely seems to be considered by those who claim to be in the know. They say that his car is just slow enough to be trimmed by Murphy's fast Duesenberg and that this has been demonstrated at Fresno and several other tracks. The Swiss demon has been working to beat the band on his car, however, and believes that he has added several miles per hour to it since arriving in Southern California.

Tommy Milton has dropped completely from sight since winning the 100-mile challenge event on the dirt track at Phoenix and breaking the world's record for that event with his little Chevrolet-Duesenberg Special. He has been working hard on his little car and believes that when he faces Starter Wagner on turkey day his machine will be every bit as fast as any in the race, if not faster. Milton and Murphy are the red hot favorites for the title.

Ralph De Palma is the original mysterious guy and hasn't been heard from except indirectly since the Fresno race. He is now supposed to be on his way to Los Angeles and will certainly be here for the race. Just what he is going to drive is not clear. If he elects to drive the little Ballot, which he campaigned so successfully this past season, it is certainly fast enough to bring him victory with an even break in the luck. If he gets a new Ballot, which is certainly a possibility, it should be even faster than the old Ballot.

NOT SO GOOD.

Ralph's chances for the championship are not being fancied, for the reason that he is so far behind the leaders in the matter of points. Ralph is so far back, that even if he won first place in the Thanksgiving Day race, either Chevrolet or Milton could capture the championship title by winning the points given for second place. However, if Ralph could win first and Murphy second, De Palma would take the title, as well as the money.

Aside from the actual contestants for the Speedway title, there is a tremendous lot of interest in the race for the $35,000 in cash prizes which is hung up. There are a lot of folks who believe that there is a fine chance of Eddie O'Donnell, Roscoe Sarles, Eddie Hearne or some of the other pilots who are out of the running for the championship, slipping in ahead of the title contenders and getting away with the lion's share of the purse.

MORE PRACTICE.

Official practice for the big event will be continued this week, the track being closed to all except actual crews and newspapermen and officials. The big rush for tickets continues and Secretary A. M. Young believes that the capacity of the great Speedway plant will be taxed to the utmost to take care of the crowd. Arrangements for taking care of 100,000 people have been made and the management believes that many will be turned away, who are expecting to get in on general admission tickets, which are not reserved.

The selection of Fred Wagner to start the race and Barney Oldfield to pace the field on the warming up lap, have met with general approval and Oldfield is already out here trying out cigars to get in condition for his trip around the saucer. Wagner should be here this week and will officiate at practice several days before the event.

Fire Chief Has Need for Anti Rolling Device.

When the fire chief goes to a big blaze to take personal charge of the work of the fire fighters, there is usually very little time wasted in the proceeding. City streets are none too smooth, many of them it must be said, and between culverts and chuck-holes, the forty and fifty-mile speeds at which the chief rides to a fire are decidedly apt to be very destructive of tires and springs as most folks will readily admit, who have watched the big Cadillac with screaming siren tear through the traffic.

As a consequence, Fire Chief Scott last week had his personal car equipped with a set of Westinghouse air springs. According to Douglas Wilson, of Wilson Brothers, local distributors for the Westinghouse air springs, the air springs were submitted to exhaustive tests before the fire chief decided upon them as equipment for his car.

"The fire chief's car must be able to take a corner at forty miles an hour without side-sway or 'roll,'" said Wilson yesterday. "Equipped with the Westinghouse air springs, his car showed its ability to do just that. Naturally the chief was not particularly interested in the matter of comfort, but the addition of the air springs has permitted the making of from twenty to twenty-five miles an hour faster time over rough streets, and this is a big factor in his usage."

Election is Sure to be a Help to Motor Industry.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DETROIT, Nov. 13.—While as yet unreflected in general lines of business, the election of Senator Warren G. Harding as President has created a pronounced atmosphere of optimism. "The automobile industry is bound to feel the beneficial effects of the change in administration brought about by the American people at the polls," said A. T. Waterfall of Dodge Brothers. "We are preparing for a release of the pent-up demand for cars, and so far as Dodge Brothers are concerned we are working 100 per cent on production in anticipation of better times to come."

Sentiment among Detroit automobile manufacturers is that readjustment of business and a resumption of economic development will be in full swing by next spring and that the strained credit conditions of the past several months will be completely relieved by that time.

NEW PRODUCTION SYSTEM IS READY.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DETROIT (Mich.) Nov. 13.—Within sixty days the Reo Motor Car Company expects to have completed its plans for changing its production system and all buildings and additions will be ready for use. First steps in this rearrangement were taken a year ago. It is estimated that the new plan will increase the output at least 20 per cent and result in a number of economies. The last building to be started under the new arrangement is the motor test building, one story and basement, the latter for motor storage. It will have a monitor roof and a system of ventilation to eliminate gases. New electrical equipment will be placed for motor testing. Much remodeling is being carried on and locations are being made so as not to interfere with the regular production.

Snails Color Beach Sands.

The beach of Snails Island in the Gulf of Mexico changes its color twice daily, and for this reason is of great interest to travelers. The sands are really of a golden color, but when the tide is receding it has a pronounced purple tinge. This is due to the myriads of tiny snails crawling in the wake of the ebbing tide. The presence of these snails is what gives the island its name.—[Indianapolis News.

OWNERS GIVE MOTOR ITS SEVEREST TEST.

ACTUAL USAGE ON THE ROADS WILL TELL IF THE PROPER STUFF IS THERE.

It has long since become one of the accepted maxims of the automotive industry that no test which factory engineers can devise for a new model will equal in severity the test of actual usage in the hands of owners which the car will get when it goes into service. Though new models are tested in every conceivable way by the factory experts before they are put into production, the history of the automobile business records many instances where radical changes were found necessary in new models when they had been in service in owners' hands for a short time.

"Perhaps one reason for this lies in the fact that the testers at the factory are invariably expert drivers and mechanics," says Don Smith, general manager for the W. P. Herbert Company, Chandler distributors. "A good driver, by his very expertness, will unconsciously save a car from the punishment which a poor driver will give it in putting it across the same stretch of bad road.

"Then again, different parts of the country impose different tests upon a car. It is probable that California and Arizona furnish the most severe testing ground to be found for cars.

"The motor or car which survives the test of owner usage has passed the final and severest test of all. It is interesting, therefore, to remember that the motor of the Chandler six has not been radically changed in the eight years since its introduction. It has been notably refined in many ways, of course, in that period, but the fundamentals of its design remain the same."

MORELAND
MADE IN CALIFORNIA U.S.A.

People Say—
"Powerful as a Moreland Truck"

When people use anything as a high standard of comparison it signifies something.

It has been tested, proven and established as possessing the quality with which it is compared to the highest degree. It has become an accepted fact in the universal mind. It is beyond question or dispute.

Power is an essential feature of a truck. That power must have the proper relation with the work the truck is to do. It must be so nicely proportioned as to easily and economically do the every day work, yet have that reserve that will take care of abnormally heavy demands without strain or effort.

The Moreland truck has always been, and will continue to be, properly powered. The power plants of the various models are big enough to do what they should do under the varied conditions of operation with the best possible record of economy.

It is possible to install smaller power plants at less expense, and this is done—but not by the Moreland Company. Expense is not considered in the effort to secure proper quality and balance in the Moreland truck.

Proper power means smooth, easy, economical operation, long life and low maintenance. Insufficient power may save in the first cost, but the owner or operator will pay many times the saving in low efficiency, short life and high maintenance.

Send for Moreland specifications and compare its motor sizes in the various models with others of the same capacity ratings.

CRANKSHAFT A VITAL FACTOR.

Proper Support for it Found Most Necessary.

More Bearings Are Being Put in New Engines.

Fifteen-Year-Old Car Still Has This Feature.

One of the most marked traits of motor design evident in the most recent cars to appear upon the market is the attention given to the support of the crankshaft. Several new cars of both six and eight cylinder design feature as one of the points of their motor the fact that the crankshaft is supported by a bearing on each side of each crankshaft "throw." This in the case of the eight gives a crankshaft with five bearings and in the six necessitates seven bearings.

PAST HISTORY.

"It is rather interesting, therefore, to remember that the first six-cylinder car built in America, the Franklin six of 1905, had as one of the features of its motor a crankshaft with seven bearings, and that this feature has been retained in every Franklin six built from that day to this," declares Ralph Hamlin, Franklin distributor for Southern California.

"It reflects great credit upon the engineering ability of the men who designed the Franklin that they recognized at that early date the benefits to be gained from a crankshaft with absolutely rigid support for its entire length. Crankshaft 'whip' is one of the most annoying sources of motor vibration and loss of power. It took the experience of building modern aviation motors to teach many manufacturers this lesson. Some sought to solve the problem by making etremely heavy crankshafts, and others by counterbalancing, but the trend of modern high-grade design indicates a decided turn toward giving the crankshaft adequate support as the best solution yet discovered.

LONGER LIFE.

"Not only does this complete support which the seven bearings gives the Franklin crankshaft virtually do away with motor vibration, but it likewise gives longer life to the bearings. Franklin bearings will wear three times as long without taking up as in the average six with three or four bearings, because the wear is distributed over so much greater bearing surface. Franklin bearings, moreover, are of die-cast babbitt, according to a special Franklin process, and their unusual quality further tends to prolong their life."

CARBURETOR GETS THE BLAME ALWAYS.

BUT QUITE FREQUENTLY THE VALVES ARE AT THE BOTTOM OF THE TROUBLE.

That the carburetor is very frequently made the "goat" for motor faults which do not in the least belong to it is the belief of W. B. Conditt, local distributor for the R. & V. Knight, who bases his deductions upon the experience of motor car users who have switched from the use of poppet-valve cars to those with the sleeve-valve type of motor.

"It is a frequent matter for such owners to comment to me upon their freedom from carburetor trouble with their new cars," said Conditt last week. "In all probability, however, their trouble with their former machines was not carburetor trouble at all, but arose from improper valve action and uneven compression.

"A sticking valve or weak valve spring on a poppet valve car will very frequently, indeed, cause an unevenness of motor operation which nine owners in ten will blame upon the carburetor. In the sleeve-valve type of motor, such as the R. & V. Knight six employs, there is, of course, no chance for troubles of this nature to arise in the first place, for the positive nature of the valve action in the sleeve-valve motor completely eliminates any such factor as a 'sticking valve,' and insures uniform compression as long as the motor operates."

SPEEDOMETER REAL AID TO EFFICIENCY.

DRIVERS SHOULD USE THEM TO CHECK THEIR MILEAGE ON GAS AND TIRES.

"When the average motorist thinks of speedometer, he classes it as an instrument to be used only to give an accurate account of how fast he is traveling at the time he glances at it or after a long trip, to tell how many miles he has driven," says Harry Unger, manager of the Los Angeles Stewart products service station, "but the wise motorist, on the other hand, uses it equally as well to check how many miles he is getting to the gallon of gas or oil and the mileage his tires are giving.

"Some motorists are of the opinion that there is only one model Stewart speedometer, which is used on every verhicle. As a matter of fact, there are in all ten models being manufactured by the Stewart Products Company. There is one model for racing machines, which registers speed over 100 miles per hour. Ther are two models for pleasure cars. There are three models for Ford cars with the instrument board and one for Fords without the instrument board. There is one type for motorcycles, which can be installed either on the front or rear wheels and which registers up to 100 miles per hour. The last two models are for use on trucks, both registering up to thirty miles per hour."

LITTLE CAR GRABS ALL OF THE GLORY.

In a recent endurance and economy test held under the auspices of the Dallas Times-Herald, a Maxwell stock car won first place in its class and second in all classes, some of the cars entered selling as high as $6000. In motor, ignition, transmission, differential and all bearings checking, the Maxwell scored 100 per cent. The test run covered 586 miles, much of it over rough country.

Pick Out a Good Tire and Stay with It.

This is the advice of F. K. Eaton, whose Studebaker bats off on an average 1000 miels a week. He finds Perfection tires true to their name.

WATCH TIRES CAREFULLY.

Motoring experiences have been productive of some pretty tall stories, but none to date quite as original as that now going the rounds and credited to a stage driver, F. K. Eaton, who solemnly avers that he "did a first-class vulcanizing job out in the desert with the sun's help." The job was performed for a stranded motorist.

Eaton, who is well known among motor stage drivers as the "Rambler," is rated as an authority on practical desert "do's" and "don'ts," and one of his first injunctions to motorists undertaking a long desert trip is to give their tires the "once over" at least every day.

"Of course," Eaton remarked in relating some of his experiences the past week while paying a visit at the warehouse headquarters of Guasti, House & Giulii, Inc., "everyone knows enough to watch out for their water, oil and gas in the desert. But somehow a lot of people forget all about their tires.

"First of all a fellow wants to make sure that he's got good sturdy tires. The first time I ever laid my eyes on Perfections I knew they were just what I wanted, and I have now driven a set of Perfection cords nearly 11,000 miles over roads that used to eat up casings every three or four thousand miles. I always carry two spares and ever so often I change off, or rather I used to, but since I put on the Perfections I haven't found it necessary. The cords I put on haven't been off the rims since I got them."

Los Angeles to Owens Lake is a trip that Eaton makes more often than any other, and his Studebaker six usually carries nine people with their baggage. The car which he bought last January has covered, according to the speedometer, a little better than 50,000 miles, and Eaton is still "rambling."

Sales Expert Predicts Huge Business Year.

With sixty days to elapse before the New Year, leading motor-car manufacturers are getting everything lined up for the 1921 business, which, it is confidently predicted, will be the biggest ever experienced in the trade. And among the first of the big manufacturers to get into direct personal touch with the trade has been the Cole Motor Car Company of Indianapolis.

J. E. Roberts, general sales director of the Cole company, is paying a visit here to House & Meyer, Inc., and this year is accompanying the distributors on calls being made on Cole dealers throughout Southern California. "Prospects here, and, in fact, throughout the country, were never brighter from a dealer's point of view and never more satisfying from the standpoint of a car owner," Mr. Roberts declares. "Next year will not witness anything worth mentioning along the lines of radical departures in styles or mechanical changes, a fact which will be borne out in the national automobile shows."

CUTTING CORNERS TOUGH ON TIRES.

MANY DRIVERS RUIN RUBBER BY SCRAPING UP-AGAINST THE STONE CURB.

"Cutting corners is one of the commonest, as well as one of the most dangerous mistakes that a motorist can make. The danger the erring driver runs of being smashed up by some other car is not the only risk he runs.

"Thousands of dollars worth of good rubers are sluffed off each month by motorists who make a practice of cutting corners," is the estimate made by F. H. Osler of the Osler-Racine Rubber Company. "In addition to running the risk of smashing into another driver he is always taking a chance on shortening the life of his tires materially whenever he commits a motoring faux pas of this nature.

"The motorist cannot help his tires wearing out in the course of time if he drives his car at all, but he can help wilfully 'wasting' his tires by scraping them against curbs. He will also find that it will pay him in dollars and cents to observe the above caution," is the opinion of Mr. West.

BAD ALIGNMENT WASTES RUBBER.

MANY MILES OF TIRE WEAR ARE RUBBED OFF USELESSLY THROUGH NEGLECT.

Despite the fact that practically every conductor of an "advice-to-motorists" column continually warns drivers against the costliness of faulty wheel alignment, millions of miles of tire service are still lost annually in this manner. Faulty alignment can rasp away, before the owner realizes it, one-half to two-thirds of the service that is in a tire. Extreme cases are easily brought to light by the way the car steers, but slight cases are almost unnoticeable, even though they may be thieving hundreds of tire miles.

This condition is not always the fault of bent axles, of broken springs, loose spring shackles and sprung frames, but is frequently due to loose steering knuckles, to bent pinions, or worn bearings and wobbly wheels. "Any part of the running gear which has become worn or out of shape is bound to cause undue friction on the tires," declares J. O. Ward, manager of the Los Angeles branch of the Miller Rubber Company. "Frequent examination of the car wheels for alignment will prove exceedingly profitable to the car owner, our experts have found."

THE FAULTS OF DRIVERS.

ners at high speed. Even if you hug the right side of the street, you must must remember that you may meet one of the afore-mentioned lunatics, who, on his wrong side, is taking the corner in the opposite direction. If you must speed, buy a racing car. Those things are built especially for peple who have nowhere to go and who want to get there immediately if not sooner. Usually, though, the trip is suddenly abbreviated by the undertaker.

When passing over wet pavements and slippery roads, avoid sudden turns and spasmodic applications of the brakes. Remember that skidding resulted in the invention of curbings and that a skid is the uncontrollable feature of a car which is synonymous with jumping from the Woolworth tower in two jumps. When you feel the rear end of the car starting to slide, turn the front wheels quickly in the same direction that the rear wheels are taking, and don't touch the brakes. The car will right itself if you follow these directions.

WATCH THE DUST.

Don't forget that on many country roads the car, when driven at high speed, leaves behind it a most unpleasant cloud of dust. You would not feel particularly well disposed toward anyone who wantonly smothered your smartest clothes in dust and dirt.

Don't drive fast over wet roads and streets. A hole full of water may not mean much to you, but to the pedestrian who receives in his face the water ejected from the hole by your wheel it is a matter of moment, usually of indignation. Remember the time a taxi spattered you with mud.

And don't be a "clutch rider." Don't let your foot rest on the pedal controlling this important part of the car. If you do, you are unconsciously wasting power and helping to put the clutch in a condition where it will slip constantly. Keep your foot away from the clutch pedal when it is not necessary for it to be there, then you won't have any trouble from this source.

The suggestions set down here are not, of course, a complete guide to correct behavior when at the stearing-wheel, but if you conscientiously follow them and study the peculiarities of your own particular car (because every car has its own likes and dislikes, exactly as has a mule,) the amenities of the road will be improved, and any antimotoring prejudice that may linger in the minds of some people will become a thing of the past.

And now—I'm going to Cuba.

FILM FASCINATES THE PARLIAMENT.

AUGUST ASSEMBLAGE SHOWS A LOT OF INTEREST IN TRUCK USES.

Evidences of the active interest in motor transportation by foreign countries is seen in the adjournment of the Parliament of Perth, West Australia, for one hour during an official session to watch a truck motion picture film and listen to facts regarding motor truck transportation in the United States.

The movie, which is said to be the first one ever exhibited in the Parliament House, was staged by R. W. Pachaly, representative of the export department of the Four-Wheel Drive Auto Company, Clintonville, Wis. Mr. Pachaly also addressed the assembly and told how large business houses and municipalities in the United States were using motor trucks in the conduct of their business. According to advices from Mr. Pachaly the film aroused considerable interest and brought on a general discussion of motor transportation, during which he was asked numerous questions.

Incredible.

"Mrs. De Style is surprised."

"Over what?"

"Her neighbor went to a cheap resort, yet came back with a fashionable coat of tan."—[Louisville Courier Journal.

MUST DISCOVER GAS SUBSTITUTE.

DISTILLATION FROM SHALE IS LATEST SUGGESTION FROM EXPERTS.

According to Prof. E. O'Neill of the department of chemistry of the University of California in a recent interview with H. G. Blanchard, factory manager of the Coast Tire and Rubber Company in Oakland, a gasoline substitute must be found in the near future that will be more successful than any yet discovered. Though the department is doing no work to that end now, he thinks they will probably take it up soon. He says that only through chemistry will any suitable substitute be found.

That no substitute now in use will ever supply the whole demand, is well known to all chemists, he claims. He believes that distillation from shale may partly supply the market. M. J. Garvin, a graduate of the University of California, now with the United States Bureau of Mines, is investigating shale rock beds in Utah and Wyoming. With him is a party of students from the University of California. The work will take several years.

Solomon's Temple.

It is believed today by many savants that the Old Testament description of Solomon's temple was written by the Jews after their return from the captivity, with the memory of the real splendors of Babylon fresh in their minds, says Anstruther Mackay, writing in the Atlantic Monthly. It is possible that the actual temple was a simple place of worship. If it had been otherwise it is hardly possible that no remains of it would be visible today, seeing that the temples of Egypt, which are so much older, remain, in some cases, almost in toto.—[Exchange.

COULDN'T STAY IN RETIREMENT.

Thought Up a New Car and He Had to Build It.

Because it Was His Idea of the Ideal Machine.

So Maker of Famous Car is Building Another.

When a man has built one successful automobile, carried it to its place in the sun, and has acquired a vast fortune, it would seem that he should be content to rest upon his laurels. Not so, however, with Harry C. Stutz, motor-car builder, who, after a year of retirement, once more stepped into the harness and brought forth the H.C.S.

SAW THE BOSS.

In a recent visit to the H.C.S. factory at Indianapolis, Harry E. Herndon, local distributor of the car, had the pleasure of interviewing its maker. "Some of Mr. Stutz's statements may explain why he re-entered active business life again.

"I had announced my retirement from the industry," said Stutz, "and for a year I actually succeeded in keeping my hands of the reins. But during all this time I was unable to keep my mind off of the subject closest to my heart—automobiles. So I read about 'em. I made a careful study of the specifications of all cars, both American and foreign built. Taking from these specifications only the most practical and economical points, I built in my mind a car which, I believed, was just what the American public was looking for.

HAD TO DO IT.

"Finally, like an old circus horse who can't stand still when he hears the calliope, I just had to build such a car. I collected a great number of my old employees and started to work on it. In this car price was not considered. I knew there was a certain class of people in the United States who were demanding a high-class, good-looking automobile, regardless of first cost, but one which should render maximum service with minimum upkeep.

"To the success the H.C.S. now enjoys I attribute the absolute equality between employer and employee that exists in my factory. Despite the vast number of employees, every one of them knows and calls me by my first name. And in the same way I am familiar with all their sorrows, joys and aspirations. All of them, I say without conceit, are endeavoring to build a product which will be a lasting monument to my name in time to come.

NOT IN A RUSH.

"I never intend to build more than ten cars a day and if it is only possible to build one—we will build only one—but build it well. This probably accounts for the reason that the factory has been three months behind demand ever since we first started to build automobiles."

Herndon asserts that after visiting the H.C.S. factory and interviewing Stutz, he has found the car he has been waiting four years for, of which he can be justly proud to distribute to his customers.

EFFICIENCY MAN HANDLES OUTPUT.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

ALMA (Mich.) Nov. 13.—W. J. Baxter has resigned as first vice-president of the Republic Motor Truck Company. He is succeeded by Col. Frank E. Smith, one of the best-known production men in the automobile industry. During the war Col. Smith headed the finance division of the air service under the War Department. His earlier connections were with the Maxwell Motor Company, when the business was first begun at Tarrytown, N. Y. Since relinquishing war duties, Col. Smith has been conducting an efficiency bureau in New York. He is to move to Alma at once.

Harry C. Stutz,

Who produced the "car that made good in a day" and then retired, but has now come out with the new H.C.S., which bears his initials.

NEW SYSTEM WILL EQUALIZE BRAKES.

THEREBY MAKING IT HARDER FOR THE CAR TO SKID ON WET PAVEMENTS.

"In these days of slippery streets it is absolutely essential that brakes should be tightened evenly, because the slightest harder pull on one brake band will lock the corresponding wheel, causing a dangerous skid. To overcome the necessity of continually adjusting brakes the Lexington car," says W. F. Seel of the Charles H. Kaar Co., "uses an equalizing cable brake system, which automatically adjusts the pull on each brake, reducing skidding on wet streets to a minimum.

"The brake bands of this brake are connected to the right foot pedal by a cable of twisted steel which is encased in flexible housing and which passes over a pulley, thus forming a perfect equalizer. The housing is anchored to the frame at the forward end and to the axle at the rear. Since this housing is noncompressible, it is evident that what cable is pulled out at the front end of the housing by depressing the brake pedal must be compensated by an equal amount coming in at the rear, thereby setting the brakes."

CUSTOM-BUILT CAR IS A SCARCE BIRD.

LOTS OF THEM ARE CALLED THAT, BUT NOT MANY ARE THE REAL THING.

"How often you hear salesmen of automobiles say 'this is a custom-built motor car.' Nothing could be farther from the truth than that. A ready-made suit, for instance," says Robert Thompson of the Robert Thompson Co., Body Builders, "may be of the latest cut and design, and of innumerable patterns, but still it is not a custom-built garment. The same holds true with an automobile. The car may be unique and clever in its design, yet it is not made to measure, so to speak. That is, it is not made to suit the purchaser of the car.

"Every custom-built job built by us is made according to the whims and demands of the motorist who is purchasing the car, together with many new and clever innovations that are first designed by our drafting department and presented to the purchaser of the custom-built job. This is what is meant by a custom-built job car."

ECONOMETER A GREAT DEVICE.

Wonderful Aid in Checking Up on Efficiency.

Deflated Tires Eat Up a Lot of Your Gasoline.

Will Soon be Put on Market in the East.

Though the announcement last week that the Saxon demonstrators of the J. V. Baldwin Motor Company were equipped with a device that visibly measured the flow of gasoline to the carburetor aroused a tremendous amount of local interest, an even greater sensation was created among automotive engineers of Detroit when Los Angeles inventors of the device recently demonstrated it to the motor designers of virtually all the big motor plants of Detroit. According to P. F. Howell, one of the local men responsible for the new invention, the Detroit engineers without exception hailed the device as the greatest contribution that they had ever seen for increasing the efficiency of every motor car. Scores of prospects rode in the Saxon demonstrators last week and watched with interest the operation of the device, which showed that at normal driving speeds the Saxons consistently delivered twenty-five miles per gallon of gasoline.

A GREAT HELP.

"Harry Bill, chief engineer of the experimental department of the Saxon Motor Company, told me frankly that his research department had accomplished more in a single afternoon with the aid of the device than they had been able to learn in three weeks without it." Howell told Andrew Baldwin at the Baldwin Motor Company last week.

"The importance of the B. M. H. Econometer as we call it, lies in the fact that it furnishes the first method of measuring the power which your motor demands in order to deliver a certain result in miles per hour as indicated by your speedometer. Gasoline is potential power. The Econometer measures this flow of power to your motor, and your speedometer at the same time measures the results attained in the way of speed.

HANDY MEASURE.

"The automotive engineer heretofore has been working in the dark. Speed was his only method of testing to get an idea as to whether his improvements or changes were really increasing the efficiency of the car. But with the use of the Econometer it is the simplest sort of matter to compare the exact efficiency by various carburetor, ignition systems.

"For the private owner of a car the Econometer offers a constant check upon the operating efficiency of his car. There are many things that vitally affect the consumption of fuel by your motor. For example, you can take you Saxon demonstrator out there, and deflate your tires from normal sixty to a thirty pound pressure and instead of showing a normal gasoline consumption of twenty-five miles per gallon, the Econometer will show only a twenty mile average. Our tests indicated a 25 per cent loss of power from this single cause.

FOR INSTANCE.

"Wheel bearings, particularly of the taper roller bearing type, sometimes wedge too tightly, creating friction to an extent that will cause a loss of 15 to 30 per cent in your car's efficiency as regards power consumption. A dragging brake may cause 4 to 12 per cent loss, or a slipping clutch, without your realizing that it is slipping, may cause as high as 7 per cent loss. Dry bearings, drive shaft out of line, sticking valves, anything in fact that reduced the efficiency of your car, will be plainly indicated by the Econometer, and you will be warned to search for the cause.

"In many tests which we made, we found it not at all unnusual to discover cars burning twice the fuel they should from a combination of the causes I have just described. As a means a checking the efficiency of cars after assembly at the factories, and insuring uniform performance, the Econometer offers remarkable possibilities to the manufacturer as well as to the owner."

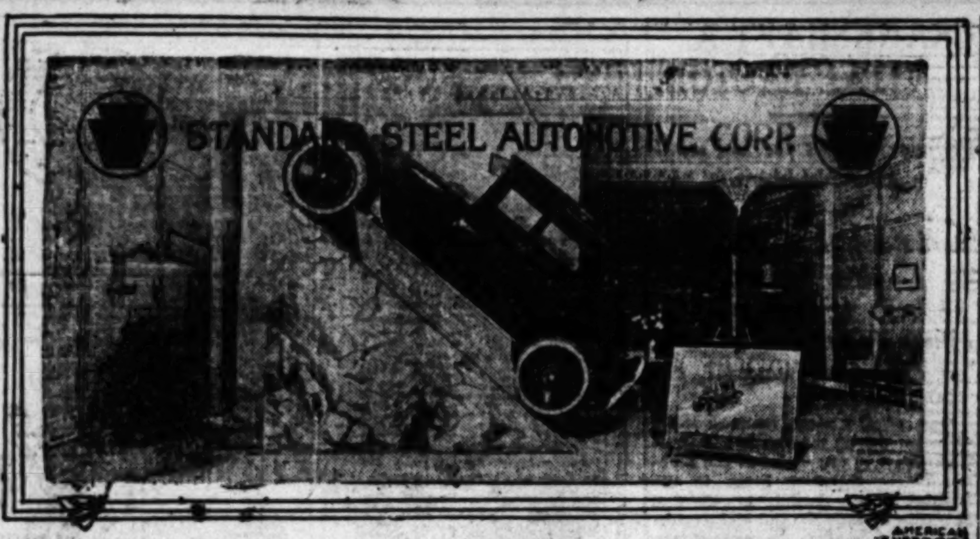
GOING EAST.

Howell expects to leave Los Angeles December 1 for Detroit, where he goes to join the engineering staff of the Penberthy Injector Company of that city, which has undertaken the manufacture of the Econometer on an extremely large scale. The Penberthy Company is one of the largest manufacturers of automobile parts and accessories in Detroit, and their present plans call for the placing of the Econometer on the market shortly after the first of next year. The device will probably have its first introduction to the eastern motor trade at the New York Automobile Show, and if the local interest already shown any criterion, it will unquestionably meet with a tremendous demand.

FERNALD WILL BE ADVERTISING BOSS.

E. B. Wilson, general sales manager, announces the appointment of Alan R. Fernald as advertising manager of the Chrysler Motor division of the Willys Corporation with headquarters at the general offices at Elizabeth, N. J.

While production plans of the Chrysler Motor Company do not contemplate marketing before the spring of 1921, Fernald's early appointment for the formulation of plans and investigation of methods is in line with the policy of Walter P. Chrysler in building up a strong organization for careful study of the field long before production is anticipated.



AMERICAN ENGRAVING

Do You Think that Your Car Could Waltz Up Such a Grade?

One of the most striking window displays ever seen in Los Angeles is shown above, depicting a Standard eight coupe climbing over a 45 per cent grade similar to the famous Duncan-street hill in San Francisco, which was recently climbed by a Standard. Most people didn't know what a 45 per cent grade was like until they saw this and then they began to believe that not every car in the world could scoot over it.

PUTS HEAVY DUTY ON OILING SYSTEM.

ON FUNCTIONING OF THIS PART EVERY FACTOR IN MOTOR DEPENDS.

Of all the intricacies of the motor, one of the most important and one which the public know the least about is the oiling pump. Mr. H. P. Gibson, Proprietor of the Pico Motors Co. described in detail the oil pump on the Herschel-Spillman 6 in the new Crow Elkhart.

The oil pump, which is of the geared type and gear driven, is located in the oil pan, entirely submerged in oil and is driven by a vertical shaft in connection with the camshaft oil pump drive gear. It is hung by a bracket from crank case extending down into reservoir oil pan. The oil is drawn from the oil reservoir through a fine mesh screen and is distributed by a steel distributing tube located horizontally the full length of the crank case, into connecting passages which carry the oil directly into each main crank shaft bearing and end cam shaft bearings. Cylinder walls, cams, pistons, and piston pins are lubricated by oil thrown from lower ends of the connecting rods, caught by pistons and carried up into the cylinders. The steel distributing tube also feeds, under pressure, the trough in oil pan, into which the connecting rod splash tubes, dip. A pressure of four to fifteen pounds is maintained at 1000 R. P. M. of the crank shaft and provision is made for connecting a gauge to the system which mounted on the dash, enables the operator to know at all times the condition of the oil system. The timing gears are lubricated from the splash system through port holes in crank case and a direct oil tube line.

Mr. Lynn C Buxton,
Los Angeles, Calif.

Dear Sir;-

I am pleased to advice you that I have now driven my Stearns, which I purchased from you in July 1919, nearly ten thousand miles and it has given perfect satisfaction. As you know, I have had considerable experience with the different makes of automobiles and I consider this 1919 Stearns the best car on the market for the price. What pleases me particularly is the smoothness of the motor. If possible it improves with each mile and it is hard to understand how a four cylinder motor can develop so much power.

I also want to add a word of praise for your local organization. I have always been treated with courtesy and my wants have been attended to cheerfully and with dispatch. In other words, your interest in me did not cease with the purchase of the car.

You are at liberty to use this letter if you desire,

Yours very truly,

BEAU BRUMMEL would have cried "Failure!" at Abraham Lincoln; but the world smiles at the fop and kneels to the Liberator.

Most of us desire something better from life than to be known as leaders of fashion, though we may not attain to the leadership of a people.

If here at the Peerless factory we can continue to build the best motor cars we are capable of, we shall feel true satisfaction in having followed the urge of Emerson:

"To do with might and main what you can do."

Let others have the honors of Beau Brummel, while we bend our energies to principles of construction and their application.

Our work is the Peerless Two-power-range Eight—a solid, serviceable car, with a true heart and a generous and enduring spirit. We are content to stand or fall by the measure of this accomplishment.

Five years have passed since the first Two-power-range Eight was built. The Peerless of 1920 is in all essentials the same kind of car —a tested and proved car, faithful to a creed of moderation in everything but endurance.

Breaking Ground for Another Big Southern California Factory.

Here we have the festivities at the first bit of labor on the new million-dollar factory of the U. S. Compression Inner Tube Company at Burbank on a twelve-acre site. The gentlemen in the front row from left to right are A. J. Pennington, factory manager; C. R. Privett, west coast distributor; W. A. Blanchard, Mayor of Burbank, leaning on the shovel; M. Spazier, and J. F. Scanlon, advertising manager de luxe.

TAXI COMPANY TO BUILD NIFTY CAR.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

CHICAGO, Nov. 13.—The new Shaw twelve-cylinder car, creation of the Yellow Cab Corporation of Chicago, will make its appearance probably before the end of November. It will be an addition to the list of high priced cars, as the closed models will list at $7500 minimum and the open cars at $5500. The closed cars will consist of two types of four-door sedans, while the open cars will consist of two, four and seven-passenger models. It is said that the product will show several interesting new mechanical features.

TURN DIRT FOR FACTORY.

In the presence of a large group of representative business men of Southern California, including members of the Burbank Chamber of Commerce, W. A. Blanchard, Mayor of Burbank, broke ground last Monday afternoon for the Pacific Coast plant of the United States Compression Inner Tube Company of Tulsa, Okla., to be built two blocks from the Moreland truck factory.

Officials of the big Oklahoma corporation who participated in the ceremonies were A. J. Pennington, general factory manager; C. R. Privett, Pacific Coast distributor; J. F. Scanlon, advertising manager. Mr. Pennington arrived in Los Angeles last week from Kittanning, Pa., where he was completing construction of the Pennsylvania branch unit of his company.

The first factory of this corporation was erected in Tulsa, to supply the demand in the middle western States for puncture proof inner tubes, the chief product of the corporation. Mr. Pennington said yesterday that plans had been formulated to rush to completion at the earliest possible date the Burbank unit in order to meet the demands on the Pacific Coast for the new tubes, which have been demonstrated in this section of the country for more than a year to prove their puncture proof qualities.

One of the most severe tests given the tube in California was staged recently in front of the Los Angeles police station by Police Inspector Murray in the presence of a number of local newspaper men. Inspector Murray drove a twenty-penny nail through casing and tube and seven hours later examination by the newspaper men showed not an ounce of air had been lost as a result of the performance.

COSTS TO TWIST POWER IMPULSES.

WHENEVER YOU TAKE ENERGY AROUND A CORNER YOU LOSE SOME OF IT.

"Taking power around corners" is an expensive matter, as any mechanical engineer will testify. Though the deviation from a straight line may not be great, nevertheless a distinct power loss is experienced through friction whenever the direction of the power impulse is changed.

"That is why a straight line drive on the transmission of a motor car is very important," declares Ralf P. Dignowity, Los Angeles distributor for the Briscoe. "No matter how much power your motor may develop, it is only the power which actually reaches the point of contact between your rear wheels and the road which counts.

"If you will examine the chassis of many cars, you will notice that there is a distinct angle in the drive-shaft at the point where the center universal joint is located. That means that the power from the motor, as it is transmitted through the drive-shaft, must alter its direction through the medium of the universal joint. As a consequence there is a constant power loss in the universal, which rapidly increases with wear, because owing to the excessive friction the universal quickly wears and becomes more or less inefficient.

"The theory of the Briscoe designers was that the universal joints should properly have no other work to do than to give the needed flexibility to the shaft made necessary by the shocks of the road.

UNIVERSAL JOINT IS A HARD WORKER.

"When universal joints have stood severe endurance tests on all types of motor cars, including the heaviest trucks, for three years, the company manufacturing that universal joint has just cause to be proud of its product," says C. C. Colyear of the Colyear Motor Sales Company, distributors of the well-known Thermoid-Hardy universal joint.

"In one test a powerful racing car was driven for 10,000 miles at an average speed of 3200 revolutions per minute without loosening the joints in the slightest degree. During the war Thermoid-Hardy universal joints were applied with great success to the class AA military trucks used by the United States Army. Even the British tanks, driven by 100-horsepower Daimler engines were equipped with this make universal joint, the discs in this case being twelve inches in diameter and one inch thick."

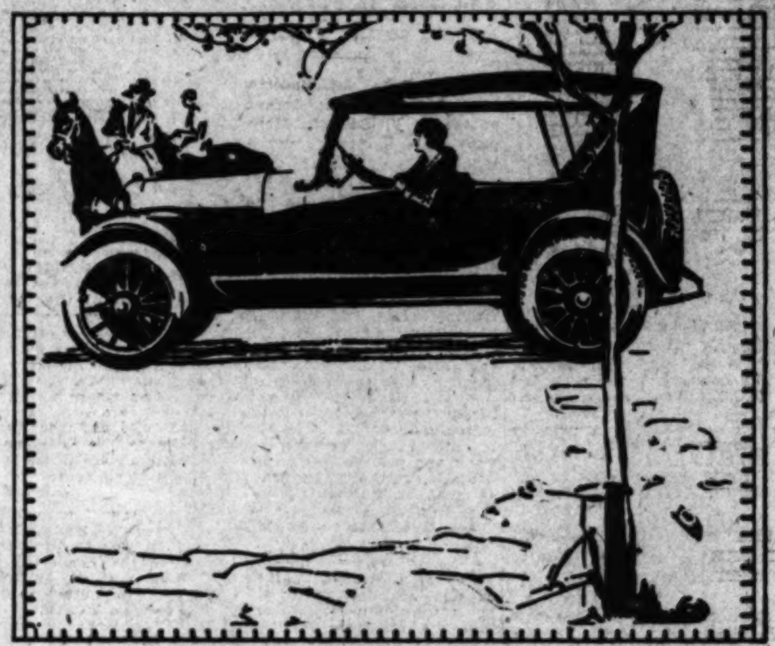
THE MOST BEAUTIFUL CAR IN AMERICA



A DEMONSTRATION of the new Paige five-passenger Glenbrook quickly proves the advantages of the modern viewpoint of engineering over what might be termed "old school mechanics."

Power and speed in abundance are needed today to guarantee adequate performance. Sudden emergencies of daily service require a motor that responds instantly to every demand.

Ride in the Glenbrook and observe how it accelerates from a speed of five to twenty-five miles an hour in nine seconds flat. Test its speed; try it out over bad roads and up steep grades.

That's the sort of demonstration that will reveal the full advantages of this distinctly new engineering development.

TRAMP TRUCK HEADED HERE.

Big Commercial Car Working Its Way to Coast.

Driver Starts With a Gallon and No Money.

Willing to do Anything to Pay the Expenses.

And now the hobo truck is with us. To demonstrate the revenue-producing power of a motor truck, Harold Shannon, an advertising man of Green Bay, Wis., is driving a truck from the Wisconsin city to the Pacific Coast "without money and without price."

QUITE A STUNT.

This innovation in truck operation is the result of a jocular declaration to some friends that he could drive a truck to the Coast and return by making it pay its own way. He agreed to start with only one gallon of gasoline and without money or articles that could be sold for money. And it was further stipulated that the truck would not haul the same kind of material more than once. If a load of coal was hauled at any time, no coal would be hauled again during the trip.

His friends doubted the practicability of the venture and called on him to make good his boast. So having selected an Oneida one-and-three-quarter-ton truck on Goodyear pneumatic truck tires, and inducing another driver to join in his revolutionary enterprise, the novel experiment was launched.

ADVERTISING.

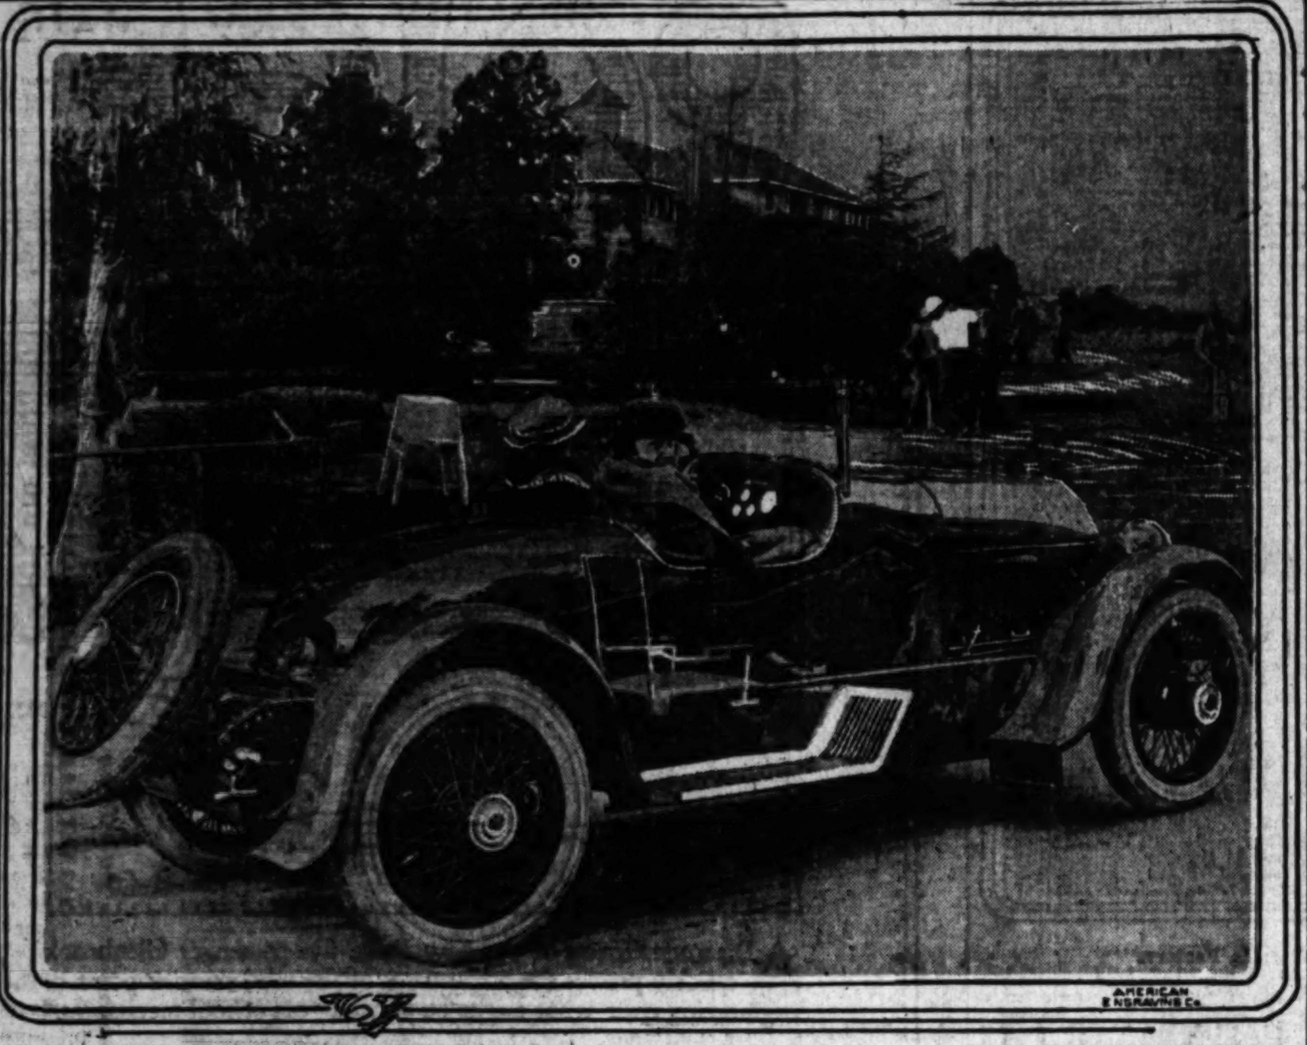
A large sign on the truck reads: "What work have you got for a tramp truck to do? To prove the earning power of a high-grade motor truck these drivers are crossing the country, making the truck pay all expenses. Ask the driver."

Traversing the States of Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Montana and Washington, along the Yellowstone trail, the truck spends a day in each important center hauling odd loads and transporting freight and passengers from one town to another. An enthusiastic welcome has greeted the tramp pneumatic-tired freighter along the line and surprisingly little difficulty has been experienced in securing sufficient transportation business to pay its own way.

SOME JOBS.

It has hauled a silo from one town to another and distributed a load of 12,000 fruit jars among the retail customers of a Fond Du Lac wholesale dealer. In Iowa two valuable race horses and thirty-five prize-winning Chester White pigs rode in the pneumatic-tired transport from the county fair back to their stalls on the farm.

No attempt is being made to complete a speedy trip to the Coast as no time limit has been set for the consummation of the truck's mission. At various points the two drivers have been entertained at dinners by enthusiastic truck dealers, but they have constantly declined to accept free gas for the tramp. Success has uniformly attended the venture and the truck is expected to reach the Coast early in November.



Of Course There Are Sport Models—and Sport Models.

But this is one of the kind that really deserves the name. It is a Don Lee custom-built sport body on a Cadillac eight chassis and the decorative features located at the camera side of the car belong to Miss Jane Bates, who, we take it, is figuring on skidding around the links of the Los Angeles Country Club in eight or ten under par.

FORMS NEW DEPARTMENT.

Rounding out one of the most highly organized and most efficient dealers' organizations in the country, Fred S. Albertson of the Albertson Motor Company, Dodge Brothers dealers in this city, announces the formation of a commercial car department, which will function solely on the sale of Dodge Brothers business cars.

A. F. Nordberg, who has long been connected with the Albertson Motor Company as successful salesman of Dodge Brothers commercial cars, has been named as sales manager. In connection with the formation of the new department, Fred S. Albertson states that: "We have long felt the need of such a department and its inception will, I am sure, find favor with the many owners and operators of our many commercial cars in the city.

"Within the scope of this department is a bureau for the solving of perplexing delivery problems, and a bureau of consultation on delivery-car advertising. There are a great many merchants in this city who have fully realized the advertising value of a nicely dressed delivery car and they are cashing in on it. This form of advertising is, perhaps, the most productive of all forms, for it gives you space, circulation and service. It advertises while it delivers.

"Every merchant realizes the necessity of maintaining a bright, clean, attractive looking place of business, but when you stop to consider, isn't

Big Demand for Really Custom Made Creations.

The insistence among buyers of the finer types of cars for custom-built bodies of individual design is a trend that is becoming more and more marked each year. Perhaps it is only natural, for a motor car, to a far greater extent even than a home, carries the impress of the owner's tastes. Out of the casual acquaintances which the dweller in a big city possesses, probably not one in ten has the slightest idea what sort of a place he lives, while eight out of ten will have a distinct idea of the car he drives.

"This modern trend toward individual design is a fine thing for the automobile industry as a whole, and unquestionably tends to raise the whole science of motor car architecture far more rapidly than would be possible in any other way," declares Shirley M. Hall of Hall-Hebbard, Southern California distributors for the Daniels. "The big manufacturer has little time or inclination to do the experimenting with new body types. He is interested in huge production of a certain standardized type.

"There is just as much fascination in creating a fine motor car as in building a fine home. The Daniels Motor Car Company has long specialized on this work, and we have worked out many special body designs to meet the desires of Southern California owners in conjunction with the expert staff of body designers at the Daniels factory."

Brakes Seldom Manage to Gain Drivers' Notice.

Though it is impossible to compute the amount of time and trouble that automobiles have saved the human race, it is surprising the consistent neglect and inattention which the average motorist gives his car. In recognition of this fact, it is very noticeable that the trend of modern motor-car design is decidedly toward decreasing the amount of care required in the operation and maintenance of a motor car, and toward making as easy as possible the maintenance work which it is impossible to eliminate.

"Take the matter of brakes, for example," says T. A. Tibbot, sales manager of the Western Motors Company, Kissel distributors. "Though it is a feature upon which the very safety of the motorist depends, he is very apt to neglect the adjustment of his brakes if they are difficult to adjust. He will take a chance rather than go to the trouble to make a difficult adjustment, and as a consequence may find himself facing the necessity of an instant stop with breaks that are inefficient.

"That was one of the reasons which influenced the Kissel engineers in making both of the Kissel brakes of the external contracting type. It is the easiest matter in the world to adjust both the Kissel service and emergency brakes by the simple turning of a thumbscrew. Because it is so easy to do, the motorist is much more apt to keep his brakes in first-class condition.

"The thermostatic control of the heat of the motor gives a proper operating temperature regardless of either any care on the part of the motorist or of varying weather conditions."

USED CARS HELP SELL NEW ONES.

PEOPLE WHO START ON SECOND HAND MACHINES SOON WANT LATE MODEL.

Who is the most successful salesman in the motor-car trade? Now don't all speak at once. This question and the admonition coupled with it was sprung at a recent conference called by a leading Los Angeles distributor, House & Meyer, Inc., and some of the high-powered talent in attendance was considerably jolted when, failing to give the correct answer themselves, they were told that as a producer of new car sales, used cars rank in a class all alone.

"Without seeking to disparage the efforts and accomplishments of any individual salesman," Elliott M. House said, "the fact remains that many of those, who, when picking out their first motor car pin their choice on a used one are among the first to realize the advantages of a new car, and the time soon comes when they decide to replace their first purchase. Used-car owners appreciate more than anyone else the many advantages of owning one of the newer cars, especially those which have been designed with present-day conditions in view, and require the minimum of gasoline, oil and tires. Economy is a determining factor in the purchase of a motor car today."

BATTERY EXPERTS LIKE TO INSPECT.

"Any battery man likes to see a motorist take an interest in his own battery by testing it himself while taking care of the other parts of his machine. However, it is not good policy for a motorist to reply solely upon his own test, as very often an experienced battery man can detect trouble that should be taken care of immediately to prevent injury or the eventual destruction of the battery.

"In testing your battery," says A. J. Tobey, president of the Western Auto Electric Corporation, and distributors of Willard storage batteries, "if you find any cell repeatedly testing 1.250 or less, you should seek the advice of a battery man, as there might be trouble in your battery."

used cars today are steady gain in value, and this market will apparently be back in a normal condition within a very few weeks. The ridiculously low prices at which many used cars were sold during the flurry are disappearing and there is every indication that second-hand sales will increase at a rapid rate.

SOME GOOD BUYS.

"It is true that today used car prices are far below any level reached for the past several years. The second-hand machines on any reputable dealer's floor are priced lower now than they have been for a long time or than they will be for some time to come. Consequently the best opportunity for a man who intends to buy a used car is right now. Already stabilizing influences are bringing these cars back to normal values and the underpriced condition that existed during the past month or so is rapidly giving way.

"November is starting out in banner month style in sales of new Studebakers, and the same is holding true in our used-car department," continued Mr. Hoffman. "October was a record breaking month in Studebaker sales in Los Angeles, and with the volume of used car business on a steady upgrade today we look to November to even better our last month's record."

MURPHY ALMOST A GOLF CHAMP.

MISSES WINNING THE TITLE BY AN EIGHT-INCH PUTT, CARLSON WINS.

The pep and ginger shown by the big Murphy organization in the sale of Lincoln motor cars is apparently sustained by devotion in spare moments to the ancient and popular game of golf.

Last week, on the picturesque Annandale links, there was a hotly contested tournament comprised entirely of entries from the southern division of the Murphy firm. Mr. Murphy himself stepped out with his head down and his teeth set and came within an eight-inch putt of winning the cup. "Dick" Carlson nosed him out with a net 83, followed by Leslie with an 88 and Claude Kern with a 90.

Harry Cline was considered the dark horse of the tournament but he was put out by the mental effort of trying to remember all the bets he had made.

Cliff Williams claims that the tournament was framed against him because he was not permitted to get away for practice. His net of 102 bears out his assertion that he was off form.

Eddie Pullen of racing fame had little or no competition for the booby. No one will ever know what his score was, since after taking a score or more shots on a couple of holes, his opponents refused flatly to spend the rest of the afternoon watching him bat balls out of bounds.

MOTOR DEPARTMENT STORE IS GROWING.

The Los Angeles Motor Supply House, Inc., has certainly come up in the world of late and has grown beyond belief in the past six months. They have remodeled their entire store to accommodate new departments. An upstairs balcony has been built to give more room and an extra room has been aded in the rear of the store to take care of an entirely new department.

The latest addition has been an ignition parts department which has been installed at the cost of over $1000. In this department motorists will find any part pertaining to magnetos, distributors and brushes. Before Mr. Derry, manager of this growing supply house, calls a halt to expansion he intends to add several more departments that will be of benefit to motorists.

EXPECTS A HUGE DEMAND.

Bringing with him a report of healthy business conditions throughout the State and predicting an unprecedented demand for motor cars within the next few months, Al G. Faulkner, Marmon distributor for California, arrived in Los Angeles last week for a conference with the executives of his local organization after an inspection tour through the territory.

The Marmon chief expressed himself as being highly pleased with the local business outlook. "The Marmon demonstration week campaign, which centered so much interest here, met with like success in all parts of the State," said Faulkner. "In all my past experience as a motor car dealer and distributor, no plan has had such a stimulating effect upon sales as the novel Marmon score card idea. This unique method of comparing Marmon performance with that of other cars, innovated by the Marmon factory, proved conclusively that the public is ready to purchase once it is convinced of the quality of the commodity it seeks, and we readily attribute the huge amount of business transacted within the last thirty days to the score card plan.

"The demonstration week campaign, however, was not confined to the boundaries of our territory, but was conducted simultaneously by Marmon distributors throughout the nation. Bulletins from the factory indicate that ours was not the only firm to enjoy most favorable results."

Faulkner plans to remain in Los Angeles several days going over matters of importance with his local heads of staff before returning to San Francisco.

SATURATION POINT—BAH!

About this time every year we hear statements as to the saturation point of the automobile industry being reached. And the reason for this usually is that at this time of the year there is a slight falling off in automobile sales.

"I have never been quite able to understand why this question arises in reference to the automobile industry, as the same conditions apply to practically every other commodity," says Maurice DeMond of the DeMond Motor Car Company, Elgin dealers.

"A man years an overcoat for a season and buys a new one, not because this overcoat is completely worn out, but because he is in a position to enjoy the newness that goes with a new purchase. In turn, the old overcoat is sold and disposed of to some one who does not mind the first year's wear.

"Is not the same thing true of automobiles? To replace the used cars that will be traded in during the coming season, not considering the man who has no automobile to trade, automobile manufacturers will be kept working full capacity. Automobiles have helped to make the United States the greatest business and financial country in the world, because they have been the means of people accomplishing more in a working day than could be accomplished otherwise."

GOOD CARS MAKE FRIENDS.

Barnum was right when he said that there was a fool born every second. But once stung, the fool gets wise and watches his step in the future. In selecting a motor car there are very few opportunities of getting stung if you do not stray too far from the beaten path to the popular makes. "When a man buys four cars of the same make in four consecutive years it is a pretty good sign that he is satisfied with the way the car served him," says A. R. Miller, president of the Los Angeles Oakland Company, "and that is exactly what C. C. Coleman of the Sunset Music Company has done.

"Coleman covers the whole southwest territory for his company and there is no town, city or hamlet into which he has not driven one of his four Oakland sixes. Fifty thousand miles a year is his average mileage covering these four years, and the stories he can relate about Oakland performance are so flattering that they could not pass as news matter. They would be termed advertising at once.

"A careful record of operating costs discloses a remarkable consistency of performance. Tires that went over 20,000 miles are not unusual, even over some of the worst of Arizona's awful flint roads. And gasoline mileage away in exces of twenty-two miles was common up to recently, when the quality of the fuel has been so substantially reduced. We can look for Coleman to come in every spring and leave his old Oakland and drive out with a new one. He has sent us unlimited numbers of people who have since become Oakland owners and good friends of his as well."

Finest Steel is Needed by Motor Makers.

Figures recently compiled by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce show that the automobile industry consumes but 4 per cent of the country's steel output, and yet, in no other industry are the demands for high-grade steel so great. And in no other industry are the intricacies of the science of metallurgy so studiously applied as is the manufacture of automobiles.

"The slow speed, internal combustion engine and the easy going, horse-drawn vehicle of a score of years ago could be constructed of ordinary steel. The combination of the internal combustion engine and the carriage into a high-speed, self-propelled vehicle necessitated light weight parts of great strength and wearing qualities," says D. Gerard Chessman, of Chessman & Co., Haynes distributors for Southern California.

"To the demand for such high-grade parts may be credited the early development of some of the most extraordinary alloy steels, such as nickle steel, chrome-nickle steel, chrome vanadium steel and uranium steel. These metals which, a few years ago, were classed as semi-rare, are now manufactured by many firms. In the construction of Haynes cars chrome vanadium steel is used extensively and so far nothing has been found that supersedes it."

BIG PRICE DROP BY NEW ARRIVAL.

WELL-KNOWN QUALITY CAR FROM THE EAST SLICES OFF QUITE A CHUNK.

The latest entry into the reduced price class is the Du Pont, the recently arrived addition to the motor-car family of Los Angeles. The reason for the reduction, according to Maurice DeMond of the DeMond Motor Car Company, is the fact that the original price was based on the initial production and that once under way the many short cuts that are worked out enabled the engineers to reduce the cost of manufacture by eliminating the number of operations required by the workmen in turning out their work.

"The price, as it is now listed, will be $3950, delivered in Los Angeles, or a reduction of $650 on either the touring car or the speedster," said DeMond. "Incidentally we had the speedster out for a trial speed run and she turned over seventy-eight miles an hour in the fourth speed, and with a little tuning up it will reel it off at 81 I am sure."

Valve-in-Head Motors Neatly Inclosed Now.

It does not take a motorist with a very long memory to recall when the valve-in-head motor was instantly recognizable by the frank exposure of most of its operating mechanism. Push-rods, rocker arms and valves were all exposed and as a consequence were subject to undue wear because of dust and grit which collected on them, and the motor was likewise apt to be noisy.

"Engineers were not long in learning the advisability of inclosing these portions of the motor, and lessened wear and noise immediately resulted," says Chase Garfield of the Troy Motor Sales Company, Nash distributors. "Too often, however, the motorist was apt to forget that the valve operating mechanism needed lubrication. Out of sight, out of mind, is quite a true proverb as far as motorists are concerned, and very frequently the rocker arm mechanism suffered seriously from lack of oil.

"When the perfected valve-in-head motor of the Nash six was designed, this was a point that the Nash engineers took into especial consideration. They, of course, inclosed every portion of the operating machanism of the valves in the head of the motor, but they likewise provided for the automatic lubrication of the rocker arms."

WHY TRAVEL BY THE RAILROADS?

VAUDEVILLE PAIR KEEP THEIR ENGAGEMENTS ALWAYS BY AUTOMOBILE.

Much is heard of the replacement of trains by motor cars in taking long trips, such as transcontinental or sight-seeing trips of any sort, and now the question arises, will the motor car replace the train in the transportation of theatrical troupes? Already many salesmen make use of their automobiles to cover their territory, and it seems most feasible that theatrical people should make their circuit in the same way.

Budwin Walsh and Ethyle Austin, at present covering a California vaudeville circuit, have tried out this plan, and it is their opinion that their Essex car has the trains totally eclipsed when it comes to making their engagements on time. "The advantage with the Essex," said Budwin Walsh, "is that it is ready for us at any time, and we never run the risk of missing the train. Of course, in advising vaudeville actors to use a motor car to cover a circuit as we do, the advice would hold only under the condition that they use a dependable motor car. We never miss an engagement, and it is not necessary to give leeway time when we leave."

MAKES PAIR OF APPOINTMENTS.

HOLLYWOOD DEALER AND ROAD REPRESENTATIVE FOR CAR NAMED.

According to an announcement made by F. S. Paden, manager of the California Motor Company, Moon distributors for Southern California, Walter R. Gillette of 5523 Hollywood Boulevard has been appointed Hollywood agent for the Moon. Gillette, it is stated, has excellent showroom and service facilities. "He knows the automobile business, is aggressive and is enthusiastic over the Moon, which in his opinion is a wonderful car at the prices quoted," said Paden.

It was further announced by Paden that H. A. Turner, well known in Coast automobile circles, has been chosen as traveling representative of the company in its Southern California territory. "Last week we sold nine new Moon cars, wholesale and retail, which is not such a bad record for this season," continued Paden. "We are receiving so many inquiries from those who are seeking Moon agencies, that at this rate the territory will soon be closed up. We have a place for almost every car as soon as it is unloaded. Undoubtedly the great price reduction, which was so widely heralded, has added to the car's popularity."

SCENIC PHOTOGRAPHER DRIVES HIS CAR HARD.

California ability to build a motor car that has the real stuff in it was proved to the natives of Oregon, Washington and Vancouver when Dick Burrud of Sunset-Burrud pictorial films used one of the Leach de luxe cars in all his travels through the forests of the Northwest, to out-of-the-way places.

To know Burrud is to appreciate what a record the Leach set up. Burrud is all temperament and not concerned much about the feelings of a motor car. "Drive it until she falls apart" is his motto and he has made a few of his mounts do the trick. "I was talking with a friend of Burrud, a man who traveled miles with him," says E. O. Holly, head of the Holly Motor Sales Company, Leach distributors, "and the tales he related of speed tests and hair-raising mountain escapades, all made for the love of his art, were enough to cause heart failure."

SPLENDID AVERAGE MADE.

One of the largest tire concerns in the country, the Miller Rubber Company, has just completed a careful canvass of the performance of its tires throughout the State of California, bringing to light remarkable records of mileage and uniformity. The results of the undertaking show that Miller cord tires are averaging 14,250 miles.

This is better than the mileage averaged by the company's factory tests—15,000 miles on cords. But mileage depends upon conditions, on size, cars, load and road and although tires are uniform they are not used under uniform conditions.

"We attribute this remarkable mileage to the rigid system of inspection enforced at the factory," says J. O. Ward, manager of the Miller Rubber Company's Los Angeles branch. If a tire comes back for adjustment, we learn the reason. If the workman is at fault, he is penalised. If the inspector overlooked a flaw he is held responsible."

"Experts in the experimental laboratories conducted by the factory recently discovered by exhaustive tests that a certain change would add 2000 miles to the life of the tires, and, despite the fact that it involved an expenditure of $1,366,000, the change was made."

Another fact brought out in the canvass is that 45 per cent of the company's dealer organization has never asked for an adjustment on a tire and the balance averages less than one out of every 200 used.

ACCELERATION A SAFEGUARD

Quick Pickup Just as Important as Good Brakes.

Both Are Present on a Well-Balanced Motor Car.

Eight-Cylinder Motor Has Unusual Advantages.

The statement has many times been made that brakes are the only safety feature upon an automobile. Rightly used, however, swift acceleration can properly be regarded as a safety factor in a car, and may not infrequently be the means of avoiding accident. Nearly every motorist who has driven for any length of time can vividly recall incidents in driving where he got out of a tight place by stepping on the throttle where his brakes could not quick acceleration and good brakes have saved him.

"The car that possesses both as well has the qualities that correspond to agility in human makeup. Every boxing fan knows what good foot-work means to a boxer in a ring contest," says Harris M. Hanshue, manager of the Los Angeles branch of the Apperson Motor Car Company.

"In driving on the open road, when passing cars, and in city traffic as well, quick acceleration is something that motorists appreciate very much indeed. It is a quality that has tended decidedly to establish in popular favor the modern multiple cylinder motor, such as the Apperson eight.

"If you recall the ancient 'one-lung' motor, you will clearly remember that quick acceleration was not one of its virtues. The eight, however, with its myriad power impulses, does possess quick response to pressure on the throttle.

"In the Apperon eight, however, this factor is further heightened by the fact that chassis and body of the car have been lightened of every possible ounce of unnecessary weight. As a consequence, you can take an Apperson eight in high gear barely moving at one mile an hour and simply stepping on the throttle, without going through the gears, increase your speed from one to forty miles an hour in twenty seconds by a stop watch."

A Beefless, Porkless Tribe.

When the Bombay Parsees, an industrious and enterprising tribe, descendants of the Persian fire worshippers, fled from their native country before the Caliphs they arrived in Western India. There they were tolerated by the Hindoo sovereigns on condition of not eating beef. When those regions afterward fell under the dominion of Mohammedan conquerors, the Parsees obtained from them a continuance of indulgence on condition of refraining from pork. What was at first obedience to authority became second nature, and the Parsees to this day abstain both from beef and pork. Though not required by their religion, the double abstinence has had time to grow into a custom of their tribe, and custom in the East is a religion.—[Harvard Classics.

AMERICAN ENGRAVING CO.

A Car Whose Performance is What Might be Expected from Its Looks.

Everybody admitted when the new LaFayette was announced that it ought to be a wonder with such a designer and such a pedigree. When it appeared everybody admitted that it surely was a wonderful looker. And now that the car is using the back of Second street as a high-gear demonstration people are beginning to realize that the performance is on a par with the lines.

SMARTNESS AND COMFORT.

How to combine comfort with rakish lines has long been a serious problem with most designers of motor-car bodies. It is easy enough to build a car of low, speedy lines, but the resulting creation is only too often one which is uncomfortable in the last degree.

"Especial interest, therefore, attaches to the LaFayette torpedo four-passenger model which we have just received," declares H. J. Coger of the Troy Motor Sales Company. "The LaFayette designers have achieved a combination of combination of comfort and outward smartness that renders the torpedo LaFayette decidedly unusual for its type of car.

"The low center of gravity of the LaFayette chassis and a trim, low, well-designed top combine to make the car actually low, and to give it the "road-hugging" appearance that is vital to the car of this type. Yet where experience with this type of car has led most folks to expect small support from the back and sides of the seats, the LaFayette torpedo on the contrary has seat backs and sides deeply upholstered and which rise higher than is customary.

"It is a fact that the LaFayette chassis was designed primarily to meet the requirements of inclosed bodies. This very fact gives the lighter open models, such as the torpedo, a briskness of acceleration and a range of power surprising to even the most experienced motorist. On either city streets or open roads the car is a most unusual performer, and demonstrations which we have made so far with the torpedo have been surprising even to us, though we have come to expect much from the car in the way of power and smoothness of performance."

SOME RULES FOR TRUCK DRIVERS.

Here is a set of rules for truck drivers on the care of solid and pneumatic truck tires, formulated by the technical department of the United States Tire Company for the benefit of truck owners:

(1.) All truck tires have a load limit. Constant slight or occasional heavy overloads shorten tire life.

(2. Distribute the load in the truck body so each tire will bear its proportionate share of the weight carried.

(3.) Overspeeding a tire has the same harmful effect as overloading. Keep truck speed within prescribed limits.

(4.) Know—don't guess—your inflation pressure. Proper inflation pressure is as important as proper loads and speeds.

(5.) Tires are limited in shock absorbing power. Careful, slow driving on rough or rutty roads will reduce tire costs.

(6.) Check your wheel alignment. Tires cannot give full service if subjected to the diagonal grind resulting from improper mounting or from misaligned wheels.

(7.) Chains and other antiskid devices injure tires. Use chains only as long as the traction wheels are likely to slip, and apply them loosely.

(8.) Tires, especially pneumatics, are cut or scraped occasionally by bent fenders or improperly built bodies, when the loaded truck travels over rough places. Carefully watch the clearance of your tires.

(9.) Neglected cuts lower tire mileage. Trim off loose slivers from the solid tires. Mend the small and repair the large cuts in pneumatics without delay.

(10.) Turn corners slowly to prevent tire strains. Apply power and brakes gradually to avoid useless spinning or locking of the wheels. Equalize the brake adjustment. These are common and avoidable tire abuses.

(11.) Running in car tracks causes tires to break down early. Avoid car tracks.

(12.) Learn the correct method of applying and dismounting pneumatic truck tires. Flap and tube should fit properly in casing, and casing fit properly on a dented, rusty or dirty rim.

(13.) To avoid unnecessary strain on pneumatics or flat spots on solids, lift the truck weight from the tires when the truck is to be idle any considerable length of time.

Yosemite Motor Stage Lines to be Amalgamated

To provide for the rapidly increasing travel to Yosemite National Park a new service has been inaugurated by the Yosemite National Park Company, Manager T. E. Farrow announced that all automobile stage lines of the Yosemite National Park Company. Manager T. E. Farrow operated under name of National Parks Transportation System of California. This transportation system will embrace the stage lines now operated between El Portal and Yosemite and between Yosemite and Mariposa Grove of Big Trees and Glacier Point, as well as the summer season stage lines between Yosemite and Hetch Hetchy and Yosemite and Lake Tahoe points via Tenaya Lake, Mono Lake and Minden.

Hazen H. Hunkins, formerly manager of the government Bureau of Service National Parks and Monuments, has been appointed traffic manager of the National Parks Transportation System, with headquarters in San Francisco. Information and ticket offices will be maintained, the year around, in San Francisco, Los Angeles and San Diego. A complete travel service will be given without charge. Through its advertising in Eastern States the Nation Parks Transportation System will establish direct contact with thousands of prospective tourists and will help them to plan their trips through the High Sierra and to the cities and resorts of California. Yosemite is the first of the nation's parks to offer a public service of this character.

ROESCH RETURNS FULL OF GINGER.

BELIVES COMING YEAR WILL BE BIGGEST IN HISTORY OF THE CONCERN.

C. A. Roesch of the Alemite Lubricating Company, returned home this week after a trip to Chicago and other eastern cities and a conference with Bassick Manufacturing Company officials and distributors of the Alemite who gathered at the factory for a sales conference.

Roesch was enthusiastic over the nation-wide success attained by the Alemite lubricating system and declared that many more of the new models of standard lines which will be shown at the 1921 automobile shows will feature the Alemite system as a part of their standard equipment.

California has surpassed all other sections of the country in the amount of business done by the Alemite distributors, according to Roesch's report, a double tribute to the merchandising methods of the local men and the keen discernment of the California motorist, who leads the nation in intelligence regarding things automotive. Roesch stopped in San Francisco for a conference with R. W. Foyle, manager of the San Francisco branch of the Alemite Distributing Company.

OPENS SALESROOM ON WEST SEVENTH.

ANOTHER DEALER MAKES A MOVE AND THEN TELLS WHY HE MAKES IT.

The latest convert to West Seventh street as a new motor row is Francis C. Davidson, who dispenses King eight cars in this territory. He made a complete survey of the field and he leased the new salesroom and service department at 1707 West Seventh street and has completely equipped them for the sale and service of King cars.

Davidson claims that the greater automobile travel westward on Seventh street is bound to make it the most popular thoroughfare from the standpoint of the dealer. He says that inasmuch as the trend of the city's development is westward and also that the people to whom the medium-priced and high-priced cars appeal have their homes in the west and Wilshire district, he can see nothing but good in the future of the street.

HOW TO REPAIR A BAD SPARK PLUG.

"When a plug goes wrong on the road," says Wallace W. Gogel of Guarantee Motor Company, distributor for the Tulsa car, "it is sometimes necessary to make a temporary repair, if possible, or at least such a repair may enable the engine to work properly until a new plug can be obtained. A broken porcelain, if the break is not too sharp an angle, will give temporary service if a thin rubber washer is inserted between the two broken parts, and the nut tightened down. This, however, will not last long, for the heat will deteriorate the rubber. Sometimes a crack in the projecting upper part of the porcelain can be covered with a wrapping of tape so that it will prevent leakage for a while."

Nonskid Tire Season is Now Upon Autoists.

"This is the season when all motorists should pay particular attention to nonskid tire equipment," observes H. A. Price, branch manager, the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company of California. "The increased dangers of fall and winter driving demand nonskid tire equipment. With the rapidly growing traffic congestion that many of our cities are experiencing, it is extremely important that motorists insure themselves against the dangers of skidding, with its attendant damage to the car of the driver and to those of other motorists.

"There is no experience that comes to a motorist, that compares with the realization that he is skidding helplessly into the curbing, with the prospect of a broken wheel, or into another car. Yet, this can be obviated by the use of proper tire equipment and the observance of the rules that make for safe driving. Skidding is usually in the direction of a right angle to the direction of the car, which accounts for the All-Weather tread design on Goodyear tires. The surfaces of the rubber blocks are turned at an angle of forty-five degrees to help to overcome skidding tendencies. This accounts for the diamond-shaped rubber projections on the tires."

SAYS THERE'S A LOT IN A NAME.

REPUTATION OF ORGANIZATION A BIG ASSISTANCE IN SELLING PRODUCT.

What's in a name? A whole lot, thinks Harry W. Harrison, head of the local organization, who are the Southern California and Arizona distributors for the Westinghouse batteries. "Nearly nine people out of every ten who purchase one of these batteries," stated Mr. Harrison, "have asked only one question in regard to the new battery, and that question is, 'is it made by the famous Westinghouse organization?'

"The unfailing dependability of Westinghouse products for many decades has given people an absolute confidence in this world-afomus concern. And, Harrison continued, if there was ever a product more than able to stand on its own merits, that hasn't the need of such wonderful prestige, it is the Westinghouse battery."

METRIC SYSTEM RUDELY JOLTED.

AUTOMOBILE DEALERS OBJECT TO ITS USE IN THE UNITED STATES.

Objection to substituting the metric system of weights and measures for the English system now in use in the United States was made by the directors of the National Automobile Dealers' Association in the regular meeting at LaSalle Hotel, Chicago, recently. It was felt that any such change would result in hopeless confusion, the loss of millions of dollars in recalibrating machinery and cause endless delay.

The directors adopted a resolution to urge upon the railroads the necessity of building box cars with wider doors and with end doors so the average box car also can be used for shipping automobile equipment.

Hupmobil

WE are frequently asked ab the methods employed in manufacture of the Hupmobile.

To make a just comparison it is n essary to place the Hupmobile o par with cars much higher pric

Simply because the more import Hupp processes are identical w processes applied to cars that co great deal more.

Engine bearings, for example, hand-scraped and hand-fitted w the greatest nicety.

Cylinders are carefully groun size, with thousandth-of-an- limits.

Precision and watchfulness gov every manufacturing operation degree that recently inspired a l ing automobile publication to w up the Hupmobile factory model.

To the owner these methods are pressed in the extremely long lif his car, its unusual economy and fact that it rarely requires costly pairs or replacements.

No Housing Problem for Bro. Grodi.

This happy-looking gentleman looks that way because he has the rent all paid on his four-wheeled bungalow which looms up in the background. He built himself a house on a Reo speed-wagon chassis and jazzes around over the country making faces at haughty landlords, rent hawgs and the like.

SOLVES HOUSING PROBLEM.

House hunting in California is one of the outdoor sports now in vogue, but there are motorists arriving in the State every day that have no fear of profiteering landlords, overflowing hotels, or lack of bungalows. One of these late arrivals is Clifford C. Grodi, who arrived recently from Munroe, Michigan. Grodi brought his wife and daughter, Velma, with him; also his house.

Mounted on the chassis of a light truck, Grodi has a complete housekeeping apartment that was his railway train, Pullman sleeper and diner en route, and is now his residence, while he is looking for a place to locate permanently in this State.

While the Grodi family are looking over California in search of a place to locate permanently, they are taking advantage of the many municipal camping grounds for motorists, and are independent of hotels, apartments or high rental bungalows. Like the snail, they take their house with them, but unlike the snail, they move as fast as the rest of the automotive traffic, when on the highways.

The party was en route between Michigan and California just three weeks, but their actual running time was 166 hours, averaging eighteen miles per hour for the 2984 miles of the journey. The latter part of the trip was over the Santa Fe trail, and some difficult road conditions were encountered, especially in Colorado, where snow and slush made the going slow and difficult. Grodi broke the road for scores of touring cars that he met along the road, and in a sense became the pilot for others whose cars would not negotiate the bad stretches of mud as easily as did the Reo speed wagon.

Grodi purchased a light Reo truck chassis, and on this built his traveling home. It is fitted out with a comfortable bed, dining table, gasoline stove, food cupboards, chiffonier and a small library table with a phonograph to while away the evening hours.

According to Grodi there are hundreds of motorists strung across the continent in a continuous line, headed West. The majority of them have equipped their cars with some sort of camping outfit so that they will be assured of living accommodations en route.

ECONOMY RECORD VERY REMARKABLE.

What is believed to be the most remarkable economy record ever hung up for a car of its class is that made by a Willys-Knight, model 20 touring car in Oklahoma City. Thirty-seven and one-half miles on one gallon of gasoline is the unusual performance with which the car is credited.

This record is regarded as all the more striking because of the fact that it was made, not in the long stretches of the open country, but in the congested business district of the city. The car, too, carried three passengers, including two official observers. Another handicap developed was a stiff head wind. The test was made under the direction of E. R. Carhart, Oklahoma distributor of the Willys-Overland Company. The car was piloted by Linn Mathewson of the Carhart Company's staff.

NAME THE HILLS AFTER CLIMBERS.

SIX STEEP INCLINES NOW KNOWN BY NAME OF CAR WHICH CONQUERED THEM.

"Marion must have been a sweet little girl to be so well remembered," said a rather frivolously minded person, for he had just found that there are no less than twenty-eight towns in the United States carrying the name of Marion. Using that logic, the Maxwell motor car must be a mighty sturdy car, according to a great many Californians who know that in Southern California alone there are not less than six hills called "Maxwell Hill."

These hills had long been famous for the abruptness of incline. They had no roads—only a couple of tracks up the side, and for that reason many drivers of automobiles of the more sportive and daring type had tried to climb to the top—but without success, until finally a Maxwell automobile made the grade and the feat was so unusual that the hill was at once christened Maxwell Hill.

This happened in Long Beach (the famous Signal Hill,) San Bernardino (Sugar Pine Hill,) Taft, Bakersfield, Pomona and San Diego.

FORD FACTORY HAS SUPERMEN.

Enormous Amount of Work is Turned Out Daily.

Some Workmen More Efficient Than Their Fellows.

List of "Best Men" Published by the Company.

"The Ford Motor Company prints a list each week of the 'best men'—that is, the workers who turn out the greatest amount and quality of work in their particular lines. These 'best men' are the bone and sinew of the Ford Motor Company. Their work in the factory is but an indication of the spirit which prevails throughout the many plants. They know that their efforts are incorporated in the splendid success which has come to the Ford Motor Company," says B. L. Graves, manager of the Los Angeles branch of this widely known company.

REAL STARS.

"Recently, a list of these 'best men' came to me with the amount of work accomplished in one day's time. The amount was simply astounding, and I know that all Ford owners will be interested to see what the 'best men' are turning out in volume, realizing every part that they turn out is required to pass a rigid inspection. I am giving here only a few records established by these wonder men. Others appeared on this list whose records are equally as good as the ones I have selected for the approval of the motoring public:

"Punch press department—Joe Sova, flatten clutch disc, 25,350 daily.

"Wood parts department—Fred Druffler, primary coil wedge-rib to thickness and cut to width, 35,000 daily.

"Fordite department—A. Culp, drill and drive four screws in steering wheel, 1500 daily.

"Rear-axle assembly department—Vern McVay, assemble hub key to rear axle, 8500 daily.

"Cold-heading department—O. Mathers, drill hole in gas tank bolt, 20,500 daily.

"Motor assembly department—F. DuPont, timing motors, 225 daily.

"What do you think of this list of 'best men'? More like 'supermen,' are they not?" concluded Mr. Graves.

TIRE DEALER HAS NEED FOR CAUTION.

NUMBER OF UNRELIABLE TIRES MAKES IT VERY EASY TO GET STUNG.

There is one fact that should be deeply rooted in the minds of all tire dealers and that is that their obligation to a customer does not end with the consummation of a sale. "The successful tire business is built upon a solid foundation of service—service that makes the customer feel thoroughly satisfied with their purchases," says Frank Price of Nelson & Price, distributor for Hartford cord tires.

"In selling tires it is necessary that a dealer place himself in the position of his customers. He must appreciate the fact that, from the customer's point of view, the purchase of a tire involves a comparatively large expenditure of money and for that reason he expects to receive full value and will be satisfied with nothing less. Unless a dealer has the ability to discern between reliable and unreliable tires, he can safeguard his interests only by limiting his stock to a few brands of admittedly high quality. If he does this, customer complaints will be few and far between."

MORE GOOD ROADS ARE COMING SOON.

"Good roads inevitably follow the increased use of the motor car," declares Glenn R. Keith, of the Standard Steel Automotive Corporation, local distributors for the Standard eight. "One of the best instances of this which I have seen in some time, is the result of the meeting held this week in Hemet, looking toward the improvement of the road between that town and the Imperial Valley.

"Only two months ago we sold a couple of Standard eight cars to men who established a stage service between Hemet and Brawley, connecting with a stage line which already existed between Los Angeles and Hemet. The advantage of possessing a through line of transportation was so instantly evident that agitation looking toward permanent improvement of the route began at once. As a result of a meeting held in Hemet last week, $150,000 is to be spent on this road in the very near future, and another main thoroughfare will be added to the list of Southern California roads."

UNIQUE SPRINGS ARE GREAT HELP.

ONLY ONE CAR BUILT IN THIS COUNTRY EQUIPPED IN THIS MANNER.

In speaking of the many exclusive features found in the construction of the leading motor cars of today, W. D. Wright, of the Wright Motor Company, exclusive distributors of the Roamer in Southern California, says that the Barley Motor Car Company of Kalamazoo, Mich., manufacturers of the Roamer, marked an epoch in riding comfort when they perfected the double cantilever spring suspension which is found only in Roamer cars.

Mr. Wright in explaining the advantages of this exclusive feature of the Roamer went into detail in the construction and operation of the springs as follows: Two cantilever springs are used on each side, attached to the frame on one end, the other end connection on the brake drum. One spring is fastened on the brake drum above the axle, and the other below. The lower spring is fastened to the road while the upper one controls the rebound and keeps the wheel from leaving the road, which has a noticeable effect on the ease of controlling the car. The two springs operate independently of each other and take the tension at different times.

SOME BATTERIES CAN COME BACK.

Automobile storage batteries—some of them, at least—have a surprisingly quick come-back after having been drawn upon almost to the point of exhaustion. This phenomenon was successfully explained by H. A. Rose, expert battery man of the Western Electric Company, distributors of the Titan battery. Mr. Rose says:

"Suppose, for example, that a battery, after discharging heavily, has barely enough energy left to make a feeble attempt to turn the motor over. Or, perhaps, the starter will not respond at all to the pressure of the starting button. Following these unsuccessful attempts just let the battery take a short rest of fifteen or twenty minutes. The short rest will afford time for the diffusion of the electrolyte within the battery, so that the energized particles have been distributed so as to work to better advantage."

VICTORIA (B. C.)—Mrs. William Chamberlain, wife of a rancher near Invermere, on the Columbia River, proved last season that women can be successful trappers. She cleared $1800 on furs with sixty traps. As pioneer in a new feminine industry she set an example that will be followed by many women throughout British Columbia this fall. She is preparing to trap on a larger scale. Her trap lines will be set with 200 traps when the season opens in November.

When last season ended her season's catch comprised 700 muskrats and many weasels, mink, skunks and red foxes.—[New York Sun.

Ford

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

The Garden Farmer will find the Ford Model T One Ton Truck an especially valuable factor in his business because of the flexibility as well as the reliability of the service which can always be depended upon to be given by this splendid truck. The worm-drive of manganese bronze carries all the power of the motor to driving the truck and there are combined in larger and heavier form all the elements which have made the Ford Model T Car the greatest motor car in the world in point of service. The Ford Truck with its worm-drive is most economical in operation and maintenance. There is very little, if anything, to get out of order at any time; there is the simplicity in control; there is the convenience in the flexibility of the car, it will turn in a circle of forty-eight feet; it accommodates itself to narrow alleys, and it "stands the gaff" of hard work day after day, and month after month, to the great satisfaction of the owner. There is hardly a line of business activity where the Ford One Ton Truck is not really a necessity. On the farm, or in the factory, with the railroad, it is solving the economic delivery of merchandise and produce better than any other truck we know of. Any of the Dealers mentioned below will be glad to discuss the matter further with you, take your order, and see that you get delivery as promptly as possible.

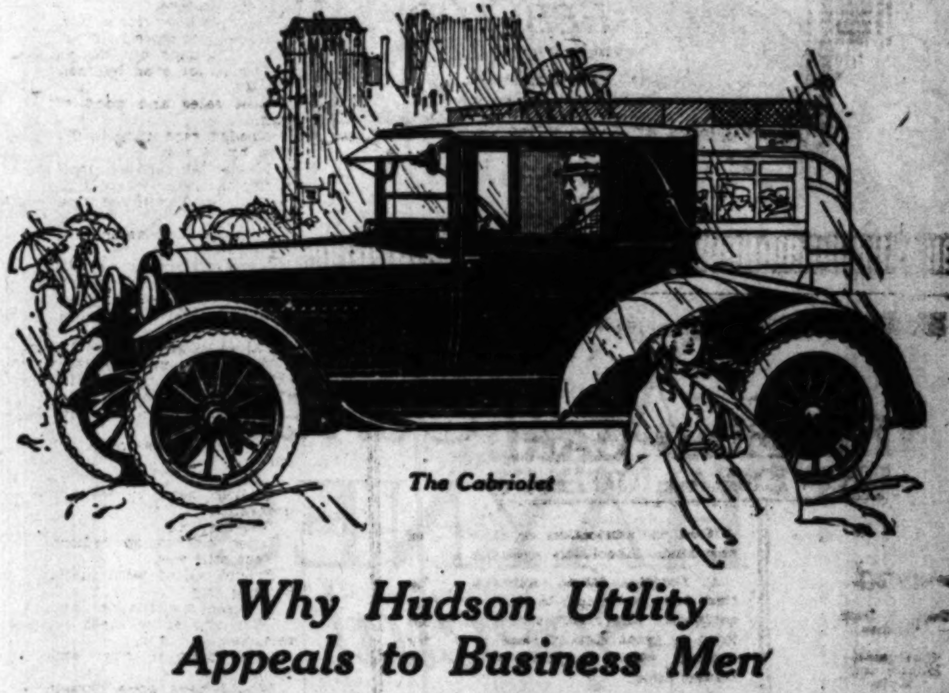
The Car of a thousand Speeds



The Cabriolet

Why Hudson Utility Appeals to Business Men

No Hudson owner forgets this fact in his appreciation of Super-Six economy.

He knows Hudson is the supreme performance type among all the world's cars. Its stock car records in speed, hill-climbing, acceleration and endurance have never been matched.

Engineers who aim at such performance distinction usually ignore such elements of economy as fuel, oil and tire mileage.

But Hudson's notable speed, its 72% added power, and 80% greater efficiency means no extra cost in its operation.

Its speed and power do not come from great motor size and high fuel consumption. The exclusive Super-Six principle gets 76 H. P., from a light, conventional motor that formerly developed 42 H. P. at maximum.

Vibration that wasted about half the power of the conventional type is almost eliminated by this type. Nearer approach does not seem possible.

That means that even extraordinary calls impose no strain or abuse on Hudson. It accounts for the way Hudsons retain new car ability when they have grown old in point of years and use. It removes the costly burden and annoyance of frequent repairs and service attention.

With all the other desirable things men find in Hudson, this accounts also for the additional triumph of true economy.

TRACTORS TO REMOVE SNOW.

New York City Purchases a Flock of Them.

To Push Snow Plows Through Streets of City.

Fire Hazard Will Thus be Neatly Avoided.

Heavy blizzards last winter brought traffic to a standstill in New York and throughout the Eastern and Northern States; heavy snowfalls tide up business completely for days. Man power, shovelers, teams, wagons and trucks were all tried, but these methods proved inadequate to clear the streets.

COSTLY BUSINESS.

The city of New York alone spent over six million dollars trying to keep the streets clear, not only for general traffic, but for the general safety. Officials realized the extreme danger from fire, particularly in the congested district, because the accumulated snow and ice on the streets practically rendered helpless the city fire-fighting equipment. By good fortune no great fires accured during this period, but the city fire department, street cleaning and other officials appreciated as they never had before, the extreme importance of being equipped and prepared to quickly dispose of snowfalls before the snow became packed and frozen into solid ice as was the case last winter.

MADE FOR THE JOB.

Realizing that a fleet of "Caterpillar" tractors equipped with proper snow plows would solve this problem, the Holt Manufacturing Company brought these machines immediately before the serious consideration of New York City officials. The project was thoroughly investigated by engineers connected with the department of street cleaning and the fire departments, also the Mayor and other city officials, and appropriations were made for extensive purchases of this class of equipment.

All makes and types of tractors were considered, and while preliminary tests with snow were impossible, the street cleaning department during the summer, conducted official tests with various tractors equipped with snow plows, pushing sand which was in fact more difficult to handle than snow. The "Caterpillar" tractor met every requirement in these tests, and even exceeded the city's expectations.

GETS THE CONTRACT.

Bids were called for covering tractors of this size for the severe snow removal work. Smaller equipment was suitable for limited secondary operations. Although the "Caterpillar" tractor was necessarily higher in price than other machines proposed for this work, the city engineers unanimously selected the "Caterpillar" tractor on the basis of its particular fitness for this work, its military and commercial record for performance, as well as the stability and the facilities of the manufacturers.

AMERICAN ENGRAVING

He Knows About Troubles, and Fixing 'Em.

Here we have Teddy Tetzlaff, one-time demon Lozier and Fiat racing pilot, who is now laying particular stress on service to Stephens Salient Six owners.

TEDDY GIVES SERVICE.

Some people might call it sport to burn the breeze at ninety miles an hour on a speedway, while others might take an entirely different view of the matter. But regardless of their personal opinion of the goddess of chance, everyone will agree that the intrepid speed merchant comes to a very wide and practical understanding of the mechanism of an automobile. Teddy Tetzlaff, who has furnished many a thrill on the track, acquired his knowledge of the motor car in this hazardous profession, and it is of much interest to motorists to know that Teddy's mechanical skill is now at their service.

A call at Tetzlaff's service station on South Hope street is sufficient proof that he is taking to commercial pursuits as seriously as he did to the racing game. Every thing in the way of modern machinery has been installed to make for good workmanship, and the mechanics employed are under Mr. Tetzlaff's personal supervision. A very progressive step has been taken in providing night service, for with shifts working every hour of the twenty-four, the owner receives his car in a very much shorter time than if day service only were maintained.

Of particular interest to Stephens Salient Six owners is the announcement that Mr. Tetzlaff is now cooperating with the White Auto Company in rendering service for this popular six. A complete stock of spare parts will be kept. It will be a great satisfaction to Stephens owners to know that such expert mechanical attention is at their disposal.

FOUNTAIN BRUSHES FOR SHOES.

A modern adaptation of an ancient custom is seen when the Japanese business man of today enters one of the many office buildings in Tokyo now equipped with the so-called fountain brushes, as shown in the October Popular Mechanics Magazine. A century ago he would have removed his primitive footgear; but now he does nothing of the sort. As his American shoes are not so easily slipped off, he simply washes them. This he accomplishes by using a long-handled brush, the bristles of which are connected by a rubber tube to a small galvanized-iron tank. The water is admitted to the brush as the user presses the valve in the handle.

JACK'S NARROW ESCAPE.

When John McCormack was singing grand opera as Signor Foli, some years ago, he had on one occasion to sing from a stage balcony which was hardly strong enough to support so heavy a man. The stage manager told off two assistants to hold it up from beneath, but before Signor Foli was more than half through one of the men below said, "Be jabers, Moike, the Oitalian is moighty heavy."

"Let's dhrop him, Pat; he's only an Oitalian, after all."

Voice of Signor Foli above: "Will ye, ye divils, will ye?"

"Tare an' hounds, Pat, but he's an Oirishman; hould him up for the loife of yez!"—[Boston Transcript.

INSPECTION IS SPLENDID IDEA.

Traveling Mechanic Watches All the Cars.

And Helps Owners Keep Them in Good Shape.

One Truck Runs Four Years for Forty Bucks.

"When a truck has been run constantly day in and day out for four and one-half years at a total expense of repairs not exceeding $40 in all that period it can truly be said to have made good," says General Sales Manager Mallory of the Moreland Motor Truck Company.

"For years," he continued, "we have conducted a traveling inspection system with thoroughly competent men. They are constantly covering our territory, calling upon owners, looking over their equipment, studying their conditions and methods of operation and always ready to make helpful suggestions or be of assistance in any way.

WATCH TRUCKS.

"We believe that it is essential not only to sell a truck, but to keep it sold, and this can only be done, first by having a good product and then by seeing that it is kept up to its proper form. Our interest does not cease with the sale. Future stable business depends, we believe, upon the satisfaction of the buyer, which in turn depends upon the successful operation of his truck. This we try in every way to help him secure.

"Recently we have paid more than the usual attention to this feature of what we consider is real service, and as a result are being flooded with letters containing many interesting bits of information and evidences of satisfaction on the part of our owners. We are learning a whole lot as to what our trucks are actually doing in service.

AN EXAMPLE.

"This case I have mentioned is one in point. The California Sauce and Pickle Company of Oakland, writes: 'We purchased our one and one-half-ton truck from you four years ago last July. We have been using this truck continually and have had little or no trouble or expense aside from tires, our expense for repairs not exceeding $40. We are so well pleased with this truck that we would, under no consideration, consider the purchase of any other. We also wish to compliment Mr. Daley on the prompt attention we have received at your service station for what little service we have called for."

NOT MUCH WASTE.

Machines That Make For Economy Are Now in General Use.

Recovery of valuable portions of materials formerly wasted is more and more a feature of American industrial economy. For many years there has been in use in many of the large engineering works a centrifugal separating machine which removes the oil from iron and steel turnings or borings and thus permits it to be used over again. This idea which underlies this machine has now been carried farther and applied to the removal of the dust and dirt which unavoidably collects in oil used in the lubricating systems of marine and other large engines. The new machine is very similar in form and operates on the same principle as the now well-known centrifugal cream separator. The foul oil is led continuously into the machine through a strainer which catches any gross particles precisely as milk is fed into the cream separator. The purified oil escapes continuously, while the dust and dirt collect on the inner surface of the separating drum. Provision is made by which the attendant can instantly tell when the machine is choked with the deposited impurities.—[Exchange.

Talked Like a Tailor.

The members of the choir were practicing the well-known anthem, "As the Heart Pants After the Water Brooks."

The rendering of the open stanzas was apparently not quite to the satisfaction of the gentleman who wielded the baton.

He considered it necessary, therefore, to tender some advice to the tenors, and caused great consternation and not a little embarrassment among his little flock by the following announcement.

"Gentlemen, your expression is simply splendid, but the time is very poor—really, your pants are far too long."—[London Ideas.

Telling Mary All About It.

When it comes to picking out a soft job for his declining years the Auto Ed. is going to choose some such occupation as this—we'd tell Mary Miles Minter anything if she'd look as interested as this. Hal Baker of the Western Auto Supply is explaining about Weed chains. Pretty soft for Hal.

SHOWS USES OF CHAINS.

Motion picture stars are noted for setting the place in motor creations, but they also have the reputation of being among the first to adopt accessories which safeguard their cars from injury.

The Realart star, Mary Miles Minter, is a firm believer in doing everything in her power to prevent accidents, and has all the latest devices on her machine. Until very recently, however, she has been of the opinion that, "If a car is going to skid, nothing will prevent it, and all one can do is to pray to luck." And although she uses non-skid tires, she hasn't a world of confidence in them.

Now, a short while ago, Hal Baker, the young sales manager of the Western Auto Supply Agency, heard of her opinion, which, after all, is the thought in most motorists' mind, and decided to prove to her the value of Weed-chains. Hal had a mighty hard time getting an interview, as Miss Minter has recently been busy every minute on her next picture with Realart, "All Soul's Eve." Hal is a persistent fellow, and after the rain last week decided that it was the logical time to prove to Miss Minter the real value of chains.

He pointed out to her that the large number of accidents could be traced in a large majority of cases to rains and heavy fogs. Miss Minter being a real motor fan, was not long in being convinced of the necessity of chains on wet, slippery pavements. He also demonstrated that chains were not so hard to put on if you went about it correctly.

GREEN COVERS THE RIVER.

The search for the convenient ways of transportation by which the products of the Sudan may reach the outer world attracts attention to a remarkable phenomenon of vegetable life on some of the head waters and tributaries of the Nile. This consists of enormous growths of papyrus and other plants completely covering the streams and forming carpets of vegetation 2 or 3 feet thick, beneath which flows the water. Navigation by small boats is, of course, prevented by this obstruction, which is in places supplemented by vines and overhanging plants that arch the streams from bank to bank. Heavy floods occasionally sweep away the accumulations of plants, but they are quickly reformed.—[New York Evening Post.

1921 MODEL HITS TOWN.

Exhibiting unusual distinction of body design and finish, the first of the 1921 Owen Magnetic models to be received from the Owen factory went on display last week at the Alvarado-street salesrooms of the Gaffney Motor Sales Company. Both the sedan models and the four-passenger open type, which were included in the first shipment, possess body designs patterned after special custom-built jobs built for New York customers by the Blue Ribbon Body Works, and they harmonize especially well with the distinctive lines of the Owen hood. Deeply beveled windows and sharp angles, rather than curves, give the sedan bodies decided individuality.

Mechanically, the only change of note in the new cars lies in a perfected type of controller which renders impossible any damage to the mechanism, no matter how carelessly the control level on the steering wheel is operated. The well-known Owen Magnetic transmission, of course, features the new cars in the same form in which it has been used for virtually six years.

"A local Owen Magnetic owner, John Wickmann, brought his car in the other day," said J. W. Gaffney last week. "It was the one hundred and seventeenth car built by the Owen company and is the third car with the Owen type of transmission which Wickmann has owned. The first was an experimental car, built before the Owen was placed upon the market. The transmission on these earliest models are still functioning perfectly, proving our assertion that there is less 'wear out' to the magnetic type of transmission than to any other type."

F. I. Kermode, formerly associated with the Owen factory sales force in Cleveland, O., has joined the selling organization of the Gaffney company and a vigorous sales campaign is planned by the local Owen distributors.

TRUCK MAKES SPLENDID RUN.

Averages 39 Miles Per Hour for Full Day.

No Tire-Changes Necessary on the Trial.

Entire Mileage is Rolled Up Without a Stop.

A splendid observation of the manner in which the insertion of gum between the plies in truck tire treads reduced friction resulting from hard usage was made during a recent truck test run on the Indianapolis motor speedway.

Experts from the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company of Akron, O., witnessed the test run, which was made by a Duplex truck, to study the effect of the punishment to the Firestone tires with which the machine was equipped.

The truck employed in the test run tore around the speedway at an average rate of thirty-nine miles an hour for a continuous twenty-four-hour period. The machine itself weighed 4300 pounds and carried a 3200-pound load. During the uninterrupted drive it covered 935 miles, to which might be added 150 miles in preliminary tests, or a total of 1085 miles, and at the conclusion of its performance, without stopping, roared over one lap of the track in 3m. 36 2-5s., a speed of 44.5 miles per hour.

The average weight on each tire was 1570 pounds for the front, and 2562 on the rear. In order to reduce the liability of heat generation to a minimum, the tires were inflated to 100-pound pressure. The slight temporary increase indicated not only the value of gum between tread plies, but showed also that higher pressures than ordinarily recommended are an aid in preventing heat generation.

The appearance of the tires at the finish of the gruelling run was entirely satisfactory. The 35x5 ribbed Firestone pneumatic giant cords showed the same type of wear as is noted on racing tires, the cross wear at an angle with the tread caused by the turning of corners in the same direction. There was no indication whatever of wear on the 38x7 non-skid rear tires, which might easily have been cleaned up and returned to stock.

The remarkable test was a real achievement for the tires and the truck, because the speedway was in poor condition, and was no better than ordinary hard surfaced roads. On certain stretches it was rougher than many of the better roads to be found throughout the country.

The Duplex, which made the run, was a stock truck, the only deviation from stock being the mounting of four gasoline drums on the body. The drums were connected with the carburetor to furnish sufficient gasoline for the entire run, and the tank ordinarily used for gasoline was converted into an oil tank.

The test run was begun at 1:57 p.m., September 30, and continued to 1:57 p.m., October 1.

TRAVEL IN PERFECT COMFORT DESPITE RAIN, SNOW AND STORMS.

Among the last of the transcontinental motorists to travel to California this season was J. H. Rowell of St. Louis, who arrived last week with his sister Gertrude and their mother, Mrs. R. M. Rowell.

The party traveled in a Cadillac sedan and followed the Santa Fe trail practically all the way from Kansas City. They encountered three snow storms, none of which were severe enough to delay them, but it was the opinion of Rowell that the roads will become impassable within a very short time. Miss Rowell drove fully half the way and was enthusiastic over the experience.

"This trip convinced me," said the St. Louis girl, "of the practicability of a closed car for transcontinental touring. Although we encountered some rain, several flurries of snow and a severe wind storm, we traveled in perfect comfort every mile of the way. We would pass motorists bundled in heavy coats with wind whipping through the car, while we would be riding along not conscious of the unpleasant weather without. Transcontinental travel was very light and we did not meet a great many cars coming to California. The roads are good and bad, but it was certainly a pleasure when we came over the mountains and were greeted by the smooth California highways."

"In California you can travel 365 days in the year, with hundreds of miles of wonderful highway, going to all parts of the State. I certainly can appreciate why everyone back East hopes some day to live in California.

"In regard to our trip across the continent, we did not have one unpleasant experience, and it was certainly a wonderful demonstration of the reliability and enduring powers of the modern motor car. My brother and I and mother, too, for that matter, are enthusiastic motorists and we expect to drive our Cadillac to all parts of California during the next three months."

NEW WAY TO SELL LAND.

Maine real estate agents have discovered a new way to dispose of undesirable property. They simply drop a hint that a lot of real whisky is concealed somewhere about the place, and that usually settles it.

On one of the roads leading out of Bangor is a rocky, abandoned farm—forty acres of land that no man would take as a gift. A small fortune has been expended in advertising this place for sale, but in vain. Then along came a broker with ideas, and he sold the farm at a pretty good price. This broker admitted that the place was run out, and that the buildings were wrecks. But he casually remarked:

"The man who owns this place is in jail, serving a sentence for selling rum. He won't be out for a month or two yet. They say that just before the lid was banged on this fellow bought a big stock of whisky, but the Sheriff never has been able to find any of it. The stuff couldn't have been sold, for it didn't arrive in Bangor until about a week before the lid went on. I guess there is some truth in the story that he carted it out here and buried it on this farm. Anyway, he made a lot of night trips out here about that time. Better have spent the price of that liquor fixing up these buildings."

The farm was sold next day.—[New York World.

OPENS QUARTERS FOR NEW LUTHY BATTERY.

Lack of a suitable location in the downtown business district of Los Angeles has forced the Luthy Southwest Battery Corporation to open temporary headquarters at 216 North Western avenue, according to an announcement made yesterday by Philip R. Randolph, general manager of the company, who has begun preparations for one of the largest sales campaigns in the automobile battery business.

The company, of which Mr. Randolph is the motive power, last week signed a contract with the Luthy factories for the entire territory of Southern California, and already distributors are being chosen throughout Los Angeles and the other large cities.

THE BARTLETT PEAR.

Next comes the Bartlett mansion, built by Capt. Thomas Brewer, who perished, as is supposed, about the year 1812 while on a voyage from the Cape of Good Hope to Sumatra. From 1822 to 1860, the year of his death, the house was the home of Enoch Bartlett, a well-known and highly esteemed citizen.

Two of the original Bartlett pear trees imported by Capt. Brewer are still (1878) in bearing here. This pear, whose size, beauty and excellence entitle it to the high estimation in which it is everywhere held, originated about 1770 in England, where it was known as "William's Bonchretien." When imported its name was lost, and, having been cultivated and disseminated by Mr. Bartlett, became so universally known as the Bartlett pear that it was found impossible to restore its old name.—[Francis S. Drake's "History of Roxbury."

Good Recipe.

An Altoona girl, says the Tribune, sent 50 cents to a Chicago advertiser for a recipe to whiten and soften the hands. She received the following formula: "Soak them three times a day in dishwater, while your mother rests."

BENJAMIN KAUFMAN, HERO.

The world probably would not recognize the name of Benjamin Kaufman, the traveling cigar salesman, as that of one of America's greatest heroes. And yet, Sergeant Kaufman, of Co. K, Three Hundred and Eighth Infantry, Seventy-seventh Division, wrote a lively little chapter in the war all by himself on October 4, on the edge of the Argonne forest.

His exploit was similar to that of Sergeant Gregory. When an enemy machine gun held up the advance, Kaufman led a patrol which set out to silence it. He became separated from his patrol, and a machine-gun bullet shattered his right arm. He did not stop but began tossing grenades with his left arm. Then he charged the enemy position, with an empty pistol, scattered the crew and brought the gun and one prisoner back to a dressing-station.

Sergeant Kaufman's first after-the-war job was managing a Wall street messenger service. Then, with his brother, he opened a cigar store in Brooklyn, and now he divides his time between this store and traveling through Eastern States with his sample case. Now and again he is hailed by a war veteran, who does know what his lapel rosette stands for, but over most of his route he is still a hero incognito. For a hero, unlike a good cigar, is not recognizable by the wrapper and the band.—[American Legion Weekly.

TRAP GUN AND ROD

BY TOM MARSHALL

[This is the fifty-seventh of a series of articles dealing with trapshooting, hunting and fishing by Capt. Tom Marshall, a noted authority on the great out-of-doors.]

We taught our English "kin folks" an object lesson. Sent abroad in 1901 by the American people to contest in the international trapshooting races, we brought back the bacon. Ten men constituted a team, 100 targets for each man, in a series of five events, shot in London, Eng., on consecutive days; winners of first three to be declared international champions, with a side purse of $10,000. The English were permitted to fire two shots at every target, Americans one. We had won the first two races of the series and were confident of annexing the third, putting us over the top should the third plum chance to fall in our basket. Morning of the third race, feeling sure of winning, we purchased a British Jack the same size of Old Glory, which always flew from the bow of our coach.

Our English competitors were clever, congenial chaps, good sports and easy losers. Any tyro can be a graceful winner. Little regret would have prevailed with our team had we honestly lost one race to them, feeling certain of our ultimate success. Scores ran low on the score board, but were marvelously high based on conditions and environments.

No ten men on earth could have defeated the All-Americans at that time. The English team, in the third race, broke 749 targets; Americans, 853. A substantial margin to our credit of 104 targets. In every race we had increased our leads. The first race by sixty-five; second, eighty-four, and third, 104. The London papers said, "If the Boers had wings and would stage a flight over the American team, the war would be brought to a sudden close." We were made to feel and were treated like real champions. We had demonstrated, our competitors for honors conceded, the unusual efficiency of American guns and ammunition, coupled with our acquired target shooting skill. Shooters are made, not born.

A uniform code of rules, governing trapshooting in all countries should be formulated and adopted. Our races abroad demonstrated the fallacy of sacrificing accuracy to speed, their unsuccessful effort to fire two shots at single targets, when concentration and one shot accurately placed were logical. International contests, Olympic games events, team or tournament work would be of greater universal interest if preliminary practice and final events were staged under the same rules and conditions. In our last race every man shot his score with confidence; determination supplanted hilarity; no change in facial expression was noticeable even though we were shooting in the world's greatest event, with a seductive purse of $10,000 hung up on the side. Have you ever shot or contested in any line of sport for big money? A combination feeling of seminervousness and overanxiety to win will possess you, eliminated only by past experience and self-confidence. You must depend upon self and your individual efforts. A confidence best acquired by participating experience in individual race shooting. Every man on the All-American team was an individual race contestant and had shot for his own real money. With us there was no absence of either personal or team confidence.

Question: Is the interest in trapshooting increasing? How many gun clubs are now in active operation in the United States? How are they distributed?

FRANK DENNING.

Canton, O.

Answer: An estimate was made a short time since, based upon authentic data returned, by one of the ammunition companies. The United States has 3961 gun clubs. Pennsylvania leads with 492, New York second with 344, Illinois third with 287, Iowa, 220; Ohio, 187; Minnesota, 187; New Jersey, 168; Wisconsin, 164; Missouri, 142; balance of the clubs are scattered through every State where a gun is owned. In Pennsylvania over 400,000 men take out a hunting license, in New York 184,000; New Jersey, 95,714; Illinois, 152,126; Wisconsin, 150,035; Ohio, 150,622; Washington, 124,691; California, 160,140. Over four million men annually take out hunting and fishing licenses in the United States and equally as many more are interested in sports afield, who do not expect to get an opportunity to hunt during the season and do not purchase a license. No sport in the world has one-half as many devotees as shooting and fishing.

Q.: I hear they are fishing after dark in some localities. How is it done and have they been having any luck?

PETER D. SHOGRIN,

Los Angeles, Cal.

A.: Right you are. In many localities they have been casting at night with exceptional success. When darkness has spread its mantle over the lakes and bayous, bass venture out from their lairs in the weed beds, in search of food, which they voraciously attack when offered. You must know the grounds. It is unnecessary to cast so near weed beds—bass are out skirmishing. They are less wary and more ready to attack a lure. In my judgment, much of the pleasure of nature study is eliminated with curtailed vision.

SEEKING UNIFORM LAW.

Want to Eliminate Divergent Rules Which Are Made by Various Counties.

At Sacramento, November 22, will be held a conference, the results of which will be of vital interest to every owner, operator and user of motor vehicles. The conference has been called by Supt. Charles J. Chenn, of the Motor Vehicle Department, to take under consideration a revision of the California Motor Vehicle Act, as amended in 1919.

GOING NORTH.

Representatives of the automotive industry have been invited to participate in this conference, and among those who will attend from Los Angeles will be Dave F. Smith, attorney for the Motor Car Dealers' Association; Roy H. Compton, representing the Mack-International Motor Truck Corporation, distributors for Mack trucks, and D. R. Faries, counsel for the Automobile Club of Southern California.

It will be necessary that all concerned in the operation of motor vehicles and the maintenance of highways make their views coincide in such a way that the result will be absolutely equitable. The Motor Vehicle Department represents the entire California public, and according to an expression by Supt. Chenu, is desirous of having every factor that might tend toward improvement of this State's vehicle laws co-ordinated. The present motor vehicle act is antiquated in a good many particulars, and in others, is impracticable of enforcement. The conference, therefore, will be chiefly in the nature of a get together meeting so that a digest of the new act may be compiled for presentation at the next session of the State Legislature.

CHIEF DESIRE.

The chief desire of the motor truck interests of California and probably the entire citizenry is for a uniform low. At this time, with the exception of application to speed regulations, the boards of supervisors of every county and other governing boards with jurisdiction over roads and highways have the authority to enact almost any sort of an ordinance, the only stipulation being that such ordinances do not conflict with the State law.

This results in a multiplicity of ordinances in almost every county from border to border of the State, and consequently it is practically impossible for any owner or operator of a motor vehicle, trying as hard as he can, to comply with all requirements and regulations. The removal of these various conflicting ordinances in favor of one dominating State law, is believed to be the desire of everyone.

OUTLINED NOW.

It has been suggested that as a tentative draft for the California law, the "Uniform Vehicle Law" be adopted as an outline, modifications being made to meet California requirements. This "Uniform Vehicle Law" was drawn by a committee representing the American Association of State Highway Officials, Highway Industries Association, National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, and the American Automobile Association. Upon the belief of the committee, the best interests of the country would be served by its adoption as a whole, or as much of its content as possible. The committee urges that it is especially important that the provisions of speed, height, weight, the rules of the road, etc., be adopted so that when a driver or operator becomes familiar with the traffic laws of his own State he will be familiar with those of the other States also.

It is provided in the "Uniform Law," the same as in the existing California law, that when it is necessary to transport by motor truck a gross weight in excess of that specified it can be done only by special permission, being granted in writing. An example of the application of such a provision was presented recently when it became necessary for Sullivan Brothers to transport two exceedingly heavy boilers from Los Angeles to the property of the Ridge Oil Company, four miles from Brea.

It was urgent that these boilers be moved in the least possible time and Sullivan Brothers loaded one on their five-ton Mack truck and the other on a trailer. The thirty miles was made in two hours. Had it been necessary to depend upon the railroad for this transportation, several days' time would have been lost. The boilers would have had to be transported to the freight car, then hauled to Brea, and again put upon a truck and taken to the oil field. By using the truck exclusively, the entire operation was cut to half a day's work.

PENCILS SHOW CHARACTER.

Lead pencils will reveal the characters of their owners quite faithfully. You can be pretty certain, for instance, that an artistic man's pencil will have a long, tapering point, while the individual who takes care not to cut away more wood than is absolutely necessary in nearly always of an economical turn of mind.

Some people chew their pencils, and thereby show that they are unusually cautious, always thinking well over any plan of action before committing themselves to it. When they've anything to write, for example, they sit nibbling the wood while reflecting upon what they had better put down.

Have you ever met the man who seems to carry nothing but short stubs, and never by any chance produces a complete stick of pencil? He's a good-natured chap — not mean, as one might imagine. Friends used to borrow his pencil and not return it; so he decided to carry stubs.—[Boston Post.

Anyone from the East desiring to visit both cities should always visit San Francisco first, as should they come here first it is doubtful if they would ever take the trouble of going north.

Dr. J. A. Drouillard left this week on a trip in which he expects to take in the principal cities in most of the Southern States. His first stop will be San Antonio, Tex.

E. Erickson, a strong player from Portland, Or., is spending the winter here.

Samuel Levine, present Massachusetts State champion, and W. E. Davis have signed to play a forty-game match for the State title and a $100 prize.

CONCERNING HYDROMETERS

In an article which appeared last week in The Times on November 7th by Mr. A. J. Tobey, president of the Western Auto Electric Corporation, there was a somewhat misleading statement about hydrometer readings, and Mr. Tobey wishes at this time to correct the error.

The article stated: "The motorist should see to it that the charge is kept around the 1,250 mark, but that it should vary up and down around that point, for if it stays above 1,250 it is a sign that the battery is overcharging and overcharging will ruin any battery in short notice." The article should have read: "The motorist should see to it that the charge varies from 1.250 to 1.300; if it remains at 1.300, it is a sign that the battery is overcharging and overcharging will ruin any battery in short notice."

The idea is that the charge should vary, not getting too high or too low, and as long as it varies between the 1.250 and 1.300 mark, one is pretty safe in feeling that their battery is in good shape, but if the reading shows much below 1.250 or remains at 1.300, then some precaution should be made.

TILLAMOOK AND ITS CHEESE FACTORIES.

OUTPUT FOR THE YEAR WILL BE OVER SIX MILLION POUNDS.

Twenty-five cheese factories in Tillamook county are busy turning out daily their quota of cheese to supply the demand of the markets of the East, the South and the West. In addition to the regular output the factories are preparing to exhibit some of the biggest cheeses ever shown at the State Fair. One now ripening in the Holstein creamery, according to J. Rupp, president of the creamery, will weigh close to 600 pounds, and perhaps even bigger ones, will be shown.

Carl Haberlach, manager of the Tillamook county association, in his recent report showed that the county has been able to make 6,091,259 pounds of cheese in a year and that the output this year will be even greater.

Tillamook creamery, in the town of Tillamook, last year made 719,628 pounds of cheese, using 6,117,821 pounds of milk, and the financial returns to the creamery amounted to $231,900. Maple Leaf came second with 676,683 pounds of cheese for the year. The factories are scattered throughout the county, which is rich in pasture lands, where the cattle graze.

But grass alone never is considered sufficient diet for the Tillamook cows. A large amount of mill feed, concentrates and feeds that are expensive is added, even when the grazing is at the best. Tillamook county is regarded as an ideal dairy locality. Coos county, also, is coming to the fore, and before long will be doing its part toward making Oregon famous as a dairy State.

The cheese factories of Tillamook take the output of a large number of dairies, and make work and income for hundreds of families. Quality is the watchword and cleanliness is the rule. Back of all the rigid rules and the statistics showing success is a fine spirit of co-operation all along the line. Farmers, dairymen, cheesemakers, officials and all workers co-operate. The cheese factories are kept absolutely clean, as attested to not only by officials and inspectors, but by the visitors who frequently motor to the beaches and who stop to inspect the creameries and watch the mysteries of turning milk into cheese.

Great vats, shining and spotless, are used in cheesemaking. Men dressed all in white cut the cheese, mold it, press it into the round metal containers that, lined with cheesecloth, are responsible for the uniform form and size. Modern machinery is used in every one of the twenty-five factories, and uniformity is assured.—[Portland Oregonian.

LOST IN CORN FIELD.

A family from Illinois, touring the State by automobile, stopped one day recently at a farmhouse south of town to get a drink of water. In some manner, the two children wandered into a corn field and were lost. A searching party was at once organized, after a compass had been secured. A long search followed and the children were found at last. If they had not had the presence of mind to have climbed a stalk bringing themselves into view, it is not likely that they would have been discovered for many hours. The whole searching party was much fatigued after the strenuous journey through the corn jungle. The tourists, being from Illinois, had never seen anything like it before.—Winnebago (Minn.) Wistaria on a South Pasadena Pergola.

BACKYARDS should be utilized for fruit trees, berry vines, vegetables and other plants of economic value. Avocados and some others are handsome enough for front or side yards, if the premises are of any extent. In the writer's backyard, but three avocados could find space and these were Fuerte, Sharpless and Spinks. These will give ripe fruits every day in the year. The two others on the preferred official list are Dickinson and Puebla, the latter the largest of the Mexican or thin-skinned group. There are still other good varieties not yet officially listed, but we should have more than five on the garden list. Taft is tardy, but good when once bearing. Habersham or Dickey, Anaheim, Queen, Linda and Knight make a list long enough for anyone. In a very cold section the hardy Northrup only may be grown.

Citrus fruits are fairly well known, especially Navel and Valencia oranges and Marsh seedless pomelo. The best lemon is not Eureka, but Lisbon. The Dancy Tangerine is the best small or kid-glove orange, and all in warm localities should plant a Tahaiti seedless lime. Some like the dwarf kumquat, but the Tangelo, a cross between the pomelo and tangerine orange, is far preferable. (Please note this new hybrid is not tangrapefruit, but Tangelo.) There are many other excellent citrus fruits if one wishes a collection, and any plant dealer will give you a list and secure the trees. No hurry for planting—March is early enough.

In deciduous fruits, the city man needs a few. In apples, the Winter banana has proven superior in Los Angeles generally; but Bellflower, Early Harvest and a few others thrive, especially in heavy soil. In apricots, Royal for early; and Hemskirke, a better sort, will do for late. Light soil is best for these. Peaches are constantly changing, but J. H. Hale and Strawberry (not Strawberry Cling) are good freestones, as is the Elberta. Heath's and Phillip's are good clings. In figs, Kadota White Adriatic and the peerless Calimyrna are good, but the latter needs a wild caprifig also, to pollinate the crop, or there will be none. Bartlett and Winter Bartlett are good pears, though for early use some grow Madeline. If you will have a Satsuma plum you also need a Climax to cross-fertilize it, or you may get few or no Satsumas; it is often self-sterile. For grapes, plant Black Monnukka, Pierce or California, Concord and Muscat for trellis or arbor. For garden or bush grapes, to be short-pruned, plant Kahlali, Duke of Magenta, White Queen, Marvel of Malaga and Black Muscat. If dealers do not have the ones you want, write to University Farm, Davis, Cal., and for a small sum they will sell your cuttings of those you cannot procure elsewhere.

Pasadena Flower Show.

Experience is a good teacher, and the thirteenth annual fall flower show of the Pasadena Horticultural Society was fully up to all expectations and in a few displays was superior to any. Chrysanthemums were shown in usual size and number, but the display of gigantic trained potted plants in bloom was the largest ever seen on the Pacific Coast or perhaps anywhere. Two novelties of especial note were a new variety of sword fern, Nephrolepsis Hillsii, the best variant of the Boston type the writer has seen, and a new penstemon, "Sierra Madre," bred by W. W. Felgate. Six judges consumed three hours in careful inspection and award. Two of them, William Donald and Charles R. Waugh, came from Santa Barbara, the four others, Alex Urquhart, James McGilvary, Arthur Wilson and Ernest Braunton, were from Los Angeles.

Rich Soils.

Soils already rich in humus, particularly mucky soils, receive little benefit from applications of stable manure. The application of phosphoric acid, potash, and occasionally lime on such soils will result in a better plant growth. The use of lime in this connection is not as a plant food, but simply because of its chemical and physical action upon soil constituents. It hastens the decomposition of organic matter and counteracts the acidity of soils, thereby sweetening and rendering them productive.

Planting Deciduous Trees.

It is well settled that the best way to plant a tree is to dig it with care so as to secure as much of its roots as possible, to keep these roots moist; to plant in a hole large enough to enable the roots to extend on all sides without cramping; to have fine soils—dry—in order that it may crumble up finely, and then to get this soil into as close contact with the roots as possible. This close contact can be brought about, either by ramming the soil as it is thrown in, or by pouring in a lot of water when the roots are well covered with soil. Should the soil be sandy, water is much better than ramming, as it carries the soil into all interstices, and it will do this with fine soil of any nature. The closer the contact of soil to roots, the more roots are formed. This is shown in the propagating beds of florists and others, when cuttings are in pure sand. The contact is perfect, and when the cutting makes roots, it makes a greater number and more quickly, than when the cutting roots in soil. It may be that sand has an effect in producing roots aside from the close contact; but even in this case it is a plea for the use of it for the first covering of the roots of all transplanted trees and shrubs, using soil for the upper layers and in filling up the holes. English gardeners always use sand to first cover roots, if easily obtained, especially if the natural soil is very heavy, and it is good practice everywhere.

The Best Plant Food.

Nitrogen is a constituent of all animal and vegetable matter. It is largely obtained from by-products resulting from manufacture of animal and vegetable materials. Among the most important are tankage, slaughter-house refuse, dried blood, fish scrap, guano and cottonseed meal. Two important nitrogen mineral compounds furnish a large part of the nitrogen used for manurial purposes—nitrate of soda or Chili saltpeter, and sulphate of ammonia, which is a product from the manufacture of gas from coal. Nitrogen in these forms is wholly soluble, and is therefore immediately available to the plant. Nitrate of soda furnishes nitrogen in a quickly available form, and for plants requiring large quantities, the total application should not be made at one time, but in two, three or more light doses.

Are Large Bulbs Best?

This recent query is quite pertinent. If all are of one named sort, species or variety, the largest are quite apt to be best; but if of mixed stock, representing many strains or mixture of species or varieties, we would emphatically say no. A variety of size is necessary to a variety of type. The variations in size, color, form, etc., of flowers is dependent upon so many factors that a range in size of bulbs is imperative. Size is not necessarily indicative of vigor.

Seaside Trees.

While seaside residents are asking what best to plant in their yards, the observant gardener cannot but wonder why they do not use their eyes instead of making so many inquiries about trees for such localities. First comes our native cypress (Cupressus macrocarpa,) commonly called "Monterey Cypress." This seems to do well everywhere, and on the coast grows a sturdier form than inland. At Terminal Island there are many fine specimens, as also several species of acacias. Of the latter, A. Cyanophylla and A. saligna seem to endure the best, though A. melanoxylon appears to thrive very well close to the water. The common Blue Gum and many other eucalypts are excellent. More species of both eucalypts and acacias should be tried.

FARM AND TRACTOR SECTION
SUNDAY MORNING, NOVEMBER 14, 1920.

Irrigation, made possible by the Los Angeles aqueduct, has helped greatly in the development of the Henderson bush lima bean industry in the valley.

Some ranchers raise the baby limas as an intercrop in the citrus groves. The total area set to these beans this year runs close to 18,000 acres.

Cultivating with a motor cultivator saves time and labor.

Tank wagon and cook house used by threshing crew, hauled to the various ranches by tractors, which are also used in belt work.

Cutting the beans, two rows at a time. Harvesting is now being completed, and difficulty is being experienced in getting threshing machines and crews.

No practicable machine has yet been devised to cut and stack the beans in one operation. The beans are stacked by hand after they have dried.

Threshing Henderson bush limas near Van Nuys. Although conditions are almost ideal for the culture of this bean in the San Fernando Valley, there is reason to believe that the acreage of all beans in the valley will be less next year, because of the onslaught of the Kotenashi small white bean, raised cheaply in the Orient and imported almost duty-free into California in great amounts.

Modifying the Standard [illegible]

THE LEGHORN IN THE LIMELIGHT. BY HENRY W. [illegible]

IT IS not generally known by breeders and fanciers throughout the country that we shall probably have a newly revised edition of the American Standard of Perfection not later than 1923. True it is that a new edition is about due at that time; but it is also true that there has been a growing demand on the part of commercial breeders for a standard that will afford a wider recognition of the economic (productive) value of breeds and varieties, as well as a revision of the type and color scheme. For certain it is that the productive values have been forging to the front with more or less virility for the past twenty years. This truth was recognized at the Kansas City convention of the American Poultry Association. The resolution in question authorized the formation of a committee whose duty it shall be to reconcile as far as possible the contentions of the fancier and exhibition breeders and those of the purely commercial operators, with power to embody their findings in a series of recommendations to be made the basis of the contemplated revision of the standard. That certainly is some job, and one that is fraught with no end of discussion.

The breed that has made the greatest record along productive lines is the one around which the battle of words will rage and the printed page give its reflections. As is well known, there is a division of opinion among the Leghorn men, (principally those raising the S. C. White.) Many fanciers and breeders are intensely partial to the recognized exhibition type of the breed and variety—a bird of graceful carriage, fine plumage, and withal a thing of real beauty. Your practical fellow discounts these qualities, and "stands out" for prolificness, stamina, and a desire to give emphasis to a robust physique, rather than beauty of type and fine fine color qualifications. He demands a bird of heart and lungs, of breast and body, of "capacity" to work well, to eat well, and to produce well. If these qualities are strongly in evidence, they do not particularly object to those that at present constitute the Leghorn of the Standard; but if absent, they prefer sacrificing exhibition requirements for those of economic values. And this certainly will excite some discussion before the proponents of the beautiful and the bountiful meet on common ground.

Among "points" that the practical fellow objects to is to see a bird "cut" for light colored shanks and beak—two things that "stand" for good performance in the growth of hen fruit. Another bone of contention is that in fall shows at agricultural fairs, the preference should be given to hens in old feather, for such are the late molters, hence have the longest period of production to their credit. Type is another consideration. The exhibition specimen is not always the heavy producer, though there are many good exhibition Leghorns that also have fine records to their credit as has been proved by trap nest records. Indeed, outside and beyond certain limitations, prolificness is not the result of uniform type. Some good layers are "off" in color of plumage; have wry or squirrel tails; are faulty in head and leg points; and in other details are poor competitors for showroom honors. To accommodate these defects to standard requirements is a job that we are not looking for; but possibly it can in a measure be accomplished.

We cite the Leghorn because it is exceptional, and in California is the leading breed of domesticated fowl. With us the White Leghorn outnumbers any other two breeds on the egg farm; but when it comes to the showroom, it is invariably represented by a comparatively small number of entries. This shows, if it means anything, that there has been a gradual cleavage between egg farmers and people who follow the exhibition game and the fancy. We are not saying that it is wrong; or that it will lead to better things. We believe, however, that in time we shall breed a race of fowl that will typify production, and at the same time find recognition and a winning place in the showroom. With all that has been said and written on "laying types," we are still some distance from a generally accepted laying type that will "come up" to specifications that will give it a fixed place in standard revision. Out of all that has been learned in Australia, in England, in Canada and in the United States, it may be possible for the learned in poultry culture to evolve breeds and varieties that will satisfy our cravings for productive values, and yet satisfy our sense of the beautiful—the eternal fitness of things. But even here, it will be found in the long run that productiveness has the "edge" on mere beauty in the poultry yard. The problem as we see it, for standard revision, is to make the conditions such that the beautiful, as we now have it, shall become more bountiful, and that in the process the bountiful will become correspondingly more beautiful. Some job? We guess "yes."

The Cock of the Walk, or Nature's Way.

The following timely skit is from the pen of J. Stephen Hicks, and appeared in the Feathered World, under date of September 24. It forcibly states a truth to be observed in mating:

"Directly man steps in and domesticates animals Nature (it may be said) bows gracefully and retires, murmuring the caution to all who will hear it, 'Well, remember my fundamental principles, and perhaps you won't go so very far wrong.' Nature's fundamental principle about breeding is the survival of the fittest, and the fancier or utilitarian who attempts to go behind this law in mating up his birds is doomed to failure. The finest show bird in the country and the cockerel with four generations of 250-egg dams behind him are alike useless in the pen if they require a dope to assist them in fertilizing the eggs.

"Observe for a moment this farmyard scene. There on top of a manure heap stands a bright-looking, active cock in full plumage. He crows repeatedly and fusses round the crowd of hens that are scratching about in the vicinity, but keeps a watchful eye upon the hedgerows, near which, in the middle distance, one or two other male birds are lurking in a somewhat furtive fashion. Presently, with loud cacklings, a hen emerges from the hedge, to be chased by one of the other cocks, but before he can reach her the boss has flown at his rival and driven him away. This is Dame Nature at work."

The Beautiful and the Useful.

In the Farm and Tractor for October 3, we made some rather pointed references to the movement to increase the economic values in the poultry industry; we return to the subject just at this time to afford our readers information as to a similar movement in Australia. Not unlike the movement initiated by the American Poultry Association, looking toward a revision of the standard so that it will cover features along utility lines, the Australians are working along the same lines. For the most part these have to do with type, color of plumage, head and leg points. The Australian Standard covering the points in utility judging are as follows:

Eye—Large, prominent and bright, eight points.

Face—Fine, clean, free from wrinkles and feathers, five points.

Comb—Single-comb breeds, thin; texture fine. Rose-comb breeds, neatly set; texture fine, five points.

Neck—Rather long, thin at head, five points.

Legs and shanks—Medium to short, bone inclined flat, six points.

Keel—Short, five points.

Abdomen—Deep, broad, full and soft; texture fine, ten points.

Feather—Tight and dense, showing ample fluff, six points.

Color—The Australians recommend the color conditions in the English standard, for which Americans should substitute the requirements of the American standard of perfection, not only in plumage, but also as to eye, beak, face, etc. The aim is to maintain standard qualifications while at the same time affording wider scope to meat and egg production.

Carriage and shape—Alert, body, inclined oblong; full at crop, tapering from thighs to head, forming wedge-like appearance, fifteen points.

Size—Medium, or one pound less than English Poultry Club's standard weight clauses. In case of Leghorns—pullets four and one-half pounds; hens, five pounds; cockerels, five pounds; cocks, six pounds, ten points.

Condition—Ten points. A perfect bird to count 100 points.

Defects—Same as in the American standard, including disqualifications.

These points apply to all breeds of utility stock. The aim is to furnish some line of demarkation whereby extreme fancy points might be obviated, and breeding encouraged that would produce birds true to type of breed, and still possess first-class economic values. The point is, indeed, a fine one, which in its application will excite no little discussion between commercial poultrymen and your real fancier.

Five hundred dollars has been contributed by the Petaluma Chamber of Commerce toward staging an egg-laying contest to be pulled off under the direction of the Sonoma County Farm Bureau, commencing in November.

EDITED BY HAROLD M. FINLEY.

Communications from practical farmers, ranchers, stock raisers, poultrymen, gardeners and others engaged either in a large or small way in the vital work of food production are gladly received.

Good clear photographs of interesting farm and garden activities are always welcomed. The Los Angeles Times Farm and Tractor Section is the only farm journal in the west printing illustrations in the incomparable rotogravure process.

Now for a New Deal.

PROTECTION for worried agriculturists of California, real protection that will remove the causes of growing apprehension and alarm and make their business safe and their investments secure, is brought a step nearer by the political landslide in nation and State. Truly speaking, it wasn't a case of politics at all, as that term is generally understood and used. The successful party and its candidates in this State stood squarely for economic policies vital to the welfare, if not to the very existence, of certain farming industries in California, industries the ruination of which would seriously threaten agriculture generally and hurt the whole State. The likelihood of these policies being put in force in time and in a way to save the day for the directly menaced industries is greatly increased now that the ballots have been counted. In fact, there is apparently no reason to fear that there will be any unnecessary delay in incorporating them into the laws of the land.

California, favored by nature above all other regions in America for the carrying on of a diversified agriculture, has for very understandable reasons elected to devote a large part of its agricultural area to the production of crops that cannot be grown in other sections of the country. Instead of going in on a wholesale plan, as it well could, for the products that are grown elsewhere the State has won fame and the appreciation of the country by putting out specialty crops of its own that lend both interest and variety to the national diet. By its very action in this respect, however, California has run afoul of a dangerous economic situation.

Other regions overseas, lands in which the high American standards of living and of production do not prevail, are also growing the crops of which California is making such a specialty. Strive as they will, with modern machinery and all the up-to-date methods for keeping down production expenses, this State's progressive growers cannot, under existing conditions, hope to meet the competition of foreign producers whose labor is performed by workers who live like animals on a few cents a day and whose distribution activities are taken care of by government-subsidized transportation lines. Thinking Americans should not and would not want Californians to bring their production and living standards down to the level of those in some of the countries in question, even if such a thing were possible. It is unthinkable, too, that this State should pocket a loss of inconceivable magnitude and give up all its "specialty" crops that come into competition with cheaply produced foreign products. California wouldn't be California without its citrus fruit, its limas and other beans, its walnuts, its "cots," its olives, its dates, its incomparable cotton and a lot of other products that the country has come to consider as belonging here. And yet California would be compelled eventually to sacrifice some of its very own among these crops if things were to go right along as they have been going, with foreign growers being permitted to dump their products in America without having to pay even a duty to make up the difference in cost of production.

The time has come to solve all such problems by clapping on adequate tariffs and California is fortunate indeed in being no longer at the mercy of an administration committed to unthinking, uncaring, free-trade ideas. The new regime at Washington is pledged to protect the State and nation both from the ruinous and unfair competition of cheaply produced foreign crops and manufactured goods and from the encroachment upon American soil of unassimilable and undesired alien peoples. And California and America expect the party that was swept on such a fervent wave of faith and confidence into power to make good on both promises.

The Cotton Growers.

CALIFORNIA and Arizona cotton growers are perturbed over the low price of cotton, and they have good reason to be in that state of mind. Predictions are freely made in the valleys of the Colorado and Salt rivers that less than one-half of this year's acreage will be planted to cotton in the spring. Some cotton farmers are already preparing to sow alfalfa and winter grains on lands lately given over to cotton. There is a movement in the Southern States to cut down the cotton acreage next year 33 per cent and this will probably be done, with the result that, with credit conditions in Europe better, and more spindles going all over the world, there may be an actual shortage of cotton. In this case those farmers of the Southwest who raise cotton may get high prices for their product.

Unquestionably the return of a large number of cotton-raising farmers to a sane method of crop rotation will benefit agriculture. Too many fields of fine alfalfa were plowed up in the Imperial and Salt River valleys this year for the planting of cotton, with the resultant high price of stock feed. Both the Arizona irrigated valleys and those in the southwestern corner of California are ideal stock-raising countries, and the wherewithal for the finishing of cattle, hogs, horses, sheep and poultry can be raised right on the ranch. The earliest fruits and vegetables are also grown there. More balanced agriculture in these fertile regions will be the result of the slump in the price of cotton. For the farmers who remain in the cotton game, real organization for marketing is needed to bring relief from the present conditions.

CHEAPER MEAT ANIMALS.

Meat animals were sold by farmers of the country for a whole year ending September, 1920, at prices lower than those of the preceding year by 14 per cent. The fall in prices, compared with former years, began in September, 1919. These statements are based on prices ascertained by the Bureau of Crop Estimates, United States Department of Agriculture. Prices of these animals were gradually increasing to the calendar year 1914, but they fell 8 per cent in 1915, followed by a gain of 17 per cent in 1916, of 49 per cent in 1917, when the peak of gain was reached, of 17 per cent in 1918, and of less than 1 per cent in 1919. Now, for the last four months of 1919 and for 1920 to September, there has been a recession of price movement with a drop of 14 per cent.

The fall potato crop in Southern California promises to be the largest ever raised.

HOW A RECORD REALTY TRANSFER PAVED THE WAY FOR FREE LEMONS.

BY J. E. CALKINS.

[The main facts in the following account, including names and other details, are known to many in the Whittier district, while citrus growers generally are more or less familiar with the methods employed by the importers to get in free lemons.—Ed.]

THE market for California lemons is a little better than it has been; just enough better to take the figures out of the red ink around which they have been hovering for months, and leave the growers an extremely modest profit. But let them take heart, for there are good prices ahead of them, or history does not repeat itself. The fight for an adequate lemon tariff looms near and when that fight comes off and the smoke of battle has cleared away there will be a new deal for the discouraged lemon producers.

This harks back to the tariff battle of 1909. In the early part of that summer lemons brought war prices. There were plenty of Sicilian lemons back in the Mediterranean lands, but, to the wonder of most people in this country, including the California growers, none of them landed on our coasts. The California lemon had it all to its own sweet self.

Now, as the figures show, there will be enough California lemons, a very few years hence, to supply the entire demand of the United States. When all the young, unbearing trees that are now growing on 16,000 acres of this State's citrus land come into bearing, there will be no need to bring in the foreign lemon, for we shall be raising all we need.

But in 1909 there were not enough California lemons, except at certain brief seasons, to meet the demand, and there was room for a very considerable quantity of Sicilian lemons. The California grower contended, however, that they were entitled to enough tariff protection to equalize the difference in the production and marketing costs of the home lemon and the foreign lemon, a difference that ran altogether in favor of the Sicilian; and the Sicilian, and most especially the little coterie of importers who grew rich from handling his lemon in our markets in competition with our home grown fruit, contended with even greater fervor that the imported lemon should come in free of duty.

And so it came to pass, in the early summer of 1909, that the market was generally bare of imported lemons, and the price to the American grower ran to high figures—for a while. The figures, reported daily, were handled in the most effective manner to the advantage of the free lemon propaganda. They were driven home with all the impressive sophistry that the importers' junta could command, which is saying a great deal.

The campaign of the antitariff lemon importers was astute and far-reaching. Not only did it include the price of the lemons that went to refresh the feverish congressional palate, but it crossed the continent and got busy with the current price of good California lemon groves. With lemons bringing $8 and $10 a box in Washington, and with fair lemon land selling for $2500 or $3000 an acre in California, it was plain to the tariff committeemen that there were millions in the lemon business for the Californians who were lucky enough to own groves of that kind. The evidence was unescapable, and so was the force of the argument. All sight of the average profits of the lemon growers, or their past losses, was totally eclipsed by the fact of the moment, that lemons were bringing war prices right then, and that the groves that produced them were worth big money all the time.

A MYSTERIOUS DEAL.

But nobody ever knew the greed of the lemon importers' junta to be sated. It keeps a keen edge, world without end. It was not enough that California lemon groves had sold as high as $3000 an acre. It was desired to have the men who were tinkering with the lemon tariff believe that groves were selling for much larger prices, right then. So one day a Whittier man, owner of a good youngish five-acre lemon grove in the southeastern edge of Whittier, was asked by a real estate dealer of that town if his grove was for sale. (The man told me the story himself and the only reason I withhold his name is that I do not know where to get hold of him to get his permission for using it.) The owner said the property was not on the market, but that he might be induced to sell it. He said, however, that he did not think anybody would care to pay him the price he should ask. The agent told him that a possible buyer of the property had appeared, and urged him to name his price, but the owner refused.

The next day, or the day after, or thereabouts, the agent was warm on the owner's trail. This possible customer of his was an eastern man of wealth who designed to come to Whittier to live, and who, after some energetic scanning of the country, and its grove properties, had picked the five acres as just the place he wanted to own; he wanted to build a house on it just to suit him, and come here for the winters with his family; he might even move here, bag and baggage, and never go back East again. The would-be buyer, in short, was in love with California in general, and Whittier in particular, and especially and above all was he enamored of the place on which he had fixed his attention. If the owner would just name his price, the man would probably pay it without a murmur. But still the Whittier man held back.

One or two more days went by, and then the agent appeared at the owner's elbow again. This client of his simply had to have that piece of property, and if the owner would not name the price, he would. By way of shortening the debate he offered $5000 an acre, cash in full; would the owner accept the offer? The Whittier man replied to the general effect that one fool at a time was enough, and that he would, on one strict condition. This was that no one was to be allowed to know, in any manner, the price. The deal was closed, the money paid, and the way was wide open for the Connecticut spendthrift to go ahead and build his bungalow de luxe. But he never did. In a few days he faded out of sight, vanishing by degrees, with occasional returns to Whittier, until at last he was entirely gone. After some time the property was on the market, and was bought by a real Whittier resident, but not at the price of $5000 an acre.

STRAIGHT TO WASHINGTON.

The point of the narrative is the fact that all the details of this highest-price-ever lemon grove deal were in the hands of the Sicilian lemon importers, and the no-lemon-tariff legislators, in Washington, almost before the ink was dry on the documents. The sale was genuine, as far as the seller or the Whittier real estate man were concerned, but it was as sly and effective a piece of work as the importers ever put over, and they have done quite a few smooth jobs if we are to believe all we hear. A bona fide sale of California lemon property at $5000 an acre meant and could mean nothing else than very large profits to the grower of lemons, as far as the wise men in Washington were able to deduce. Just what bearing it actually had on the final fixing of the lemon tariff is not an easy thing to say at this date, but it carried no small weight.

Now we are approaching another period of reduced Sicilian importations, and it may be that this time some California lemon grove will be snapped up at the buyer's offer of $8000 or $10,000 an acre. Or it may be that no such camouflaged real estate deal will be made at all. Possibly that trick will

HENS ARE OFF IN EGG-LAYING CONTEST.

At the flashing of the electric lights by an alarm clock at 4 a.m., November 1, at Santa Cruz, Cal., the elite 600 in the Pacific Coast poultry world hopped off their roosts as one to the straw below and commenced their twelve-months' race for blue ribbons and medals. The second year of California's Farm bureau egg-laying contest at Santa Cruz included a good sprinkling of entries from the States of Washington and Oregon.

Each hen is leg-banded with her own number and owner's colors, and each hen will do her best to shell out a record-breaking lot of eggs before Nov. 1, 1921. The hens will do their best because they are housed in beautiful new quarters, built according to latest scientific discoveries for a hen's comfort. The building is sheltered from the winds, but open to the sun and invigorating sea air.

Messrs. Fuller and McCallister of Inglewood have entered a pen of birds in the contest, as have also Messrs. Hampton and Loucks of Van Nuys.

WOULD KEEP TAB ON GROVE FERTILIZER.

The appointment of a State analyst to keep barnyard fertilizer free from impurities will be urged on the next Legislature by the citrus growers of the south, as a result of the citrus institute held recently at Anaheim. Prof. George P. Gray, fertilizer expert of the State Department of Agriculture, told the growers it was strictly "up to them" to find means for stopping wholesale adulteration of manure practiced by the persons selling it. There were 200 growers present.

Another feature of the institute was the address of Prof. H. S. Woglum, entomologist of the California Fruit Growers' Exchange. Prof. Woglum holds that the present dosage used in fumigation for black scale should be increased, and cited some of his recent observations in support of his contentions. He urged the growers to be on the lookout at this time for an off-hatch of black scale. He advised that fumigation be delayed until the latter part of November, when broods are in a more susceptible stage as concerns reaction to fumigation.

Prof. Ralph E. Smith, entomologist of the California Walnut Growers' Association, gave an address on the control of the aphis and red spider on orange trees, giving the growers a new formula he had worked out. [illegible], manager of the Leffingwell ranch, told of the importance of cover crops in connection with maintaining permanent fertility in the groves. He spoke on the danger of exhausting the supply of barnyard fertilizer or of having the price of this product boosted so high that citrus growers could not afford it.

Geting Ready for the Winter Garden.

LINDSAY'S EXPERIMENT IN MELON GROWING.

LINDSAY.—While some cantaloupe growers in the State lost last season, it was shown that at Lindsay—where melons ripen fairly early—growers received good prices on the July market, local cars bringing as high as $110. R. O. McDonald states the most serious problem of handling the product was due to small acreage. Orders had been received for 150 carloads of Lindsay melons. The slow deliveries from the fields each day necessitated holding over until the second day to finish the load, which not only injured the fruit, but robbed its growers of a day's time in which the melons should have been in transit. Many of the best orders were canceled because of failure to load out on time.

The July pool averaged $1.78 for standards, 98 cents for ponies and 46 cents for flats. The August pool averaged: standards, [illegible] cents; ponies, [illegible] cents; flats [illegible] cents.

Growers were paid as high as $[illegible] per acre net. Out of fourteen growers four growers failed to realize sufficient to cover cost of growing and harvesting. These four had their entire output or most of it in our second pool. It is still the opinion of experienced men that Lindsay can be made a profitable cantaloupe district.

LARGE ACREAGE OF GROVES FUMIGATED.

POMONA.—A sweet potato weighing four pounds and resembling a dragon is on exhibition at the Pomona Chamber of Commerce. This deformed tuber has a head to which a pair of shoe-button eyes give a terrifying appearance, while a long curly tail gives this "monster" a lifelike look.

The Growers' Fumigation and Supply Company established a record during October, when a total of 1600 acres were fumigated. Up to date the company has fumigated a total of 3500 acres and at the present time has 1000 acres more to do. Manager F. G. Wyman says that he would not be surprised if, in the entire season, 5000 acres were handled.

The most successful season in the three years' history of the Chino Valley Apple Growers' Association is now nearing its close, according to Fred A. White, secretary of the organization. Seventy tons of white winter Pearmains have just been sold, netting a profit of $60 per ton to the growers.

sum was reported at the annual meeting of the exchange, held at Fullerton. There are two of the association's packing-houses at Anaheim and one each at Fullerton, Placentia, Yorba Linda and La Habra. Charles Eygabrod was elected the exchange's representative on the board of the California Fruit Growers' Exchange, the parent body. F. N. Edwards, whom Eygabrod succeeded, has been chosen manager of the exchange's lemon by-products plant at Corona.

APPLE SEASON CLOSING.

YUCAIPA.—The apple growers have entered on the last stretch of the harvest season for the year, as the late varieties of apples are now being picked and packed. Most of them will be placed in cold storage for the winter season, as the late varieties will keep better than the early ones. For over two weeks now the growers have been busy picking the Winesaps and the Rome Beauties, the last named being by far the most popular apple in the district. The apple reaches a good size, has a high color and cooks almost as well as any apple, yet at the same time it is fine for eating. The packing-houses of Yucaipa and Oakglen districts are now running at full blast. Truckmen are reaping their annual harvest, and the big trucks, piled high with boxes of apples are going back and forth between Yucaipa and Los Angeles. Cider is becoming an important by-product of the valley and demand has become so good that only clean, whole apples are being used for this purpose. The grower is receiving about 75 cents a gallon for his cider this year and the small apples will pay better used this way than any other.

JAP HOG MEN MOVE.

SANTA BARBARA.—Residents of the Hope district who have been up in arms against the stench raised by Japanese who are feeding the garbage of a large part of Santa Barbara to hogs have won their case. The orientals have moved their hogs farther out in the country, after an injunction suit brought by the District Attorney.

SHIPPED LATE PEARS.

BANNING.—Late pears are selling well this year, a local fruit company having recently shipped two carloads to Los Angeles. It is believed that many late pear orchards will be planted in this district next spring.

Big Profits If You Will Raise Guinea Pigs

In order to supply our ever increasing demand for cavies (guinea pigs) for use in hospitals, laboratories, etc., we have opened a California branch. Few industries offer such profits at such investment of money and time. Foundation stock can be purchased for only a few dollars and cost of raising is only about 5 cents per head. We agree in writing to purchase all the cavies you raise from stock purchased from us, or their descendants and will pay $1.20 a pair for animals a month old or older, delivered. Even a few pens should pay you well. Send for booklet about breeding, care and money-making opportunities raising cavies. You can get started raising cavies on an investment as low as $5.00.

A hundred breeding female cavies, and they have five litters a year, which is 500 litters, and the government figures three young to a litter, which is 1500 young, and figure that the first three litters from your original 100 breeders will have young during the same year, that will be 300 litters, and at three to a litter, which amounts to 900 young. Add the above 1500 young to 900, makes the total of young from your original cavies, 2400 for the year, and at our contract price of $1.20 per pair, for you can rest assured that about half will be males and half females, and your profits for the end of the year will be $1440.00 from your small investment, and you will still have your stock that you had to begin with.

To Sell to Us. 250,000 Needed Yearly

by laboratories and other institutions every year in all parts of the country. Many of these big orders representing over a million and a half dollars expenditure each year, are waiting for supplies. Waiting for people to wake up to their opportunities and raise sufficient stock to meet their requirements. One institution alone in Pennsylvania requires on an average of 1500 guinea pigs each week.

We have more orders than we can possibly fill, so we will furnish you breeding stock at small cost.

Guinea pigs are very prolific and at six weeks of age are ready for mating. They thrive in any climate and can be successfully raised in congested neighborhoods without annoyance of disagreeable oders, even when kept in large numbers.

DOWN-TO-DATE REPORTS FROM TIMES CORRESPONDENTS

LOS ALAMITOS.—Very little rice was grown upon the lands of the Montana Land Company this year, but hundreds of acres will be planted to this crop next year, if the price of sugar does not rise considerably, it is promised. Rice growing has been proven practicable on certain of the low-lying lands of the company near here, 116 acres having been harvested successfully in 1919. However, the promising future for sugar beets induced the company to extend its sugar-beet culture to the rice fields and little was grown this year. The rice that was raised is of good quality and yield.

NEW CLUBS PLANNED.

GARDEN GROVE.—Greater interest in boys' and girls' agricultural clubs is assured as a result of a recent rousing meeting of the Garden Grove Farm Center. A. C. Stanley, who was chairman of the meeting, opened up the discussion on the subject and at the conclusion of many speeches it was decided to organize a pig club and help the girls and boys finance purchases. Talks were made by Rev. Clifford Jones, Dr. C. C. Violett and J. M. Woodworth.

SOWING BIG OAT FIELD.

RIALTO.—The Weller Brothers are now engaged in sowing their six-hundred-acre field just west of the Rialto city limits to oats. Two tractors and two six-horse teams are being used and the ground is summer fallowed. For a number of successive years the Wellers have leased the same 1284 acres for dry farming and by the summer-fallow method have assured a good crop, although occasionally it has been found necessary to sow the seed a second time on account of a windstorm and drifting sand or other adverse conditions. The Foothill Boulevard divides the acreage into two fields of 684 acres and 600 acres, respectively, and the grain is grown on each on alternate years. The stand of oats last season was very heavy, yet not coarse. Two years ago, when double seeding was called for, about $30,000 was realized from the sale of the crop, expenses being about $15,000 left net results about $15,000. However, the fact that Weller Brothers are good farmers, understanding all about the raising of oats and themselves working in the field with their men, is largely responsible for their continuous and marked success.

GOOD PRICE FOR HOGS.

TULARE.—Top price at a sale of six cars of hogs in this city, held under the auspices of the California Farm Bureau Marketing Association, was $13.70. This was $1.30 lower than the top received in a sale at Visalia two weeks before.

FIGHT FOR WATER.

OCEANSIDE.—A big fight is on for the surplus waters of the San Luis Rey River, between the city of Oceanside and the Escondido Mutual Water Company. Upon application being made for all the surplus flow of the river by the Escondido ranchers to the State Water Commission the city of Oceanside promptly filed objection and is pleading for an injunction to stop the ranchers from using any of the water, which the ranchers of Oceanside contend is theirs by right of usage during some years. F. H. Toole of the South Coast Land Company states that the company has become a party to the protest, as the concern has much water-bearing land along the river. The application of the Escondido people is for sixty second feet in addition to what it is now getting from the headwaters of the river.

EARLY NAVEL CROP.

CORONA.—The first carload of 1920-21 navels to be shipped outside of Butte county was sent forth from Corona, October 30, a month earlier than usual. According to local orange men, there will be twenty cars of an off-bloom crop to ship. This off bloom appeared on the trees last January and February, because of the unusually warm winter weather, and the oranges of this bloom are much earlier. None of this off bloom appeared in any other section of the south, with the exception of a few trees at Covina. The operation of the Corona packing-houses in full blast at this season of the year is unusual.

TO PLANT MORE PRUNES.

PORTERVILLE.—W. A. Hawley of the Rose Crest farms will add to his extensive deciduous planting 12,000 young French prune trees, which will cover 135 acres. Mr. Hawley now has 300 acres in French prunes, which is probably one of the largest single orchards in the State. Three ranches make up the Rose Crest farms, two being in cultivation. All have good irrigation systems, with pumps and storage water in reservoirs. A young vineyard of 55,000 Thompson seedless cuttings has been started and 1500 White Adriatic figs set out.

CITRUS GROWERS' REPORT.

ANAHEIM.—During the past year citrus growers shipping through the packing-houses of the associations belonging to the Northern Orange County Fruit Exchange were paid $7,015,314.52 for their fruit. This

VARIETY OF PRODUCTS ON HOSPITAL FARM.

SAN BERNARDINO.—The 400-acre farm of the Southern California State Hospital at Patton furnishes green vegetables to the big family of 200 patients throughout the year, raises feed for its herds of cattle and hogs, which furnish meat, milk and butter to the family, and provides raw materials for work in the manufacturing plant, besides growing oranges, lemons, grapefruit and deciduous fruit. The hospital's field agriculturist has delivered to the door of the kitchen this year 20,000 pounds of vegetables, on an average, per week, it is stated.

It is the ambition of the hospital officials to become self-supporting in this regard, and while that result may not come for a while yet, it seems to be on the way. Besides the fresh vegetables the farm at Patton furnishes fresh pork, the inmates curing their own hams and bacon. There are 500 hens in the poultry yards and the patients put hundreds of dozens down in water glass during the summer to be used when the eggs are not so plentiful.

The kinds of vegetables grown vary with the season. Many acres of lettuce and green peas, and all the winter vegetables are now growing.

The following quantities of foods were produced by the hospital in August: Beef, 554 pounds; milk, 9328 gallons; veal, 183 pounds; chickens, 58 pounds; eggs, 510 dozen; pork, 2255 pounds; ham, 984 pounds; bacon, 744 pounds; honey, 540 pounds; squash, 31,660 pounds; cucumbers, 7400 pounds; peppers, 1470 pounds; green corn, 9000 pounds; tomatoes, 30,185 pounds; string beans, 2405 pounds; cabbage, 10,900 pounds; onions, 800 pounds; carrots, 2400 pounds; watermelons, 4500 pounds; cantaloupes, 700 pounds; parsnips, 1620 pounds.

All the crops are grown and harvested by the patients, under competent supervision, thus giving those who prefer to work (and no one is forced to work) and enjoy a life of action out in the open air, a chance to escape from the boredom of being confined to the buildings and grounds. The healthful exercise under normal conditions, is very helpful in building up the patients health, giving them better appetites, better rest at night and wholesome things to think about. Besides being a source of health and happiness to the patients this field work, of course, solves the labor problem and gives the hospital a big boost on its way toward self support.

Great quantities of sugar beets, barley, oats, alfalfa, grain, sorghums for chickens and for fattening hogs, and many other field crops that provide feed for the dairy herd, the swine, the chickens and the several fine teams of horses, are grown successfully and in rotation.

There are thirty acres of oranges which are cared for by the patients. Last year they baled 900 tons of grain hay, raised and stored 166,600 pounds of alfalfa, filled six silos with wonderful corn, and fed 170 tons of beets and twenty acres of carrots as a part of their year's work.

The manufacturing department has now received the attention of the agricultural management, and an effort will be made to furnish raw materials for the industrial workers. The first step toward this was taken when the patients began to manufacture brooms and brushes for the hospital from the broom corn raised on the place. Now, every broom and brush of any sort used in the big institution is made in the factory by the patients. Some of them are made from other materials than broom corn, but they are all made there. The wood in the backs of the better brushes is made from the hardwood flooring of an old wrecked building.

The broom corn started the movement towards furnishing materials for the factory. Then, the officials began to ask why could not the flax be grown to make the towel, table and bed linen, and why could not cotton and wool be produced to make clothing? The patients have been, for several years, weaving all the denim and shirting for their cotton clothes, and all the material for toweling, and they seem to take pleasure in doing the work.

Sheep have been pastured on the hospital grounds and lawns, but cotton and flax culture is a new project. The hospital didn't have the best of luck with the flax this year, but they say they didn't plant it at the right time, and they fully expect to win out with it next year. The cotton planting has done well, and they expect to put in a much larger acreage next year, profiting by this year's experience.

For several years the patients have grown their own tobacco. They have tons of it now curing for use, and while the dry climate may not cure it as well as in Virginia and other tobacco States, it seems to fill the bill.

Conditions of soil and weather have a great bearing on grain and forage sorghums.

PLUMP TURKEYS AND CHICKENS BRING MORE ON HOLIDAY MARKET.

BY JAMES ALDEN ROGERS.

FAT turkeys are at a premium in Southern California at holiday time. It is reported that there was but one turkey to every eleven families in Los Angeles last Thanksgiving. And the scarcity of turkeys, despite aviating prices, is reflected in higher prices for fat geese, ducks and chickens during the holiday season. The ever increasing population of Southern California cities creates a demand for fattened fowls that now exceeds the supply. That is why so many of the egg farmers are buying heavy hens and cockerels to fatten for the holidays.

Fattening Holiday Poultry in Pens.

It is necessary to confine the fowls closely for the best results, allowing them more than the usual amount of feed, and very little exercise.

Probably 90 per cent of the chickens used on the table in the southern part of the State are young cockerels of the egg breeds, sold to the wholesaler when they are from five to eight weeks old, and fattened for a week or two before they are killed. This sort of table fowl will do ordinarily, but on Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's Day the public demands fat fowls, preferably chickens of the heavier breeds, if they cannot afford, or cannot procure turkeys. There is room for many large fowl fattening plants in Southern California.

The marketing season for turkeys is very short, usually running from November 15 to the latter part of December. But during this brief period there is an incessant call for fat turkeys. The free range for these birds in this section is being taken up by cultivated farms, and the greater number of turkeys used on the California markets come from the Imperial and Antelope valleys, where, on the large grain ranches, there is sufficient waste grain and insects to pick up so that the birds need very little feeding and care. In the vicinity of Daggett and Perris, there are a number of large flocks of turkeys living upon the free range, and these need no extra fattening. But it is the usval practice of valley farmers to sell their birds to the middleman or fattener, who prepared them for markets immediately, dressing them and shipping them to large centers of population. Dressing plants, which handle several hundred turkeys a day, are established at about this time in Imperial, Antelope, Coachella and Perris valleys, and the dressers sell to retail dealers by prearrangement.

DRESSING THE TURK.

When turkeys are killed and dressed on the farm, they should be deprived of feed for twenty-four hours, but given plenty of fresh, clean, water, in order to clean the crop and intestines of all feed. When ready to kill, the bird should be hung up by the feet, and the killer, holding the bird in one hand, uses a sharp, narrow knife to sever the veins in the throat by making a small cut inside the mouth on the right side of the throat, at the base of the skull. After making this cut, and bleeding begins, the knife is thrust up through the groove in the roof of the mouth and into the brain at the back of the skull. The bird gives a peculiar squawk, the feathers are loosened by a quivering of the muscles, and death is instantaneous.

In dry picking, the feathers should be picked immediately, and if the bird has been properly stuck, they come out very easily. The tail and large wing feathers are removed first, after which the body feathers are pulled out. When the turkeys are to be marketed locally, or are to be shipped but a short distance, they are cooled to a temperature of about 35 deg. by hanging in the open air, provided the weather is cool enough at night; otherwise they are plunged into ice water and kept there until thoroughly cooled.

When chickens are to be fattened for market, they are placed for two weeks in pens about three feet square, holding four to six each, depending on the size of the hens or cockerels. They are given plenty of fresh, pure water, preferably from an automatic arrangement, and fed three times per day, at regular intervals. The small space does not give them an opportunity to get much exercise, they put on flesh rapidly, and the flesh is more tender than if they were allowed to run around in the usual manner.

Corn, milo, wheat, barley and sunflower seed comprise the grain mixtures usually fed to poultry thus confined, and the usual mashes, composed of ground grains, mill scraps, wheat bran and meat or fish scraps, are fed each morning. Give the confined poultry a limited amount of cut green alfalfa or barley in the early afternoon.

Very few poultrymen use the machine-stuffing method in this section, as conditions are ideal at holiday time for the fattening of the poultry without resorting to this method.

A HUGE INDUSTRY.

J. H. Barber, manager of the Poultry Producers of Central California, has rendered his annual report, which is really an interesting document, and evinces the strength and stability of the co-operative movement among the poultrymen north of Fresno. In 1917, (eleven months, from January 29 to December 31,) the producers' corporation handled 193,612 cases of eggs, which sold for $2,049,484.23; for 1918, (twelve months) the total was 270,113 cases, [illegible] the volume was [illegible] cases, [illegible] $4,[illegible], an increase of [illegible] per cent over 1917. During the first eight months of 1920, the latest figures available show that they have handled 352,9[illegible] cases, with a total value of $4,733,945.15. Measured in eggs, the volume of business increased 38 per cent in 1918, 63 per cent in 1919 and over 100 per cent in 1920; measured in dollars the increase was 82 per cent for 1918, 128 per cent for 1919 and more than 200 per cent this year. All of which affords some idea of the extent and importance of specialized poultry farming in Central California. In 1910, the total output of California poultry products was somewhere about twenty millions of dollars per annum; we are quite firmly of the opinion that in the decade just closed it has been more than doubled. The Poultrymen's Co-operative Association of Souther California, and the Tulare Association, are two similar bodies that have done equally well.

LIKE MARIOUT BARLEY.

Farm Adviser A. A. Jungerman of Stanislaus county, California, writes that 19,000 acres of Mariout barley was planted in that county last season. This was 15 per cent of the total barley acreage of the county. He estimates that fully 50 per cent of the barley planted there this year will be of the Mariout variety.

CHEAP OIL [illegible]
[illegible]

SANTA ANA.—Why there is [illegible] their market for apricot pits has been explained by W. M. Smith, Orange county manager for the Guggenheim company. Importation of cheap olive oil from Italy has knocked the bottom out of the market, he says. Last year the Guggenheim plant here cracked 2000 tons of apricot pits, shipped in from many districts. Two products were made out of the kernels, an oil used by the fish canneries and as a substitute for olive oil, and a paste used by bakers in the making of macaroons. During the year large quantities of Sicilian oil were imported by the fishermen to take the place of the apricot oil. As a result the local plant cracked but 400 tons of the pits, the pits being brought from the San Fernando Valley and Ventura county. Last year the growers were paid $40 to $50 per ton for the pits; this year the pits were bought for less than half that sum, and next year, probably, no pits at all will be bought. The shells have been shipped to a San Diego firm to make a charcoal-carbon substance Last year the city of Santa Ana bought large quantities of the shells to spread upon dirt roads that were out of repair.

CALIFORNIA'S FIG INDUSTRY ONE WELL WORTH CAREFUL FOSTERING.

BY W. H. BACH.

PROBABLY no other tree grown in Southern California produces a greater variety of valuable food for use both fresh and preserved than does the fig. Eaten fresh, it is served in a variety of styles as well as "out of hand." Dried, preserved, pickled, candied and in a multitude of other forms, it is acceptable.

The White Smyrna, "the fig of Commerce," is best known to the western world, but in the favored regions of the United States, where they are grown, the Adriatic types are most common and, in reality, the most popular. In cultivation the principal difference between the Adriatic and Smyrna types is that the latter is self-pollinating, while the former depends upon fertilizing by the blastophaga grossorum, or fig wasp, the male tree, or capri fig, being necessary for that purpose.

A Smyrna Fig Orchard in the San Joaquin Valley.

The capri fig is not edible. Its sole use is to furnish a home for the fig wasp, which infests it. This wasp, on issuing from the bud end of the capri, becomes covered with the male element, the pollen, which, in its struggles to enter the bud end of the Smyrna, the female, is brushed off, forming the fertilizing medium, without which the fruit drops from the tree when about half grown.

There are two methods of utilizing the fig wasp. One is to plant about six capri fig trees among 100 Smyrnas and allow the insects to scatter at will among the female trees; the other is to plant the capri trees by themselves and when the insect matures, to place the fruit containing them in baskets in the female trees, thus enabling them to circulate freely among the Smyrna fruits. Each of these systems has its advocates and each seems to be productive of results. When the young fruit is pollenated it changes color and any novice who will observe his fruit when about half grown will soon see by the difference in color what fruits are fertilized and which not, the observation being soon confirmed by the unpollinated fruit dropping from the trees.

THE SELF FERTILIZERS.

While the Smyrna type is an exceedingly fine fruit, dries well and is very rich in flavor, the difficulty of securing pollenation has prevented many from making a success of this variety and it is doubtful if it is ever a great success except in the case of large orchards where experienced attention can be given. For this reason the Adriatic, or self-fertilizing types, have been and will probably continue to be the prevailing figs among the people.

Probably the most common is the Adriatic type, medium size, thin skin, pink or amber flesh and generally called "White Pacific," although this is not the type classed by horticulturists as the "Pacific White." This variety produces two and frequently three crops in a season, is quite early and has a long bearing season. A tree of this variety on the writer's ranch, and which is said by old residents to be anywhere from thirty-five to fifty years of age, bears three crops regularly. One ripens late in June or early in July, a second comes on just before the first crop ripens and ripens in August and September and a third comes on when the second is about half grown, and ripens slowly, some remaining till late in October. It preserves nicely, dries fairly well and candies readily. One favorite method with us is to cook it in a heavy syrup into a mass, dry it till it can be rolled out with a rolling pin into sheets about one-fourth to three-eighths inch in thickness, roll in powdered sugar, then cut into squares or any desired shape and put away for a winter confection. It beats any candied figs we were ever able to buy.

The mission fathers brought figs with them when they entered California, and these are still a favorite, as the Mission is yet the most popular of the blue or purple figs and until the introduction of the large orchards of Smyrnas in the vicinity of

POPULARITY OF THE CAPON IS GROWING.

Caponizing the surplus cockerels is growing in favor with poultrymen and some farmers in this country, for the capon grows larger than the cockerel and in addition commands a much better price.

It is impossible to say just how long the operation of caponizing has been performed. It seems quite certain, however, that the practice was familiar to the Chinese more than 2000 years ago. Later it was practiced by the Greeks and Romans, and through medieval times by the people of [illegible] and [illegible] ... [illegible] into America. At present capons are most universally known and appreciated in France, although the business of producing these has advanced gradually in America.

In selecting the breed best suited for caponizing several factors must be taken into consideration. Large capons bring the best prices. Consequently, the breed should be large. It does not pay to caponize small fowls, poultry experts of the United States Department of Agriculture say. Yellow legs and skin, as in other classes of poultry, are most popular. The Plymouth Rocks, Light Brahmas, Cochins, Indian Games, Langshans and Wyandottes are all recommended by different producers, as are also various crosses of these. The Orpington also makes fine capons, but the white legs and skin are somewhat of a disadvantage in this country.

In so far as the effects of the operation and the rapidity and ease of healing are concerned, the time of year when the operation is performed is of little importance. The capons seem to recover well at any time. Certain other considerations, however, influence the time. The age and size of the cockerel are very important. As soon as the cockerels weigh one and one-half to two and one-half pounds or when two to four months old they should be operated upon. The lower age and weight limits apply particularly to the American breeds, while the higher apply to Asiatics.

Capons are usually kept till they are about ten months old. At this time the market is at its best and the birds have made their most profitable gains. The feeds used and the methods of feeding vary greatly, so much so, indeed, that it is futile to give specific directions. For several months after the operation a good growing ration, not a fattening one, is required. It may consist of whole grains, ground grains or a combination of the two, as each feeder finds most profitable and best suited to his locality. As with other poultry, variety must be given for best results. When the capons have no pasture, green feed, such as cut vegetables, should be provided. A somewhat more fattening ration than that required for laying hens seems to give good results.

Because of their quiet disposition capons stand crowding quite well and have been successfully housed with only two or three square feet of floor space to a fowl. Free range for capons, however, is very desirable, as it promotes their continuous, rapid and economical growth. The cost of rearing capons to ten months of age is a big item with present high feed prices, unless a good range is available.

During the last month and a half before marketing the grain in the ration should be gradually increased until the capons are on a full fattening ration. For the last two or three weeks they may be shut up and fed in crates, for every possible ounce at this stage adds to appearance and profit.

SAN DIEGO COUNTY GOATS.

Goat breeding in San Diego county is increasing rapidly, climatic conditions being ideal for such animals. There are about 3000 milch goats in the county, the number having increased 1000 during the past twelve months. Angora goats also do well, the number in the back country of the county at present numbering about 7000 animals. Two large Angora breeders with approximately 10,000 animals have announced their intention of bringing their herds to San Diego county within the next ten months. They will locate permanently, and will engage in the industry on a very large scale.

The hen that eats her eggs and those of other hens has formed a habit that cannot be broken. Cut off her head with the ax. A depraved appetite may be acquired by seeing some other hen eat an egg, as one hog learns from another to eat chickens. A lack of food or of grit, especially of meat scrap, may be a contributing factor.

ASSOCIATIONS HOLD ANNUAL MEETINGS.

REDLANDS.—At the recent meeting of the Redlands-Highlands Fruit Exchange the manager, H. W. Seager, submitted his annual report showing in detail the year's business. More than 2000 cars were shipped during the fiscal year ending Aug. 31, 1920, all of which were from the Redlands-Highlands district, no outside fruit being handled. The company, a subsidiary of the Exchange, ships for ten houses.

Cash receipts for the season totaled considerably over $3,000,000, all of which was disbursed to the growers in this district. The total cost of the Exchange service, including all rentals, salaries and expenses, collection of claims, legal expenses, membership in California Citrus League, field department, detailed market news service, district exchange expenses, and all other service expenses of every nature, was a fraction less than 6 2-3 cents per box. The actual total operating cost per box was less than it was ten years ago.

The report showed that the business of the Fruit Growers' Supply Company has been in excess of $3,500,000 and that after payment of a dividend on the capital investment, the supply company would refund to its members, on purchases, over $250,000. The report referred in detail to the transportation difficulties throughout the season, the Exchange advertising, the increase in railroad and refrigeration rates, and the scale situation in the Redlands-Highlands district.

The outlook for the coming season is that barring unfortunate weather conditions the Redlands-Highlands Exchange will handle approximately 3000 cars of fruit.

Directors elected for the ensuing year were L. M. Winston, I. E. Mills, W. H. Featherston, N. B. Hinckley, R. S. Thompson, J. L. Yarnell, A. M. Patterson, J. D. Langford, H. R. Yerxa, J. S, Edwards, Frank L. Cram and A. E. Frost. L. M. Winston was re-elected president; Frank L. Cram, vice-president, and H. W. Seager, secretary, treasurer and manager.

There was also held during the same week the annual meeting of the Redlands Co-operative Fruit Association, the largest packing-house and association shipping through the Redlands-Highlands Exchange. The reports showed that the railroad strike had cut into the returns on navel oranges, which would have been much better had not considerable fruit, held up by the strike, decayed. The company shipped and packed about 600 cars of fruit. The directors elected by this association were: C. H. Clock, A. G. Simonds, C. L. Clock, L. M. Winston, H. L. Hubbard, H. A. Cherrier, C. F. Churchill, P. Arth, C. E. Blac, W. C. Warner, C. E. Davis and Williams Cochran. The officers are C. H. Clock, president; L. M. Winston, vice-president, and N. Leo Lelean, secretary and manager.

SOLD WORMY APPLES.

H. J. Ryan, horticulture commissioner for Los Angeles county, reports that there is a disposition among apple growers to keep their wormy apples off the market, now that the standardization law is being rigidly enforced. One apple grower who offered for sale apples 35 per cent wormy was fined $100 in a Los Angeles justice court. The law allows less than 10 per cent wormy apples in the box.

INDORSES POWER PROJECT.

Stating that electric power will play a large part in the development of Southern California, directors of the Los Angeles County Farm Bureau have indorsed the power developing program of the Southern California Edison Company. It was felt that the present power supply was inadequate for the needs of the farmers.

SIMPLE MIXTURE MAKES HENS LAY

By W. S. Burgess

Any poultry raiser can greatly increase his profits, easily and quickly by taking advantage of the 35 years' experience of a successful poultryman.

A lifelong study of egg production has resulted in a secret formula of buttermilk and other valuable ingredients that puts pep into lazy hens. Users report increases of two to seven times as many eggs.

This secret formula is now put up in tablet form and is called Comb's Buttermilk Compound Tablets. Simply feed in water or mix with feed.

I am so convinced that this wonderful formula is always successful that I say kill the hen that won't lay after using it.

One million new users are wanted, so for a limited time any reader of this paper can get a big double size box (enough for a season) on free trial by simply writing for it. Send no money. Use the tablets 30 days; if at the end of that time your hens are not laying 2 or 3 times as many eggs; if you are not more than satisfied in every way, the tablets are to cost you nothing. If completely satisfied this big double size box costs you only $1.00 on this introductory offer. Simply send name—post card will do—to Milk Products Co., 107 Creamery Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., and the big box of tablets will be mailed immediately, post paid.

Make Big Poultry Money FEED MILKOLINE 2¢ A Gal.

Jas. B. Keyes, Petaluma, California, writes: "Milkoline prevents worms, lowers death rate increases egg production and keeps a flock in splendid health, thereby preventing disease." The biggest poulty raisers and feeders like Armour & Company, Grant Brothers, etc., use Milkoline constantly. Many say it reduces feeding costs materially.

Guaranteed Trial Offer: Milkoline is sold in convenient size kegs and barrels. Your money will be refunded in full if after using half of amount purchased in 30 days you are not satisfied.

2c A Gallon: When fed according to directions Milkoline costs but 2c a gallon or less. Milkoline is pure modified buttermilk—keeps indefinitely in any climate, will not mould or rot and does not draw flies. Regarded by users as being far superior to buttermilk as it is always uniform in quality and acidity.

BIG BOOK FREE! Simply send name and address—a card will do, and we'll send an interesting booklet telling how Milkoline will increase your poultry and hog profits. Write us or our nearest distributors today.

GROWERS PROFIT BY POTATO FIELD DAY.

The Third Annual Fall Potato Growers' Field Day was held in the San Fernando Valley on Thursday, November 4. This is an activity which, for the past three years, has been staged by the Agricultural Extension Service, represented by the farm adviser's office of Los Angeles county.

The meeting this year was called at the place of J. L. Olsen of Van Nuys. His fields were inspected to note particularly the results obtained by the use of cover crops of Melilotus and vetch as against a cover crop of alfalfa; also to note the results obtained by practicing seed selection. Mr. Olsen is doing some very interesting work along this line.

From the Olsen ranch the party adjourned to the Van Nuys High School, where luncheon was prepared by the domestic science department. After lunch a meeting was held in the auditorium of the high-school building. Assistant Farm Adviser Gordon presided at this meeting. Farm Adviser Hodgson spoke on the work the farm bureau had been attempting to do for potato growers. B. C. Bougher, assistant farm adviser, who had charge of arrangements for the trip to the various fields, told of his observations on the fall crop. George Peters of Bakersfield, president of the California Certified Seed Potato Growers, who has just returned from a trip through the Eastern States, told of potato growing in that section. H. E. Truax of the United States Bureau of Markets told something of marketing conditions and prospects for the fall and winter. R. G. Risser of the California Vegetable Union was the next speaker. T. H. Lambert and E. D. McSweeney, who were recently elected as chairman and vice chairman, respectively, of the newly organized potato growers' department of the Los Angeles County Farm Bureau, were then called upon.

They were optimistic as to the future of the movement and urged all present to join and boost the organization as much as possible. There are many opportunities for such an organization, they said. It is the idea that the department shall hold two regular meetings in the form of spring and fall observation trips and such other meetings as may seem desirable. It is felt that there is a big need for better standardization of potatoes in California, and it was pointed out that if the shipments from California could be graded there would be a much bigger demand for the product from this State.

From the high school the party adjourned to three more potato fields, the last visited being that of T. H. Lambert, near Chatsworth. Mr. Lambert pointed out that it was unnecessary for a fall crop to be a failure, providing the owner took sufficient pains to get good seed, prepare the soil properly, plant at the correct time and look after the crop. He also stated that these things were not especially difficult, but required that a man be "on the job."

CO-OPERATIVE BUYING.

CHINO.—The Chino Farm Bureau has appointed A. R. Brown and James G. Dickey members of a committee to investigate the matter of co-operative buying of seed oats among the members. It was found that buying sacks for the bean growers in this way resulted in a saving of several hundred dollars, and it is anticipated that a good amount can be saved if those needing seed oats will pursue the same scheme.

PILES OF PUMPKINS.

HARPERVILLE.—Hugh Tyler, the "pumpkin king" of Orange county, has another bumper crop of pumpkins this year and they are piled eight or ten feet high in a long ridge along the road, preparatory to being hauled to market. Mr. Tyler raises only the pie pumpkins, which are also excellent stock feed, but he gets most of his pumpkin income from the canneries, which operate in Santa Ana and Garden Grove. The pumpkins are grown between young walnut trees and form a profitable intercrop.

THE FIG INDUSTRY.

Fresno, was the principal fig in California.

The propagation and culture of the fig is very simple. After it is fully established it will produce regular crops of fruit with less attention than any other fruit known to the writer. For the first two or three years the tree should be carefully pruned to give it a proper shape, after that only the removal of surplus wood is required. Naturally, the better attention it receives the larger and finer its fruit will be, and the removal of surplus wood makes a larger fruit, as is the case with any tree.

The fig has few enemies. Scale does not bother it to any extent, but it has a serious enemy in the gopher, which is very fond of its succulent roots, and many a small tree has been killed by the depredations of this rodent. A good method for combating them is to stick an iron rod into the ground ten to eighteen inches and drop a moth ball in the hole. Gophers do not like moth balls.

While figs can be propagated from seeds, even the seeds of the dried variety from the East, these seedlings are not reliable and are seldom true to type. Budding and grafting are used, but the usual method is from cuttings. We have found that the most certain method is to take a small branch of last season's growth and with a sharp knife cut around the socket where it is attached to the larger branch, just sufficiently to cut through the bark and score the wood, then to break it off, thus lifting out a socket. Plant this in sand or light soil so that the tip for perhaps an inch is exposed. Keep reasonably moist, but not wet, and nine out of ten will grow.

Large branches can be cut into lengths of six to twelve inches, cutting just below a bud. Buried in the ground so that one or two buds are exposed, a large proportion of them will grow. The ground should be soft so that a bunch of fine feeder roots will result, as we have found that fewer of these trees die in transplanting than when they have two or three large roots. We never advocate planting a large fig tree. We use one-year cuttings and transplant when six to twelve inches high into the orchard, our experience being that these trees will make a better growth and give fruit before trees that are from three to six feet when taken from the nursery. In transplanting trees with larger roots, they are likely to dry out and either never start growth or make a spasmodic effort to grow and then die the first hot spell.

An easy method of grafting on to an old tree is to take a scion about the size of a lead pencil, cut one end triangular in shape, leaving the bark on the wide side, then make a diamond incision in the tree that will just fit the end of the scion, press it into the V-shaped opening, being careful that the two barks join perfectly, then tie with cord or bind with grafting wax so as to keep out the air. In doing this it is well to cover the end of the branch with wax to prevent drying out. In this way roots of valueless trees can be utilized, but it is a question if in the end one will not be better satisfied to start a new tree.

We give one or two thorough irrigations during the season. On a large tree we give about 100 cubic feet of water when the fruit is half grown, then a lighter irrigation just before the "milk" begins to dry. Care must be taken not to irrigate too late, as that is likely to sour the fruit. Some varieties are more susceptible to souring than others. Air-slacked lime scattered around the tree and allowed to percolate into the earth with the rain or irrigation water will increase the sugar content of the fruit.

Californians are just waking up to the value of the fig as a commercial proposition and larger orchards should be planted and the industry fostered.

FREE LEMONS.

not be tried the second time. But it is a sure thing that the Sicilian lemon will vanish from the markets of this country in time to advance the price of lemons to a figure that will wile the tender-hearted tariff carpenters into taking pity on the poor folks at home who are deprived by high prices of their wonted lemonade and lemon pie.

The American lemon industry, by reason of conditions of climate and soil, is almost wholly confined to this one State; but it is none the less an American industry, and one that bears the burden of supporting in a good American respectable manner a very large number of persons besides the owners of the lemon groves. It pays fine wages to pruners, pickers, packers, fumigators, irrigators, cultivators, truckmen, and a host of others. The 30-cent labor of Sicily is unknown to our lemon business. It is one of the high-class, clean-cut, clear-strain, all-American industries, honestly seeking a fair chance to command its own in the markets of [illegible] ing that the [illegible] hours workmen of Europe shall meet it on the level at the port of entry.

And the people of this part of California, where the bulk of the American lemons are grown and packed, ought to be extremely thankful that the low tariff and no-tariff crowd in Washington received such a setback in the recent election. It doesn't mean, of course, that the growers can afford to sit back and wait, for there is bound to be a conflict over tariffs. The big importers' interests won't give up without a tough fight. If the lemon men will zealously push their claims before the new regime, however, they will find that their pleas will be given a sympathetic and understanding attention. And they are bound to win, which is, of course, the important thing of all.

When walnut jobbers in Los Angeles agreed to place orders amounting to 50 per cent of last year's business the California Walnut Growers' Association agreed to market part of their crop through the jobbers. The growers are shipping about forty cars per day East. This year's price is 30 per cent below what it was last year.

GRAZING CONDITIONS ON ARIZONA RANGES.

PHOENIX (Ariz.)—Forest reserve supervisors in Northern Arizona, with slack feed conditions present, due to a dry fall, have warned cattle owners to move their increase from the reserve ranges. OLD AUTO ENGINES DOING PUMP DUTY.

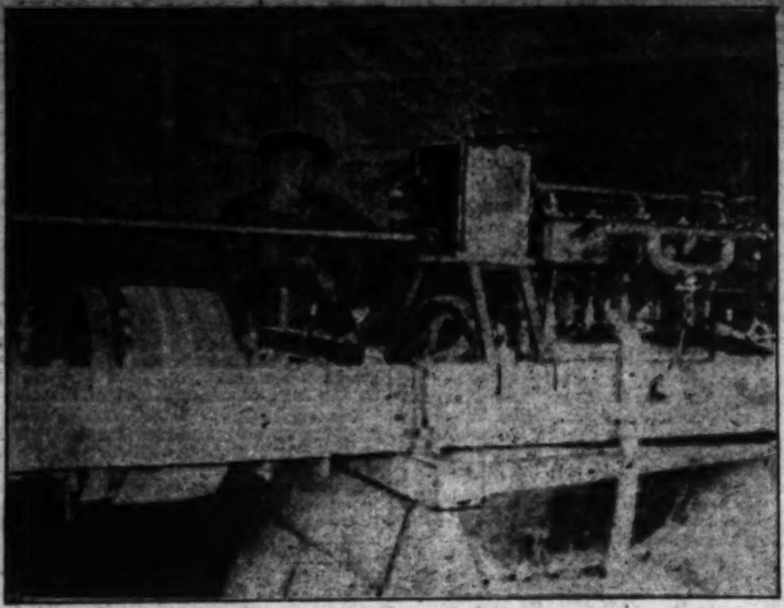
POMONA.—Page the Angel Gabriel! There is a big task awaiting him in the automobile graveyards of the country. Auto engines of days gone by must be summoned out of rusty, dilapidated shells and put to work again.

It all comes about in this way: Lowering water levels throughout Southern California are compelling orchardists who have never before worried about having sufficient water to begin to think about auxiliary pumping plants for emergencies. There is an unprecedented demand for gas engines, dynamos and belt-driving machines of all kinds to run the modern pumps that are everywhere being installed to meet the emergency. And that demand is beginning to include about every old-time automobile engine that can still be coaxed to turn over in response to a gas explosion.

One of the best examples of the efficient use of an old automobile engine for pumping (and there are many in use for this purpose in Los Angeles and Orange counties) is to be found on the place of Fred J. Smith, a mile northeast of Pomona, on the Claremont road. There are eighty acres of citrus trees to be irrigated on this place and common sense precaution demands that there be a supplementary source of water in addition to that provided by the San Antonio Canyon gravity system upon which the district has always relied. Mr. Smith and his son Russell have solved the problem with an old automobile engine and an up-to-the-minute turbine pump.

It is not that the water supply of San Antonio Canyon is playing out to any unusual degree. As in all other citrus districts, two factors have contributed to the growers' anxiety—the long series of dry years have diminished the flow in the under and over-ground streams that contribute to the main supply and new groves coming on have further taxed existing irrigation facilities. All the time, too, the water lift for pumping has been lowering. The growers expect it to come back surfaceward when rainy years come, but they don't like to gamble with chance—and extra water, as they know, might be badly needed when it could be obtained in no other way than by pumping. The growers want to be safe at all times.



An Old Auto Engine Put to Work Again.

Russell Smith of Pomona and the automobile motor which he has hitched up to a turbine pump to help out in irrigation emergencies.

Russell Smith found the automobile engine in a Los Angeles shop. He wanted a powerful motor that he could run at much less than its rated speed, saving wear and tear and at the same time getting necessary results. His search was rewarded by the finding of a ninety-horsepower motor out of a big car of the vintage of 1912. He set this up in a new pumphouse and hitched it to a turbine pump. Running at 750 revolutions, the motor exerts around fifty horsepower, but as only about thirty-five horsepower is needed to do the work, the engine is given a comparatively light duty to perform. The cost of the engine, added to that of setting it up, amounted to a little less than $1500.

To run the motor the Smiths use, not gasoline, but natural gas, as fuel. This required some tinkering with the engine, but the results, according to the users, are most satisfactory. To develop the thirty-five horsepower required, it is stated, costs about 18 cents an hour, as compared with an estimated cost of 60 cents an hour for the use of electricity and a dynamo. The well goes down 200 feet and there is a present lift of ninety feet, as compared with sixty-five feet last year and an average of forty-five feet for a number of years before that time.

NEW DAM PROJECTS FOR VENTURA COUNTY.

VENTURA.—At the meeting of the Ventura County Chamber of Commerce, held on October [illegible] at the El Robiar Hotel, Ojai, Farm Adviser Staunton presented the plan of supplying Ojai, Ventura and perhaps Saticoy with good, pure water for home use and also for irrigating districts at present being supplied and new areas now being dry farmed.

He said that he observed that the sources of water for the Saticoy, Mound and Montalvo districts were becoming heavily impregnated with alkali salts and that the trees and soil were showing the effects of it, causing him to look around for some good supply to remedy this condition. The final outcome was the idea of damming up the stream in the Matilija Canyon in one or two places where there are natural sites and holding in check the flood waters which race through there in the winter time, doing damage frequently to districts bordering on the stream and allowing much needed water to run away and become lost.

By putting in two dams two objects can be accomplished, Mr. Staunton stated. The difficulty of getting water over the range between the Ojai and Santa Clara Valleys can be eliminated, he said, and there would not be all the drain upon the supply as where there was only one reservoir. The upper dam would supply the high line gravity flow to the Ojai and Santa Clara, while the lower could care for the Santa Ana district, which now has no irrigating supply.

the Ventura avenue orchards and Ventura itself.

The idea met with approval of the many ranchers and business men present at the meeting, and after a discussion Mr. Louis Drapeau was voted chairman of a committee to look into feasibility of the project.

CHAFFEY HIGH BUYS EXPERIMENTAL TRACT.

ONTARIO.—Purchase of a sixty-acre tract, set principally to peaches and apricots, to be used as a deciduous experimental farm, in connection with Chaffey High School, was practically assured recently, when the Chaffey trustees entered into a contract with Charles Latimer, prominent local fruit man, to buy his East Sixth street ranch for approximately $20,000.

The completion of the deal hinges on the development of a well which the San Antonio Water Company is now drilling at the eastern edge of the tract. If this well produces according to expectations, the purchase is to be made, and indications are said to be good for an abundance of water.

In the bond issue of $175,000, recently voted by the enlarged Chaffey district, which includes Ontario, Upland, Cucamonga, Etiwanda, Alta Loma and other near-by communities, the sum of $35,000 was set aside for deciduous experimental purposes.

The purchase of the experimental farm will mean much to the deciduous fruit industry in this section, which is rapidly growing in importance. It is planned to use the tract for deciduous culture experiments, and for practical field work for students of the Chaffey Junior College of Agriculture. Just as the Chaffey citrus orchard is being used to teach growers new and improved methods, and as the Chaffey truck farm is giving practical demonstrations in farming, so the new deciduous ranch is expected to prove a valuable aid to the growers of apricots and peaches.

George P. Weldon, pomologist of Chaffey, is shortly to be sent to the farm school at Davis to inspect some new varieties of deciduous fruit, recently imported from the Orient, and possibly to bring some of them back for experimental purposes here.

Peanuts enrich the soil and the Spanish variety does well in sandy loam in California.

LIVESTOCK BULLETIN.

BY R. T. EVANS

George M. Brown of Burr farm, Los Angeles, reports that during the past year this establishment has been carrying forty cows on yearly test and is now beginning to find out what class of cows it was fortunate enough to secure for foundation animals. One of the highly interesting facts discovered is that it is not always the high seven-day record cow that is the winner at the end of the year. Here are some of the late records that have been completed in this popular herd: Cascade Johanna, at five years and five months, produced 22,030.4 pounds of milk and 903.82 pounds of butter in a year; Fly Karel Johanna Korndyke, at seven years and three months, produced 15,598.9 pounds of milk and 548.7 pounds of butter with a three-quarter udder; La Conner Pontiac Albino Girl, as a junior two-year-old, in 305 days produced 16,378.7 pounds of milk and 681.25 pounds of butter; Clothilde Walker Sadie Vale, as a junior two-year-old, in a year produced 16,221.6 pounds of milk and 618 pounds of butter; Carnation Rag Apple De Kol, as a junior two-year-old in a year produced 18,570.9 pounds of milk and 496 pounds of butter; Duchess Orndyke Sadie Vale, as a senior yearling, in 305 days produced 13,349 pounds of milk and 572 pounds of butter. This last-named heifer, besides having a fine record, has wonderful type, having been made junior champion at the 1919 Los Angeles Live Stock Show. The herd of six females, consisting of two aged cows, three junior two-year-olds and one yearling, produced in their lactation period 3818 pounds of butter, an average of 636 pounds each, and a total of 96,148 pounds of milk, or an average of 16,024 pounds each. These advanced registry reports conclusively prove that it pays to test out cows for long-distance records, and the owners of cows with such records as these are in a posi[illegible] right track, and in a short time will be able to determine the progress that has been made in breeding up a herd of high producers that will return a handsome profit. The old 'Hit-and-Miss' method of selecting good dairy cows without a record test is rapidly becoming a thing of the past. Let us have more long-distance records.

Southern California dairy cattle are bound to be heard from at the Pacific International Live Stock Show, which began November 13 and will continue until November 20. In all, twenty-six head of prize cattle were sent to the show, in charge of Eart Sturgis, superintendent of live stock for the Santa Anita rancho. There is a prize of $300 offered for the best herd of dairy cattle from one State, consisting of twelve animals, and the Southern Californians are out to get this prize and a handful of championships. G. M. Brown of Burr farm states that there are 285 cattle entered in the Holstein classes alone at the show and that the going for the champions will not be easy.

The Santa Anita rancho is the largest shipper, exhibiting twelve head, led by the California State Fair champion bull, Merci Lad Korndyke Burke. The grand champion bull at the 1920 Los Angeles show, Ditcher Spofford Korndyke Lad 5th, the George Junior Republic herd sire, is at the show, with two heifers. E. R. Stalder of Chino sent the first prize junior bull calf at the Los Angeles show, Nuevo Clantha Ormsby, with four heifers. E. R. Barry of Daggett sent two fine cows. W. J. Higdon of Tulare is showing Prince Bonnie Walker, junior champion bull at the State Fair this year. Burr farm sent Bess Creole Belle 3rd, first in the aged-cow class at the Los Angeles show this year, and the 2nd and 5th 3-year-old cows at the same show. Southern California dairymen have every reason to be proud of the district's representation at the Portland event.

Merritt and Bowers of the Tagus ranch near Tulare have established another record for Tulare live stock in the sale of two Belgian colts for a reported consideration of $7000. These two registered stallions, Brussels, a four-year-old, and Liberty, a two-year-old, were bred on the Tagus ranch and were prize winners over the fair circuit this year.

Breeders are requested to send in to the Farm and Tractor Section from week to week news items which would be of interest to the live-stock field in general. If

CALF SLAUGHTER TO MEAN HIGHER MILK.

SAN BERNARDINO.—The first year for the San Bernardino and Riverside counties cow-testing association ended last month. Edward Bahler, official cow tester for the two counties, says that during the year the herds have been decreased by at least 25 per cent, this being partly accounted for by the fact that in several instances, dairymen have become convinced that pure-breds pay better and have disposed of some of their grade cows and put the money received for them into a smaller number of pure-breds.

The most serious side of the situation, looking to the future, according to Mr. Bahler, is that not 25 per cent of the calves are being raised. The heifer calves are being sent to the block along with their brothers. This means a scarcity of cows in the county in the near future and higher prices for both cattle and milk.

It is a year now, also, since the importation project was carried out which brought into the two counties many pure-bred animals. Asked as to the outcome of the project, Mr. Bahler states that wherever the dairymen put up enough money to buy really high-class stuff, they are more than pleased with the outcome and are keen to buy from two to ten more, each. Those who did not understand how very expensive the real thing in pure-breds is, did not pay enough to get it and are not satisfied.

The effort is being made to carry out the same plan here as in Riverside county whereby a pure-bred calf is exchanged for an aged grade sire. It is meeting with a good deal of favor with both owners of pure-bred stock and those who wish at least to have a pure-bred sire at the head of their herds.

Mr. Bahler says that at least nine out of ten dairymen are putting their corn into the silos too green. Experiments carried out over a number of years, he says, show that the corn should be dry enough that the grains are dented and that no milk will show when the corn is scratched. The stack should be dry at least one-third of the way up from the ground.

He says that most men seem to think silage is made like sauerkraut, that it must ferment and get sour. In that case, it loses at least 25 per cent of its value, being deficient in sugar, starch and fat. Besides, the cows do not find the acid palatable and will not eat so much. They like it sweet and mild. Mr. Bahler is doing his best to get people to wait longer before they cut their corn.

SILAGE THE CHEAPEST OF SUCCULENT FEEDS.

Silage is the best and cheapest form in which to store succulent feed. Many forage crops can be made into silage, but corn, where it can be grown successfully, makes the best silage.

Good silage depends upon cutting the crop at the right stage, fine cutting, even distribution, thorough packing and plenty of moisture in the cut material. When rightly put up and carefully fed, there should be little if any loss through spoiling.

Silage is well suited for feeding to all live stock. Dairy cows need it perhaps more than other classes of animals, because the succulence it supplies is very necessary for large milk production. It is a cheap and economical feed for beef cattle, from breeding cow to fattening steer. Sheep like it, and it is well suited to their needs. Even horses and mules may be fed limited quantities of good silage with excellent results.

Let's get away from raising calves on milk

It would be foolish to deny that good calves can be raised on milk. They can. But in view of the fact that there is another method of raising them which is equally effective, and at the same time, far less expensive, the natural query is "Why feed milk to your calves"?

Blatchford's Calf Meal

Thousands of farmers on thousands of farms have entirely discontinued the practice of raising their calves on milk because they have found they can grow them as rapidly and develop them every bit as well on Blatchford's Calf Meal. Yet Blatchford's, which is a milk-substitute, can be used at less than half the cost of using milk.

You, Mr. Farmer are a business man. In the conduct of your business, economy of operation looms up with every bit as much importance as it does in any other industry. Therefore, the merits of Blatchford's Calf Meal should interest you. Providing as it does, the elements the calf requires for quick growth, thrift and health—and providing them in proper form—the opportunity its use presents to save milk and to save money, should engage your attention.

100 pounds makes 100 gallons of nourishing milk-substitute

Blatchford's is GUARANTEED. You take no chances when you use it because the manufacturers stand back of every bag sold. We have no hesitancy in recommending to you that you try it. We KNOW you will find it a profitable thing to do.

PROPER LEVELING OF FIELD ALL IMPORTANT IN ALFALFA GROWING.

BY P. J. COONEY.

PERRIS.—Experiences of farmers in the Perris Valley indicate that for the successful growing of alfalfa the first essential is the proper leveling of the ground. The leveling process, as many ranchers have found, must be done accurately or good results cannot be expected to follow.

Those who have had experience in planting large areas to this forage plant agree that certain persons possess what is known as the "leveling eye," and that those who have this peculiar qualification are comparatively few in number. Expert land levelers, in fact, are in high demand.

"Leveling" is hardly the correct term. For alfalfa land, if properly prepared for planting, is not level, but has a regular and uniform slope, which differs in various soils and localities. In the Perris Valley, where the soil is a sandy loam, a uniform inclination of eight feet to the mile is generally used.

The first step in preparing a field for alfalfa is known as the "rough work." Most land in its natural state contains hollows and ridges quite evident to the ordinary eye. The ridges are scraped off, generally by a fresno scraper, which cuts off the tops and drops the earth in the low places.

For finding how much soil to take from a ridge, a unique method has been devised by George Woodward, an alfalfa grower of Perris Valley. The ridge is first cut through by a ditch, the bottom of which is roughly on a level with the adjacent ground. Water is then turned into the cut, and when the water runs through the ditch easily it is then apparent that the true level has been reached. Then the ground on both sides of the ditch is scraped down to the level of the bottom of the ditch, the earth being deposited in some low spot. The whole area is thus roughly leveled. The next step is a thorough plowing to the depth of at least seven inches. Some ranchers prefer to plow the land dry; others give it a preliminary soaking. Dry plowing is, of course, the easier, but is not considered as valuable as wet plowing, which requires more power, whether horses or tractor are used. The rough work and plowing are generally done before the fall rains, or after the first light rain.

DRAGGING THE LAND.

Following the plowing the land is dragged both up and down the slope and from right to left. The drag used here is one especially built for that purpose and consists of two 2x10 timbers twenty-two feet long. These are joined by four cross pieces made of 2x6 timbers. The cross pieces fit into slots in the sides of the ten-inch timber but are not nailed or fastened to the side timbers. The ten inch side timbers are held in place by steel rods which pass from one ten-inch timber to the other just in front of the cross pieces. This drag can be regulated as to the amount of earth it will catch simply by loosening the bolts and raising or lowering the cross bar, which may rest upon the ground or which may be as high as two inches off the ground. The thorough dragging of the newly plowed field eliminates all high points left by the fresnoing and the plowing.

The next step is the construction of the ridges between the checks. The width of the check varies according to the locality. Generally in the Perris Valley about thirty-three feet has been found to be best. In adobe lands elsewhere a much wider check, sometimes as wide as sixty feet, and very often the square check system, is used. This latter consists in laying off a field with ridges running not only from top to bottom but from right to left, thus leaving the field like a checker board. Both the wide check and square check systems require an abundance of water. The narrow check system has been found to be much preferable in districts where the water supply is somewhat limited.

The next step in the planting of the field is the locating of the ridges, and it is at this point that a professional surveyor with his theodolite is often called into service. Generally, however, the line for the ridges is carefully laid out by setting laths or small stakes upright in a line, so that they sight correctly from the head to the foot of the field. The ridges themselves are thrown up by plowing twice along the line of the stakes. In doing this the additional precaution is often taken of having one man lead the horses in a straight line, keeping the stakes before him in a line as he walks. By plowing up and down twice along the line, a ridge is thrown up about twenty inches in heigth. The crosswise harrowing which immediately follows lowers it somewhat, but does much to fill up the furrows on each side of the ridge.

For completing this process, a special drag known as the ridger is used. This is made of 2x12 timbers built in the form of a capital "A," open about sixteen feet at the wide end and at the small end, which is not closed, about three feet. This drag is drawn astride of the ridge with the wide end first—toward the horses. The sloping sides gather up the soil, throwing it toward the center and "point up" the ridge as it is squeezed through the small end of the drag. Following this, the strips are again dragged by the regular twenty-two-foot drag.

So far as the ordinary observer is concerned, the land will now appear to be perfectly level save for the required slope. That it is nowhere near level is very quickly shown when it is submitted to a test of flooding with water. At the end of a few days the high streaks and spots can be easily detected by their lighter color, while in the low spots water will still linger. As soon as the ground is sufficiently dry, these are taken down by the fresno and each strip dragged again with the drag cross pieces set about an inch and one-half above the level of the runner.

In order to uniformly irrigate the strips there must not be enough water only, but it must have sufficient head. That is, it must run with sufficient impetus to reach the full length of the strip in a reasonable length of time. A rancher might have enough water, but if it is delivered too slowly, it will sink into the ground before reaching the end of the check. To secure this sufficient "push" in the water, alfalfa ranchers in the Perris district, all of whom depend on water raised by pumping, store their water in reservoirs the bottoms of which are about on a level with the level of the alfalfa field. This gives the water coming out of the reservoir considerable pressure behind it, enough to carry it the full length of the field and to drain it off at the bottom of the slope.

Seeding generally takes place after the first fall of rain and may occur any time from October 15 to February 15. Occasionally seeding has been done in March and even as late as April, but to seed in the latter month is taking big chances.

No operation in the preparation of land for crops requires more care and accuracy than leveling for alfalfa. A low spot undetected until after the land is seeded will result in every irrigation forming there a pool of water that will blister-kill the alfalfa plants in the hollow. Occasionally a rancher is so much impressed by the importance of accurate leveling that he employs a surveyor, but the more general and more economical plan is to engage, during the finishing part of the process at least, some local man who, by his successful laying out of some standing alfalfa field, has demonstrated that he has the leveling eye.

No Slippage

The long, wide track of the "Caterpillar" Tractor distributes the tractor's weight over so great an area that the ground pressure per square inch is negligible. At the same time it serves another purpose—prevents slippage on any ground surface.

Eliminating slippage prevents power waste—puts the power where it is wanted, in pulling force at the drawbar. That's why the "Caterpillar" Tractor leads in power.

CARE OF MACHINERY IN RAINY SEASON SAVES REPAIR BILLS.

BY MARVIN H. LOOMIS.

IN CALIFORNIA the dry season has passed and the wet season is upon us. As long as the days are bright and the nights are fine, tractors and farm machinery and implements are not greatly impaired when allowed to stand out in the field or behind the barn when unused. But once the rains start in depreciation of equipment left in the open is rapid, sure and expensive.

A few dollars spent in sheltering farm machinery and implements and in putting them in proper shape to withstand the attack of the elements in winter will be worth a hundred in the ultimate saving by arresting depreciation. The plowing season is on, and at this time of the year the tractor and implements are used more than at any other. But this is no excuse for allowing the rains, fogs and heavy dews to rust the metal parts and decay wood and leather.

A lean-to, built back of the barn, eight or ten feet wide and from twelve to sixteen feet long, with the back roughly boarded up and a canvas flap to go down over the front is an excellent place to house the tractor when it is not in use. A special shed should be built to house the plows, harrows, seeders, mowers and other tools. Most of the large ranches in California have farm equipment sheds in which all manner of farm machines and tools are put away at the end of each day's work, but the farmer with a small field crop acreage or a ten to twenty-acre orange grove is inclined to drag his discs and plows to the old pepper tree, half expecting the tree to protect them from rain.

DON'T SPARE THE PAINT.

During the fall months the tractor, that is, the outside parts, should be given a coat of paint, and the working parts should be greased. In places where the paint has been scraped off wet weather will have a tendency to start rust eating the metal away. Do not use ordinary house paint, but special paint for metal finishing. One good coat is generally sufficient.

This Kind of Housing for Implements Costs Money.

When tools are not in use give the bright parts a coat of transmission grease. These tools should be placed in a sheltered place, on boards, so that no metal part will come into contact with the ground. Once the moldboard share and landside of a plow becomes pitted with rust it is hard to do an efficient job of plowing until the rusted parts have acquired a polish by much use. The same is true of the disc and other harrows. If the disc harrow, for example, is stored in a shed or other floorless building it should be run upon boards so that the discs will not become embedded in the ground. The implements should be carefully cleaned of all accumulations of earth before greasing. The paint, particularly on the wooden parts, should be renewed frequently.

Alfalfa and grain mowers are often allowed to stand in the field after the day's work and in most cases are not properly greased when laid away for the winter. Get the mower under shelter if possible, but in any case clean the knife bar, wipe it with a greasy rag and store in a dry place. Put a block of wood under the midpoint of the tongue, so that it will not acquire a permanent sag. If the mower is stored with the cutter bar in a vertical position place a block of wood under the shoe to take the weight off the frame. All accumulations of vegetable matter and dirt should be removed and all bearings or bright parts of the machine well greased. The same rule applies to binders, if the farmer has any.

KEEP PLOWS IN SHAPE.

Now that the busy season has come for the plow and the harrow in the grain, beet and bean fields, and the disc will soon be called upon to turn under the cover crop in the orchard, this is the time for overhauling the implements. Do not wait until the day the implement is to be used, after a season of disuse, to make repairs.

If the share of the moldboard plow is of cast iron, and badly worn, it is cheaper to renew it than to try to get along with a bad job of plowing with it. If it is a steel plow, and is badly worn, it should be sharpened. If the landside is badly worn and a detachable sole is provided, replace the sole or it will be necessary to buy a new landside. Usually the moldboard is in two parts, shin and moldboard proper. Renew the shin if it is badly worn, and in replacing be sure that the moldboard is bolted tightly to the frog. If the bracing is loose, tighten up well. Nothing is more disagreeable than loose bracing on a plow. Examine the bearings of the gauge wheel. If the bearings are plain, do not lubricate them, but if they are badly worn replace them with new ones. See that the gauge wheel standard is bolted rigidly to the beam if you wish to do the best work. Look at the point of the jointer and if it is made of chilled cast iron, renew it. If steel, it may be sharpened. See that it is bolted rigidly to the beam.

Hundreds of hillside plows are used by the grain men of Southern California. Examine these special plows and look for wear and tear. The swivel joints in hillside plows should work freely, but have little lost motion. If adjustment is provided on your hillside plows take up the lost motion, otherwise renew the bearings. The latch should be adjusted to catch and hold the moldboard tightly against the standard. The jointer should reverse automatically when the moldboard is swivelled. See that the clevis shifting lever latches properly in the required position. Some hillside plows are equipped with a shoe on the landside, by means of which vertical suction may be regulated.

In gang and disc plows, used in beet and bean culture, take down the wheel bearings, clean with cloths saturated in kerosene oil, make adjustments if necessary and repack with heavy grease before assembling. Examine the frame for loose bolts and take up any lost motion in the landing and lifting levers. Sharpen or replace the discs if they are badly worn. The scraper connections should be tight, and if the scrapers are badly worn replace with new ones.

In overhauling disc harrows examine the frame connections and see that all bolts are tight and that gang bearings and frame bracing are attached rigidly. Bent or broken frame bracings should be replaced or straightened. Examine the gang bearings and wipe them off with a kerosene-soaked rag. Bearings on disc harrows show wear more quickly than any other part, unless they are of the dust-proof kind. If wood bushings are used have a supply on hand to replace worn ones. See that oil pipes are cleaned out and that grease and oil gets down into the bearings. If grease cups are used see that they are screwed down sufficiently to insure a supply of grease in the bearings. Pack bearings with grease occasionally. Discs should be sharpened, if dull, so that they will cut trash and penetrate the ground readily. See to it that all levers work freely and positively and that they are bolted securely to the stub tongue bracket.

The Farwest Sales Company, Los Angeles and Market streets, Los Angeles, have taken over the Southern California distribution of the Allis-Chalmers line of tractors and farm machines. How Orchardists Are "Shorting" the Manure Circuit.

BY ROBERT W. HODGSON.

As a means of supplying much-needed organic matter for fertilization of orchards, the plan of "shorting" the manure circuit is today, as perhaps never before, receiving favorable consideration at the hands of Southern California citrus growers. In all districts unusual interest is being shown in the direct application to groves of materials which in the past have largely gone to live-stock raisers for feeding purposes. Large quantities of bean straw, weedy and spoiled alfalfa hay, barley straw, and other materials of a similar nature are now being applied to citrus groves in the place of the manure which formerly was used.

Hundred tons of bean straw for grove of Fred J. Smith northeast of Pomona. The straw is being applied at the rate of from four and a half to five tons to an acre and is going into twenty acres of bearing trees. Manure is being used on sixty acres of grove.

And until such time as diversified farming with live-stock raising as an important side line comes into more general use in this part of the State it seems reasonable to expect more and more use of such materials as fertilizers. For suitable organic matter must be had if citrus orchards are to be maintained in good bearing condition. The supply of animal manures which in the past has furnished the most important source of organic matter is rapidly diminishing with the advent of the automobile, the truck, and the tractor.

This Riverside orchardist has just given his grove a good carpet of barley straw.

Bales of bean straw distributed through an Anaheim district grove ready for spreading.

While there is no denying the fact that the fullest utilization of such materials is derived only when they are fed to animals and the manure resulting is taken care of, at the present time there is considerable evidence to show that the competition for manures has advanced the price to the point where it is more profitable for many to purchase feedstuffs and apply them directly than to purchase manure.

MUCH BEAN STRAW USED.

By far the most important materials containing feeding value for animals now being used as fertilizer in citrus orchards are bean straw and inferior grades of alfalfa hay. Thousands of tons of these materials, particularly the former, are at the present time being spread on citrus groves and huge stacks of baled bean straw along the edges of orchards are by no means an uncommon sight.

The question of the value of such materials as fertilizer is naturally of the utmost consideration to the grower, particularly in relation to the price which he must pay for them. Hundreds of analyses of leguminous materials made during recent years show that the variations between different materials such as bean straw and alfalfa hay are on the average no greater than those between individual samples of the same materials. For general purposes they may all be said to possess approximately the same composition. Bean straw of all kinds, alfalfa hay, and other leguminous materials of a similar nature may be considered to have about the following composition: Water, 15 per cent; organic matter, 82 per cent; nitrogen, 1.25 per cent; phosphoric acid, 5 per cent, and potash, 1.5 per cent. Individual samples will be found to vary considerably from the above, but on the average the analysis given is close enough for all practical purposes.

What knowledge is available regarding the value of these materials for fertilizer indicates that of primary importance are the organic matter and the nitrogen. The latter is fairly readily available in most soils and is not subject to the losses which occur in manure nitrogen. A fair value for such nitrogen would seem to be in the neighborhood of $10 per unit. Valuing the organic matter at 5 cents per unit of twenty pounds (a purely arbitrary figure) bean straw or alfalfa with the above analysis would figure to be worth $16.60 per ton, a price which is not far from that now quoted citrus growers in many districts. What data is available would indicate that the phosphoric acid and potash contents may well be ignored as of little importance, at least for most California soils. Figured on this basis it can be readily seen that bean straw and alfalfa hay are worth more than twice as much as the usual fresh manure from the nitrogen content as well as from the organic matter standpoint. With the extremely dry manures this is, of course, not the case, although the greater bulk, and also difference in origin of organic matter, and freedom from extraneous material are advantages in favor of these materials even though they are of similar analysis to the so-called concentrated manures.

Amounts applied vary considerably, running from two to five tons per acre. A commonly used amount is a bale to the tree, which will run between four and five tons. Methods of application also vary, the usual method being that of surface spreading. During the past two or three years, however, many growers have adopted the furrow method of application with splendid results. Where the straw is very viny it is sometimes difficult to pack it in the furrows and some growers are now running the straw through a feed cutter before applying. The universal time for applying such materials is during the fall and winter months.

During the past two or three years some growers have adopted the furrow method of application of leguminous straw as fertilizer with good results.

BARLEY AND OTHER STRAWS.

In some districts growers are now applying considerable amounts of barley and other cereal straws as fertilizer. Such materials must be sharply differentiated from leguminous materials as their values as fertilizer are markedly different. They have different analyses and decay quite differently in the soil. A fair sample of the composition of barley or wheat or other cereal straw is as follows: Water, 15 per cent; organic matter, 82 per cent; nitrogen, .5 per cent; phosphoric acid, .2 per cent, and potash, .75 per cent. The main differences in analysis are seen to be in the nitrogen, phosphoric acid, and potash content, the nitrogen, which is the important element, being approximately one-half that of leguminous materials.

Of more importance, however, is the way cereal straws decay in the soil. Instead of a fairly rapid and ready decomposition by soil bacteria, on account of their cellulose content they resist decay. Moreover, in decaying there is much evidence to show that there is an actual draught on the soil for soluble nitrates which must be taken at the expense of the trees. Of course, they do ultimately decay and furnish organic matter, but the process of decaying seems to be much longer drawn out and different in nature from that of leguminous materials.

On heavy soils, however, or soils already high in organic matter content, the use of such materials for the physical effect they have in opening up the soil may be advisable. Amounts and methods of application for cereal straws are about the same as for bean straw and alfalfa.

As an additional source of leguminous materials for organic matter for citrus orchards, growers are now discussing the use of waste lands for planting to rank growing legumes such as sweet clover, or some of the native lupines, etc., which would provide large tonnages of readily decayable organic material at a comparatively low cost.

Karakul Industry Established in Southern California

[illegible] possibility of utilizing waste brush lands in the hill sections of California and other Western States has long been a subject of discussion and investigation, and new suggestions along this line have always aroused considerable interest. Many experiments have been conducted in turning goats into such areas and noteworthy success has been reported in different regions in which [illegible] and sheep raising would have proven unprofitable. The Angora goat in particular has demonstrated its hardiness in such environment.

The Karakul sheep, brought to this country a number of years ago from Russian Turkestan, is another waste land rustler that has attracted the favorable attention of investigators. First established on brush range in New Mexico and Texas, this mutton, wool and fur-producing sheep has in the past two years been given a thorough trial in Central California and has now been introduced into the southern end of this State. Reports, including announcements by government experts, indicate that it has demonstrated its adaptability to conditions prevailing over wide areas of brush-covered California land that has up to this time been found unsuitable for any productive purpose.

Yearling Karakul ewe with her first lamb. Dr. C. C. Young, who introduced the Karakul sheep to this country, is holding her.

The Karakul was introduced in the United States by Dr. C. C. Young, a native of Russia (now an American citizen,) who became convinced of its adaptability to southwestern conditions upon the occasion of a visit to this country several years ago. Dr. Young spent much time studying range conditions in New México and Texas and became convinced, after investigation, that the losses suffered in dry years by sheep men in many semidesert regions made the raising of sheep in such areas too much of a risk. He felt sure, on the other hand, that the Karakul, which found sustenance on almost identical lands in Turkestan, would thrive in many regions that would not support the ordinary sheep. The result was an importation of several rams and ewes of this breed.

Because of the Karakul's known ability to strongly impress its own characteristics upon its descendants Dr. Young at once proceeded to cross the rams with other sheep, with the result, he says, that the tight-curled Persian lamb fur, for which the breed is famous, often appeared in the young of the first cross and was quite commonly noted in those of the second cross. Lambs from such crosses yielded a "Persian lamb" of good grade, while animals allowed to grow to the wool stage produced a wool which, Dr. Young says, brought the same price on the market as the wool of the ordinary sheep.

From Dona Ana county, New Mexico, where he kept his imported animals, Dr. Young came to Kerman, Fresno county, California, leaving behind him with New Mexico and Texas sheep men several valuable Karakuls and crosses. In the Kerman district he put his sheep through trying tests to demonstrate their adaptability to harsh conditions.

Early in the present year Dr. Young turned some of his Karakuls over to the Bureau of Forestry in order that the latter might make a test with them on brush-covered hills in Madera county. The results were so satisfactory that the whole flock of 300 was transferred from Kerman to Fresno Flats in the same county, being turned out in hillside brush land at an elevation of 3900 feet. Here, their owner reports, they did well through an exceptionally dry season.

Recently the flock was brought to Southern California by Dr. Young and turned, along with 1600 goats, onto brush range near Saugus. The animals have since been divided into groups and placed at various points on hillsides against the Sierra Madre Range, some of them being as far east as the Cucamonga district. The goats are mostly Angoras and many of them were formerly on a foothill and canyon estate in the San Fernando Valley. It is Dr. Young's intention to run the sheep with the goats to test the adaptability of both to brush land conditions, keeping them well up in the mountains in the winter and in the lower levels in summer.

"I believe that much land in Southern California that is now wholly unproductive can be made to produce mutton, wool and Persian lamb fur through the introduction of the Karakul," says Dr. Young. "The Karakul has the characteristics of the Angora goat in its ability to live under what would be almost impossible conditions to ordinary sheep. It travels rapidly, reaches up after the highest limbs of the brush, has wonderful endurance and can go for long periods without water. The fact the ewes give an abundance of milk causes the rapid development of the lambs during early months, bringing them speedily to the point where they can rustle for themselves.

Karakul lamb thirty-four days old, weight forty pounds. Photographed on Dr Young's ranch at Kerman.

"The ability of the Karakul to reproduce its own type is probably the most remarkable thing about it. If coarse wool blood is adhered to, the tight-curled Persian lamb fur for which the breed has so long been known is often produced in the first cross and quite commonly is obtained in the second. Excellent results have been obtained with common Mexican sheep.

"The old, old idea that the ewe is always sacrificed in the Karakul's native country in order to get the fur of the unborn lamb is erroneous. The curl which is so prized in good specimens of fur opens out within a few days after birth, necessitating the killing of lambs picked out for their fur within a short time after they are dropped. The story about the killing of the ewes has undoubtedly prejudiced many against the fur, although it has always had an extensive sale in this country. The market for Karakul lamb fur produced in America is bound to be influenced by the growing scarcity of wild fur-bearing animals."

Protecting Garden Plants from Frost and Winds.

BY ARTHUR E. HENDERLEY.

OF COURSE, those who yet have tomatoes and other frost-tender vegetables still untouched by cold weather want to save them as long as possible; want to keep them producing until their normal period of production is over. And the householder who has nurtured tender flowers wishes that they could be perpetuated through the coming period of frosts. It is possible to mitigate, to some extent, the effect of frosts through artificial means, in those sections where the temperature does not fall lower than 27 degrees. And, too, damage by winds can be lessened so that many vegetables and flowers in the home or farm garden may have a full chance to mature in the "winter" season.

It is a matter of pride to every Californian to show his eastern visitors garden plants thriving on his property when snow and ice cover the ground back East. Here the home gardener wants to intensify winter gardening and to keep frost-tender vegetables during some of the winter months. Commercially this is hardly possible, except at great expense for material to wholly or partly house the vegetables; but the home gardener, by a little work, and at small expense for covering, may embark upon a campaign to save his tender plants through several frosts, with fair prospects for success.

Killing frosts may be expected at any time now, in fact they have already appeared in isolated sections, cutting down tomato vines and cucurbits; but hundreds of acres of tomatoes, peppers and melons are still standing in the commercial plots and in home gardens. How shall the small gardener go about it to save his tender plants?

Broadly speaking, this may be accomplished by two means: conserving the heat stored up in the earth by the sun during the day, and raising the temperature at nights by means of irrigating with water warmer than the night temperature, and by using orchard heaters.

COVERING WITH GLASS.

Glass is one of the best materials known for screening plants and preventing frost damage, since glass is impervious to cold air from outside, and keeps the warm air inside. But glass is seldom used in California like it is in eastern States and Europe for the propagation of vegetables during winter. However, if the home gardener has any large glass containers that he wishes to use for this purpose and no other, he can have the necks and mouths cut off by a glazer and cover his plants with these large glass bottles. If a half-dozen five-gallon water bottles were cut so as to remove the necks, any sort of frost-tender vegetables could be grown beneath them in winter. This method is too expensive to use commercially in this State, and cloth screens are more generally used. Do not use metal covers, these chill with the temperature, and are very little protection from frost.

Ordinary cloth, as a rule, does not prevent an interchange between the air under the coverings and that outside, but coverings of canvas, heavier than ten-ounce duck, or old woolen clothing laid directly over garden plants, are effective in protecting plants against moderate frosts, and may bring the plants clear through the winter if used religiously. Of course, it is necessary to have some kind of a framework over the plants, so that the heavy cloth will not bear directly down on the tomatoes or other vegetables or flowers. It is not necessary to cover the plants completely: if the cloth comes within two or three inches of the ground on all sides, the warm air radiating from the earth, will be caught and held. It is necessary to place the coverings of cloth on the plants before much of the earthly heat begins to radiate into the atmosphere; thus 4 p.m. is a good time to place the coverings, in case a frost is expected. Generally a killing frost comes within twenty-four hours of a heavy rain in Southern California.

OTHER FROST PROTECTION.

The temperature of the surface of the cloth coverings, it has been found by experiments carried on at Riverside, is lowered by radiation and may fall to a low point, but as both the cloth itself and the air underneath it are very poor conductors of heat, the temperature of the covered plants falls much more slowly and the heat conducted from the earth aids in keeping the temperature above the freezing point.

Lath screens, fastened together, or made into a small house for plants, are being used to protect tender fruit trees in California and Florida, but have not been used largely to protect vegetables and flowers. This is not as good a method as heavy cloth, but is effective to a certain degree in keeping out frost. Orchard heaters, such as are used in orange and lemon groves during the frost periods, are effective in raising the temperature in the garden from 4 to 8 degrees during the night, but this means is expensive and the heaters must be watched during the night, so few home gardeners will try them.

Paper covers may be used to protect small individual plants, or large sheets which can be utilized for the garden rows. Generally speaking, however, paper does not afford as much protection as heavy cloth.

A successful gardener near Sawtelle protects his potatoes and tomatoes during the early winter by plowing a furrow between the rows of vegetables and covering the plants lightly with soil, when a frost is expected. This method, however, invites much labor as the plants must be uncovered again within a few days.

IRRIGATION HELPS.

Cranberry growers in the Cape Cod country and in Wisconsin follow the practice of flooding their marshes with water from large reservoirs when a frost is expected. California truck men have noticed that when the crops are heavily irrigated during the day preceding a frost less damage is done. In this case, protection is afforded by the heat given off by the relatively warm water, conducted in underground conduits that are much warmer than the air.

Spraying of garden plants to afford protection from frosts is quite common in Southern California orchards and fields. In some cases it is not possible to combat frosts in this way because of a heavy coating of ice which forms on the plants, stripping leaves and tender branches; but if done with moderation, and with fairly warm irrigation water turned into the garden before bed time, on cold nights, the temperature is raised a trifle. Then, again, many a gardener has saved his plants by sprinkling them liberally with water early in the morning, before the sun comes out, and wilts down the plants.

True, frosts occur only when the surface air is relatively calm, and thus as long as even a mild wind is blowing the gardener has reasonable assurance that frosts will not take effect. But once this breeze dies down temperatures of less than 30 degrees will "get" his tender vegetables and flowers. If the gardener's property is located on a slope the frost is kept in motion by the flow of air downward and the damage may not be so great.

Regarding the windbreaks. This year an increasing number of gardeners have planted annuals for protection from winds. During the year winds may whip the plants and seriously damage them, and any protection afforded by a border of tall annuals will be appreciated. Sunflowers, a row or two, artichokes or string beans make excellent windbreaks.

Many vegetables which can be planted and successfully grown during this and the succeeding winter months are "frost-proof," and need not be protected. Among these are beets, Brussels sprouts, cabbage, cauliflower, carrots, chicary, Swiss chard, cress, endive, garlic, herbs, kale, kohl-rabi, leek lettuce, mustard, onion seed, onion sets, parsnips, peas, radishes, rhubarb, salsify, spinach, sunflowers and turnips.

Many vegetables can be grown in Southern California the year around, but frost-tender varieties must be protected in some manner from the occasional frost during the winter. Paper caps, shown in the photograph, are ideal for protection of tender plants from frost.

A method of guarding vegetables from damage by low temperatures in the East. As a substitute for the expensive glass "bells," many Californians save their tomatoes and tender vines from frost by using five-gallon water bottles with the necks removed.

A sunflower windbreak for the garden. A row or two of these fast-growing plants greatly mitigates the damage caused by winter winds, and helps feed the poultry flock. Sunflowers are seldom touched by frost here.

Another kind of an annual windbreak, a hedge of Jerusalem artichokes, tubers of which are much relished by live stock. The tubers are also excellent served on the table, boiled in the same manner as Irish potatoes.

JAP MEALY BUGS ATTACK OJAI GROVES.

Has the "Gentlemen's Agreement" been violated, or were the Japanese pseudococcus krauhniae smuggled across the Mexican border? Nestled away in the Ojai Valley in Ventura county, a colony of Japanese immigrants have become established. Fitted as they are by nature to thrive in the warm, mild climate of Southern California, these invaders have settled down in an isolated citrus section where they are living at the expense of the orange industry. These invaders have multiplied and are now intruding on property owned by American citizens. This intrusion is resented by the property owners, and steps have been taken to prevent any further colonizing.

At a conference of government officials harsh measures were proposed. Some violent methods were practiced. One attempt was made to exterminate the colony by the use of poisonous hydrocyanic gas and deadly sprays.

These invaders, which are known to entomologists as pseudococcus krauhniae kuwana, are commonly termed mealy bugs, and many different species inhabit California. This particular species is said to have originated in Japan, and to have been accidentally introduced into California. Dr. Kuwana, the entomologist of the imperial Japanese government, takes exception to this theory and resents the term "Japanese mealy bug" being applied to this particular insect.

[illegible] again take an auto stage for Lake McDonald, at which point the boat is waiting, and we make the trip up the entire length of the lake which is about twelve miles to Lewis Hotel. Lake McDonald is the largest of all the very numerous lakes in the park, and our guide book says it is the most like Switzerland of any spot in this country, and it certainly reminds me more of Switzerland than any other place that I have ever visited. A fine trout luncheon was awaiting us at the hotel and we certainly did justice to the meal. We then start out on the trail for Logan Falls and after tramping for over an hour through the very dense forest we arrive at one of the most beautiful little streams imaginable. We are only sorry that we have not our fishing equipment with us so that we could pull out some of the fine trout, but on our way back we see two fishermen who have just returned and have had excellent luck and as we are looking at their trout one of the gentlemen hands me a string with four dandies on it, two of which are Dolly Vardens which the guide book tells us are quite rare. I take them back to the hotel and for a small tip the cook prepares and serves them along with our meal. They are the finest that I have ever eaten.

After dinner we gather around the big log fire in the lobby and the gentlemen smoke their cigars and the ladies in their hiking pantaloons puff their cigarettes (however, these are not the ladies in our immediate party.) The lobby is decorated on all sides with moss, elk and deer heads and bear skins without number. We meet Mr. Lewis, the owner of the hotel, who has been up in this country longer than any one in the park. He loves it.

And he tells us of a great many interesting experiences.

After breakfast the next morning we take the boat back down to the other end of Lake McDonald, again board the stage and arrive back at Belton at 10 a.m. and in a few minutes we are on our westbound train headed for Seattle.

It has been a wonderful trip and one well worth while and we have the great satisfaction of feeling that we have seen with our own eyes one of the world's most beautiful spots. Also it has given us a complete change both in mind and body and we can now return to our daily toils fully refreshed and bubbling over with new energy.

Future Automobile Industry Assured.

"It is the immense and certain replacement demand that will make the big motor business of the future," says Paul Clay, the well-known economist, in an optimistic article on the future of this country in the current issue of Forbes Magazine (N. Y.) "To take care of replacements alone our motor companies about ten years from now will have to produce roughly 2,000,000 motor vehicles per annum, which is more than they ever yet produced in their greatest boom year.

"Nor is this large indicated future requirement due in any great degree to the export business. In 1919 we exported only 83,454 cars and trucks against 63,951 in [illegible] production is bound to come from the scrapping of worn-out cars. The life of the average car is often figured at three to five years; but as automobiles have gone into the hands of those of smaller and smaller means, the average annual mileages run have greatly diminished, and the average life of cars measured in years has correspondingly increased.

"The smallness of the number of cars scrapped in the typical year shows that the life of the average car is eight years or more. In 1919, for example, we produced in the United States 1,974,016 cars and trucks, whereas the gain in registration during the year ended December 31 was only 1,434,909. Of the remaining 539,107, exports represented 83,454, so that the balance of 455,653 doubtless represented the numbers of cars and trucks worn out and scrapped.

"But this 455,653 motor vehicles was equivalent to only 7 per cent of the average number in service for the year, so that if one took 1919 as a guide he would have to reason that since only 7 per cent per annum are worn out, the life of the average car is fourteen years. However, the scrapping in some other years has run as high as 13, 14 or 12 per cent; and taking our recent experience as a whole, it indicates an average life of about eight years.

"It is surprising what this means as to future production. On June 30, according to the registration of the various States, there were 7,904,271 cars and trucks in use in the United States. Upon the basis of an eight-year life, these will have to be replaced by 1928. Besides this, even if the number of new users of motor vehicles steadily and persistently diminishes every year in the meantime, it is roughly indicated by the meager available figures, upon the assumption that the present trend of developments continues, that in 1928 something like 175,000 commercial cars should be sold to business houses that never used them before, and about 80,000 passenger cars to families that never had them before. Allowing also for an export demand of 125,000 vehicles, we have here a total of 360,000. Adding this to those motor vehicles now in service which are due to be scrapped and replaced in 1928, we have a total indicated demand of about 2,022,000 motor vehicles."

MESSAGE OF THE ROSE.

Rose to her heart, while over the whiteness of the coverlet a shower of crimson petals fell, like rarest rubies, on a bank of snow. Its beauty spent, perhaps to bloom again, in God's own Garden.

And so they found her. She would hear again the sound of the waves as they laughed and danced on the edge of the golden sand, and the music of the wind would be with her throughout eternity. She had seen the message "In the Heart of a Rose."

. . . .

-Crimson, Yellow and White! They had not bloomed in vain. They had justified their existence.

Better Business is Coming.

Better business looms ahead. Our business body had become fat, overfed. It is now reducing. The process is disagreeable, sometimes painful. But it makes for greater strength and vigor. Had not corrective measures been taken, business would have collapsed from hardening of the credit arteries. At the opening of 1920 we were heading toward trouble. At the opening of 1921 we should be heading toward sound prosperity. Every fundamental development is making for greater solidity and stability. We have the greatest wealth of resources in the world; we have the greatest body of intelligent, progressive manpower in the world; we have the greatest system of transportation in the world; the greatest stock of gold in the world; the greatest amount of confidence and optimism and enterprise of any nation in the world; and the least amount of worries and handicaps of any people in the world.

We have the material, the men, the money and the will to prosper. Everything combines to indicate that, after the disagreeable but necessary readjustments now under way, we shall prosper.—[Forbes Magazine (N. Y.)

CARE OF THE BODY.

[illegible] "What is it?"

And Horace was obliged to humiliate himself and relate the accident in detail, together with all that had subsequently happened.

"Yes, yes, yes, yes," Greatorex would punctuate the recital, and when tired of "yes" he would say "hum, hum, hum, hum."

When he had said "hum" seventy-two times he suddenly remarked that his fee was three guineas, and told Horace to strengthen Sidney all he could, not to work him too hard, and to bring him back in a year's time.

Horace paid the money, Greatorex emitted a final "hum" and then the stepbrothers were whisked out by an expeditious footman. The experience cost Horace over four pounds and the loss of a day's time. And the worst was that Sidney had a violent attack that very night.

Child Welfare.

REFRESHINGLY different from the "child welfare," "clinic" and other harmful activities of the "regular" medical school, Frank C. Lockwood, dean of the University of Arizona, in the Pittsburg Christian Advocate, urges rational child welfare work. He says that we should teach our children in terms of strength, beauty and joy, rather than of weakness and disease, and offers this as a single program:

"Long hours of sleep, with open windows; daily use of the tooth brush; one full bath a week; plenty of outdoor play every day; at least four glasses of water a day; plenty of fruit and vegetables in the diet; a bowel movement every day."

If to this were added abstention from sugar, and little starch, there would be no adenoids, or enlarged tonsils, or diphtheria, or other "children's diseases," all entirely unnecessary and easily avoidable.

• •

Shallow Foundations.

FOLLOWING is from "Everybody Ahead" by Orison Swett Marden:

"Our young people don't want to take time to prepare. They want something, and want it quickly. They are not willing to lay broad, deep foundations. The weary years in preparatory school and college dishearten them. They want only a 'smattering' of an education. The shifts to cover up ignorance, and 'the constant trembling lest some blunder should expose one's emptiness' are pitiable.

"Take but one calling, stenography, for instance, and what do we find? Multitudes of stenographers, who are practically doomed to inferior positions and small salaries because they never prepared themselves for the best positions. They may be perfectly capable, but they are held down by their ignorance. They are not broadly read, not well educated; they are confused every time they come across an unusual word, a scientific term, an historical or political reference. Their vocabularies are painfully limited, their experience narrow; they are always running to other people for the meaning of words, or asking how to spell them. Many of them are absolutely ignorant of the commonest historical events and of the greatest names in history."

The Hearthstone.

HERE are truthful words by Calvin Coolidge:

"The destiny, the greatness of America lies around the hearthstone. If thrift and industry are taught there, and the example of self-sacrifice oft appears, if honor abide there, and high ideals, if there the building of fortune be subordinate to the building of character, America will live in security, rejoicing in an abundant prosperity and good government at home, and in peace, respect and confidence abroad. If these virtues be absent, there is no power that can supply these blessings. Look well, then to the hearthstone. Therein all hope for America lies."

More and more the home is deserted for the automobile and the picture show.

Orthodox Physicians.

FOLLOWING is from an address delivered in Denver by J. H. Tilden, M.D.:

"Why do we find so many physicians at 45 a little farther back than they were at [illegible] superstition and fallacy.

"It is respectability that keeps more people in prejudice and superstition than anything else. They are afraid to jar loose for fear they will be lonesome. They become too lazy to do any serious thinking; and it may be said of them that they have sold their intellectual birthright for a mess of respectability—pottage—that spells stupidity in twenty-five years from the date of sale."

Some people still believe sickness and death are of divine origin. Putting the blame for their sins on the Almighty.

THE TIMES ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE

THE STORY OF THE PILGRIMS

SCROOBY, Amsterdam, Leyden, Plymouth, these were the chief centers of development of the Pilgrim movement. The history of its progress and growth covered practically the entire seventeenth century, from the time that a handful of Separatists fearfully met in each other's home in Scrooby to study the Word of God, until Plymouth was absorbed by the Colony of Massachusetts. Keenly disappointed and often shocked because of what they regarded as empty formality and disgraceful worldliness in the Established Church, which, they declared, still retained many of the evils of the Roman Catholic Church of that day, they determined to "shake off the yoke of anti-Christian bondage," and joined themselves by solemn covenant "into a church estate in the fellowship of the Gospel, to walk in all its ways, made known, or to be made known unto them, according to their best endeavors, whatever it shall cost them."

This was their bond of union in Scrooby and throughout their history as a church.

Naturally this determination met with much hostility and opposition. They were not free to conduct their services as they wished. They had no church building, but met instead in the homes of their members, in small groups, under most adverse circumstances.

No bell summoned them; no tap of drum; they needed constantly to be on their guard. Frequently they met in the woods and in secluded gravel pits.

Later, the persecution of the Pilgrims became more severe. It is said that at this time the prisons of London "were crowded with Protestant prisoners and the public executioners were busy with rope and torch, hurrying into eternity the souls of men who were brave, true and loyal, and whose only offense was their earnest faith in Christ and their desire to worship God in the simplest and most direct way." Others were put into prison and condemned to remain there until their lives were slowly worn out.

The persecution of the Pilgrims in England came from three sources—the church, the state and their neighbors. How extensive this persecution was has been variously estimated. It may not have been very wide, for the Pilgrims were a comparatively small body, and so escaped marked attention. But such as it was, it had much to do with the departure of the Pilgrims from England.

Public officials were turned into spies and charged to be alert and unsparing in doing the bidding of bishop and crown. There was no relief save in flight.

The Pilgrims were Puritans, originally, but they withdrew from that body because it was believed that the Puritans were untrue to the "light," as they accepted or condoned certain practices of the Established Church to which the Pilgrims took exception.

The Puritans sought to reform the Established Church from within. The Pilgrims preferred to abolish it altogether.

It is significant that ten years after the arrival of the Pilgrims in America, the practices which the Pilgrims so heartily detested were discontinued, and later, in America, the Puritans accepted practically the entire program and policy of the Pilgrims.

The migration of the Pilgrims, first to Holland and then to America, was not for the purpose of adventure nor for the sake of building up a prosperous economic community, nor was it primarily for the purpose of establishing trading posts which would result in great financial gain, but to establish a free colony where they might worship God in their own way, to study and apply the word of God as they pleased, and to set up a Christian commonwealth which should support and sustain the church.

Had they been seeking freedom only, they might well have remained in Holland, for this country offered them all they desired in this respect—excepting that they were greatly limited in their economic progress because of their unwillingness to become Dutch citizens. But they were not content to enjoy freedom within a society to which they did not belong, and "so they went out into the Unknown in order to create a society in which they might enjoy freedom begotten of their own spirit."

The fourteen years spent in Holland had given them an experience which they believed fitted them for the Great Adventure. It was a question as to whether they would go to Guiana or to Virginia. Both these proposals were rejected, by vote of the people. It was finally decided to secure a "patent" for a settlement in Massachusetts—but less than half the Pilgrims decided to leave Holland, it being agreed that the majority, whether they went or stayed, should retain the services of their minister, John Robinson. Thus Robinson remained in Leyden, although nominally he was also the pastor of the Plymouth Pilgrims.

On September 6, 1620, 102 Pilgrims sailed from Plymouth, England, on the Mayflower, the original point of departure having been Delfshaven, Holland. Among the passengers were twenty-nine women and twelve children. Their attempts to flee from England to Holland had often been frustrated by unscrupulous captains of ships they engaged and others upon whom they relied, and the trip to America also had its share of unsympathetic persons among members of the Mayflower crew.

After suffering great hardships aboard ship, on a voyage which required sixty-four days, and after spending five weary weeks in search of a site suitable for founding their settlement, the place already designated as Plymouth was selected.

They first landed on what they later called "Clark's Island." Gov. Bradford, in his history, gives us particulars regarding this point in their history:

"In the morning they find the place to be a small island secure from Indians. And this being the last day of the week, they here dry their stuff, fix their pieces, rest themselves, return God thanks for their many deliverances, and here the next day keep their Christian Sabbath. The next day, Monday, they sailed up to the shore below us, and, stepping on Plymouth Rock, made the exploration which ultimately determined them to fix upon this place for their plantation."

During the first year, half the people died because of a disease which gripped them.

Ten years after settlement, Plymouth numbered but 300 souls. In 1643, when the New England confederacy was formed, the population of Plymouth was about 3000.

The Mayflower Pilgrims were plain farmers. They were without social recognition. Social recognition would have been more likely to make them acquiescent and contented with things as they were. There were a few trained artisans among them, who had learned, through a rather discouraging experience in Holland, some of the rougher trades.

During the first three years, they had much difficulty in adjusting themselves to the new conditions, but after repeated disappointments, they finally established their colony upon a sound economic basis.

A cheap wit has sometimes made the Pilgrims appear ludicrous and often their attitude toward certain social and legislative matters has seemed narrow and bigoted, not to say heartless and unscrupulous.

For example, it has been charged that the early legislation of the Pilgrims was noted for its severity above that of any other country. But those who make the charge know little of the history of criminal law.

The Compact, drawn up and signed in the cabin of the Mayflower, was the fundamental law of the new state. In their legislation, the Pilgrims were guided by the conception of equal rights and common duties announced in this great instrument. Of this Compact it has been said:

"The Mayflower Compact is an immortal document. It is justly counted one of the most important contributions made to the civic thought of the world."

In 1636, there were among the Pilgrims only six crimes which were punishable by death. These were treason, murder, witchcraft, arson, rape and crimes against nature. Only ten persons were convicted by the Pilgrims during the seventy years of their independent existence.

At the time the Pilgrims left Scrooby, the English law books enumerated thirty-one crimes for which a man might be deprived of his life. In 1819, there were 223 offenses which, in the judgment of British parliaments, might be suitably punished by death. In their first codes, Massachusetts and Connecticut each had twelve capital offenses. There were no convictions for either treason or witchcraft, or arson, or assaults on virtue, among the Pilgrims.

When the Pilgrims were framing their laws, England and Scotland were burning and hanging witches. W. E. Lecky, the historian, said:

"The credulity which Luther manifested on all matters connected with diabolical intervention was amazing even for his age; and, when speaking of witchcraft, his language was emphatic and unhesitating: 'I would have no compassion on these witches,' he exclaimed, 'I would burn them all.'"

At the date of the landing of the Pilgrims at Plymouth Rock, as earlier and later, belief in witchcraft was well-nigh universal.

It is worth while to remember that the Colony had a remarkable scarcity of witches within its bounds, and a decided indisposition on the part of the authorities to convict persons charged with this crime. From first to last there were only two cases brought to trial. Neither of the two was convicted.

Likewise, one hears occasionally about the unjust treatment of the Indians by the Pilgrims. A very common bit of wit is that which declares that "first the Pilgrims fell upon their knees, then they fell upon the aborigines." But, with the exception of a few incidental skirmishes with a very few Indians, the Pilgrims were at peace with the red men, and a treaty was made that was faithfully kept by both sides for fifty years.

The Pilgrims were scrupulously honest with the Indians in the payment of debts and in the keeping of contracts. Occasionally, individuals among the Pilgrims took an unfair advantage of them, but the Colony as a whole was fair and dealt with them in good faith.

They also dealt squarely with their creditors back in England. In 1627, the Colony bought up the old stock of the merchant adventurers who had become the responsible backers of their enterprise, and within seven years they had paid for it in full from the fruits of their labor.

The high character of the Pilgrims has been very generally recognized by the students of history. James Russell Lowell said concerning them:

"Next to the fugitives whom Moses led out of Egypt, the little shipload of outcasts who landed at Plymouth are destined to influence the future of the world."

One reason for this may be found in the statement written by Robinson and Brewster to Sir Edwin Sandys:

"It is not with us as with other men whom small things can discourage or small discontentments cause to wish themselves at home."

The Pilgrims made important contributions to modern life. Their advanced ideas of democracy helped not only this country but influenced England and Europe. Their social and economic legislation has served as a valuable basis for the legislation of all time. Their principles of community life and service were far in advance of anything that even most modern teachers have advocated. They applied the Bible to the common facts of life in a most practical fashion, making the Book more real and vital to the everyday man.

But undoubtedly their best work was done in the field of religious liberty and in their insistence that every man stands before God as an individual, with all the rights and privileges of any other believer in the world—no matter what his ecclesiastical or political position.

The Married Life of Helen and Warren.

Y MABEL HERBERT URNER.

Helen's Economy Surmounts Her Pride and Forces a Humiliating Overture.

"IT is a little salty," admitted Helen, sipping the clear chicken soup.

"A little!" fumed Warren. "She's dumped in the whole bag! Ruins everything with salt."

"I'll have her add some hot water," Helen touched the bell.

"Not for me," pushing back his plate. "Thin enough now. If she can't do any better on soups—tell her to cut 'em out."

"Dora, the soup's too salty again," reproved Helen as the girl entered. "You must be more careful. No, we can't eat it—you can take the plates."

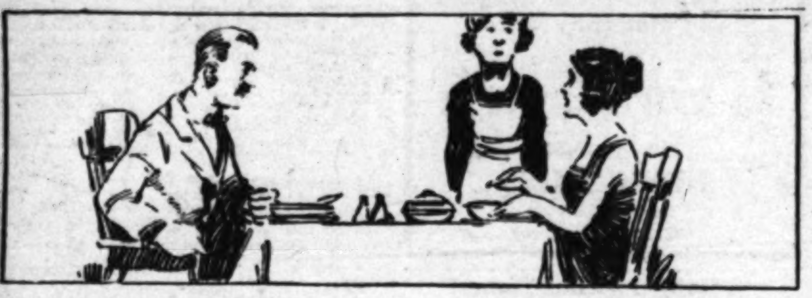
"Felt rotten all day. Wish I'd gone to the club—might've had a decent meal," grouched Warren, who had come home irritable from a hard day at the office.

"Now, dear, don't be cross. It's my birthday—and we're going to have such a wonderful evening," glowingly. "Did you get good seats?"

"Fifteenth row. Best they had."

"Oh, that's fairly good. I don't know when I've wanted to see a play so much. They say that seance in the third act—where the spirit materializes—is perfectly wonderful."

"We're going to see a real show tonight," brusquely, as he sharpened the carving knife. "I got tickets for the Follies."



"The Follies!" dismayed Helen. "After you promised me—after all I've said about wanting to see this—"

"Well, I'm about fed up on spook plays. Felt like seeing a leg show."

"Warren, it's my birthday!" quiveringly. "You said this morning you'd get tickets for anything I wanted. Oh, you know I don't care for the Follies!"

"Well, I do. I like music and a good peppy leg show once in a while. Harding says this bill's a knock-out. They've got a chorus of home-wreckers—and a dancer who's the real Tabasco."

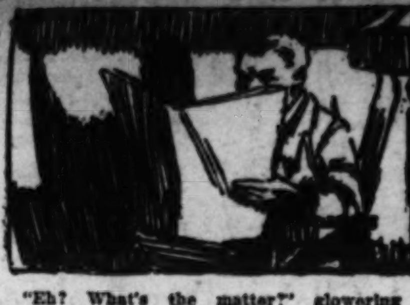
Helen swallowed hard as she traced the fleur-de-lis in the tablecloth. All day she had been looking forward to this evening. For weeks she had followed the reviews and notices of "The Clairvoyant Claim."

His selfishness loomed monumental. It was never of her pleasure that he thought—only of his own. Even on her birthday he did not consider her.

"Want some of the fat?"

She never ate fat, but it was Warren's unfailing question when he carved, and it always exasperated her.

"I don't want anything," gulping back a sob.



"Eh? What's the matter?" glowering over the poised knife.

"Warren, I think on my birthday you might've taken me to something I like."

"Well, I've got tickets for the Follies. You can make up your mind to like that! Blamed seldom I get to see anything with a laugh in it. Your idea of a merry evening is to shiver through three hours of spook bunk. Hold on—where're you going? Come back here!"

The wave of resentment and self-pity threatening tears, Helen left the table and rushed into her own room. Recklessly crushing her evening gown, she threw herself on the couch.

It was foolish to care so much. But this was her birthday! Surely he might consider her preference one evening in the year.

The Follies! It was a deliberate slight. He knew that she never cared for musical comedies. A "leg show," a troop of rollicking chorus girls, held no appeal for her.

The glass knob banged against the wall as the door was flung open.

"Throwing a fit because I got seats for the Follies?" stormed Warren from the doorway.

"Dear, it's my birthday—"

"What of it? What's the matter with the seeing something I like? These blooming problem and spook plays bore me stiff! Now you can the hysterics and come back to your dinner."

"I don't want any dinner," her face in the pillow. "I couldn't eat—it would choke me."

"We'll see about that. Now you stop this infernal foolishness and come back to the table—or we won't go anywhere."

"I—I'd just as soon stay home," between sobs.

"You would, eh? Well, that suits me," savagely. "There're your damned tickets!" The sound of tearing pasteboard. Then the door slammed shut.

The satin pillow under Helen's cheek grew moist. When she finally sat up she saw the torn tickets on the rug by the dresser. Wrathfully aimed at the wastebasket, they had fluttered out over the floor.

And this was the end of her birthday! Waves of briny bitterness engulfed her.

The clink of china from the dining-room He was eating his dinner in stolid indifference. Nothing ever interfered with his appetite.

Familiar sounds announced the progress of the meal. Now Dora was taking out the roast. Now she had brought on the salad. What excuse had he made for her absence? He had probably not troubled to make any.

At last the sound of a chair pushed back. He was leaving the table.

Would he come to her now? Usually food had a mollifying effect. As a rule she could count on at least a temporary amiability after his dinner. But now his unyielding step passed on into the library.

The mirror across the room reflected her wretchedness—her flushed face and rumpled gown.

Again she gazed at the wasted tickets! At least three dollars each—six dollars thrown away.

For the moment Helen's economy was paramount. That six dollars would have fixed the bookcase lock and mended that broken chair arm—two things that had long hung over her, for she had a deep-rooted aversion to spending money on repairs.

Stooping to pick up the torn tickets she saw "$3.50" on one of the fragments. Seven dollars! At least she could give them to Dora. It seemed criminal for no one to use them.

She started piecing them together. There were more than two tickets! Four! Two for tonight for "The Follies"—and two for tomorrow for "The Clairvoyant Claim!"

A dazed moment before it was clear. The house had been sold out for tonight so he had bought them for tomorrow night. If he had only told her! But having come home in an irascible mood, he had taken a perverse pleasure in venting his ill-humor.

Hastily powdering over the tear stains she started toward the door. Her hand on she started toward the door. Her hand on the knob, she paused, claimed by conflicting emotions. Her pride rebelled at betraying that she had cared enough to piece up the tickets.

In a temperish rage he had recklessly the fourteen dollars.

Noiselessly she opened the door. Dora, ever eager to get to the "movies," was clearing the table with lightning speed. Helen stepped back, not wanting to meet the girl's curious gaze.

The slamming of the sideboard drawer told that the folded tablecloth had been put away. The next moment the dining-room flashed dark.

As the swish of the pantry door proclaimed Dora's exit, Helen emerged from her room.

Warren was in the library. She could see the edge of his paper as he sat by the desk light.

He was not even disturbed. He had eaten his dinner and now he was reading with deliberate unconcern. He was hard—hard! Just then she almost hated him for his callous indifference.

And this was her birthday! That thought brought back the choking lump. He might have made some concession tonight—but it was always left to her to make the overtures.

The half-hour chime from the library clock. Seven-thirty! And the tickets said "8:15." If the evening were to be saved—there was no time to hesitate.

Forcing back her revolting pride, she advanced to the library door. Though she knew he was conscious of her presence, it was several seconds before he looked up.

"Warren, why didn't you tell me you had the tickets for tomorrow night?"

"How'd you know I had?"

"I—I thought it was a shame to waste them," with deepening color. "I pieced them together to give to Dora."

"Well, give her both sets for all I care."

"Warren, it's my birthday!" appealingly.

"You've mentioned that fact before," caustically, taking up his paper with a dismissing shrug.

She paused to swallow. He was making it so cruelly hard. For a moment she was tempted to rush back to her room and stay there. She would not humiliate herself further. Then the thought of two wretched, wasted evenings and the fourteen dollars forced her on.

"We still have time," steadying her voice. "Don't you think we'd better go?"

"Not unless you're over your tantrums."

She did not answer. Her cheeks flamed with hot rebellion.

"Are you?" he persisted, brutally forcing her to further concession.

She nodded. She could not trust her voice. Her humiliation was too poignant.

"Very well. If you've come to your senses—get on your hat. But we'll have no postmortems," sharply. "Understand? If we're going to a show—we're going to enjoy it. Now move fast!"

YERBA SANTA AND YUCCA.

YOU do not travel the chaparral trails very long, no matter how new you may be to the region, before you take note of a shrub with rather long, tapering leaves which are dark green and often shiny above, and soft and almost white with woolly down underneath. "Yerba Santa"—saintly plant—the Spanish called the shrub, because of its curative properties, and the name has become permanently fixed. Its botanical name is Eriodictyon Californicum. There are two or three sister species, all having a resemblance to one another in the shape of the leaves, but differing much in their woolliness. The flowers of the species found on the foothills and lower slopes of the mountains are usually pale lilac or white. Higher up in the mountains there is a species (E. parryi) with lavender-purple flowers. This is a more slender shrub than those of the lower altitudes. The flowers of all the different species have a faint, but rather pleasant fragrance.

On the foothills, and running well up on to the mountains, along the borders of the Mojave Desert west of Cajon Pass, the species Emodictyon trichocalyx is very plentiful, in places solidly covering large areas. It is a low shrub with white flowers, which often are so abundant as to hide the foliage.

The yerba santa's medicinal value was not discovered by the padres, but they learned of its curative properties from the Indians, who had long used it for all sorts of disorders. The Catholic fathers made more discriminative use of it, however, than had the natives, finding it especially efficient in the treatment of colds and other respiratory troubles. At present there seems to be some market for the leaves, which are gathered and dried by the Indians.

The eriodictyons (yerba santas) are the only shrubs of the waterleaf family native to Southern California—although there are many herbs. The scorpioid scheme of inflorescence belonging to this family should be a good distinguishing mark for anyone trying to master the yerba santas.

The Yerba Santas are Beautiful When in Mass on Hillsides.

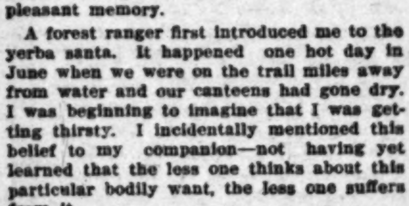
ALL of the yerba santas are generous bloomers. During May and June the bushes are usually crowned with loose bunches of flowers which—as already indicated—vary in the different species from white or light lavender to purple. A single spray of the flowers is not at all effective, and even a bunch of them is scarcely attractive. So for a long time we may pass them by with scant or no attention whatever, and as having no charms worthy of our esteem. But some time in our trail wanderings we come upon a hillside over which by strength of numbers they cast a lavender or purple hue, the like of which we never before have seen, and which henceforth goes with us as a bright and pleasant memory.

A forest ranger first introduced me to the yerba santa. It happened one hot day in June when we were on the trail miles away from water and our canteens had gone dry. I was beginning to imagine that I was getting thirsty. I incidentally mentioned this belief to my companion—not having yet learned that the less one thinks about this particular bodily want, the less one suffers from it.

"Is that so?" he replied. "Well, here is something which I think will help you out. Just chew these leaves and see if you don't get all over it."

And he handed me a terminal spray of tender, elongated, saw-toothed leaves—green above and gray-white underneath.

"What are they?" I asked, suspicious of some joke.



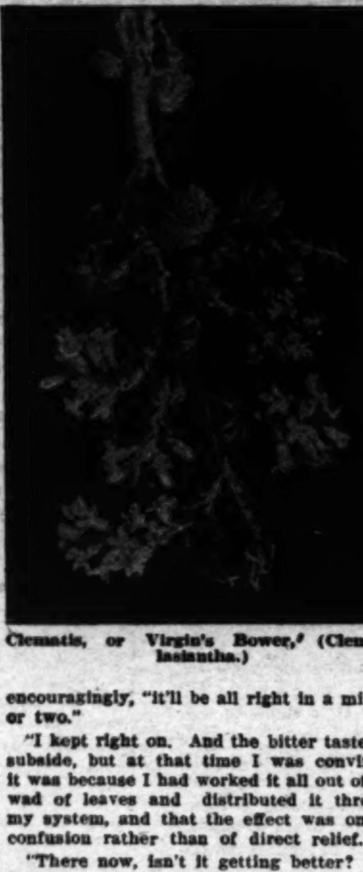
Yerba Santa in bloom. (Erodictyon tomentosum,) from the Big Tejunga.

"Yerba santa. Don't be afraid of them; chew them. They'll taste bitter for a little while, but you'll get over being thirsty, and by and by there'll be a pleasant taste in your mouth."

I chewed. The leaves were not particularly bitter; neither could I say they were agreeable. But my thirst made haste to depart—or at least it was forgotten in the business of appreciating the new sensation.

"Ugh!" I exclaimed, "I don't like it!"

"Just keep right on," replied the ranger, encouragingly, "it'll be all right in a minute or two."



Clematis, or Virgin's Bower,' (Clematis lasiantha.)

"I kept right on. And the bitter taste did subside, but at that time I was convinced it was because I had worked it all out of the wad of leaves and distributed it through my system, and that the effect was one of confusion rather than of direct relief.

"There now, isn't it getting better? And isn't your thirst gone?" asked the ranger a few minutes later.

I had to admit there was a relief somewhere, but at that time I wasn't quite sure but that it was merely the sense of relief from the bitterness of the herb. I have quite gotten over that first suspicion, however. And since that first experience yerba santa has alleviated my thirst many times while on the Chaparral Trail. I even find myself chewing the leaves when thirst doesn't enter into the matter. I presume it is another one of those cases—such as oysters or olives—where one gets an "acquired taste."

The Yuccas That Stand Like Giant Candles on Rocky Ridges.

AND now the yuccas, those bristling hemispheres of hostile bayonets and stately spires of multitudinous white bloom! Those hedgehog plants of the chaparral! Those giant candles that stand like beacons on the rocky ridges, and which seem as if designed to light the way along the mountain trails! They need no introduction to you when you enter the land of the Elfin-Forest. They will thrust their attention upon you—and by way of punctuation, the needle points of their leaves into your legs and the various other parts of your anatomy that are handy and reachable. Cloth is no protection against them, and leather only a partial armament.

Repellant and inhospitable as the yucca looks, the Indians nevertheless find it one of the most useful of all the chaparral plants in ministering to their wants. In the springtime the lush, tender flower shoots serve them as a sort of vegetable oyster. Although at that time it is one of their main staples of life, they likewise consider it the most toothsome of all tidbits. Later in the season they make from the seed pods a sort of flour, which is to them another family staple. From the dagger-like leaves, by a process of pounding and shredding, they get a fiber of finer sort out of which they weave linings for their coarser fabrics. So, altogether, the yucca is a good friend of the Indian.

That the yucca fiber is of an excellent quality has long been known, and several attempts have been made to collect the leaves and produce the fiber in commercial quantities. It has been found, however, although the mountains seem covered with yuccas—that the expense of collecting the leaves is so great the industry cannot successfully compete with those of sisal and like fibers where the leaves come from plants raised on plantations.

The common yucca of our chaparral (yucca whipplei) is generally called Spanish bayonet or Spanish dagger, although "Our Lord's Candle" and wild date are other names which one occasionally hears. These names may be respectively traced to striking characteristics furnished by the leaf, by the flower, and by the seed pod.

A chaparral plant which you sometimes find as a shrub, and sometimes as a vine, is the wild honeysuckle. And, as if to add to your confusion, it sometimes has light pink flowers, while again they may be light yellow. Several times I have had these apparently variant habits of the wild honeysuckle "put up" to me by observing companions on the trail. The confusion is partly due to there being several species, one of which is pink flowered, and at least two others that are light yellow.

The Bright Red Berries of the Honeysuckle Set the Trails Ablaze.

THE pink-flowered honeysuckle (lonicera hispidula) is most common in the near-coast ranges from the Santa Monica Mountains northward. In the canyons and on moist slopes it is usually a vine—often with a stout trunk—running up the oaks and other trees and spreading out among the branches; but out on the foothills it may be shrub-like, supporting itself against more sturdy companions of other sorts. Its pale pink flowers have a rather washed-out appearance, and a person who is but a casual observer is apt to pass by without noticing them. But in the late fall the bright red berries which have taken the place of the flowers fairly blaze their way into the eye of every passerby.

One of the yellow-flowered honeysuckles (L. subspicita) is almost everywhere throughout the chaparral in Los Angeles county and southward. It is most commonly a vine-like shrub, mingling with other shrubs for support, but is occasionally shrubby enough to stand by itself. Its berries are a deep orange, bordering on red. All of the wild honeysuckles are fragrant in some degree, the pink-flowered ones the most so.

The climbing pentstemon (pentstemon cordifolius) is a vine-like shrub of the chaparral which is often called scarlet honeysuckle, for which reason many persons think it is a honeysuckle. But it is a true pentstemon. One sometimes hears the name of "honeysuckle-pentstemon" applied to it—which isn't a bad name at all, and is distinctive. While it is quite plentiful throughout the Coast Ranges of the Elfin-Forest, it is almost never found alone. It is really in no sense a vine, yet on account of its long, slender stems it must depend upon stronger, sturdier shrubs for support. So we find it interlacing the tops of ceanothus, sumac, manzanita and other shrubs, and on the outside of the foliage of its host dropping the ends of its branches toward the ground in a gentle, but decided curve. In midsummer these curving branches become attractive arcs of beautiful crimson flowers set among beautiful heart-shaped leaves—the specific name comes from the heart-shaped leaves. I know not whether the climbing pentstemon is an unwelcome and uninvited guest of its comrade shrub upon which it thus imposes itself; but if so it redeems its reprehensible action in some measure at least, and "pays for its keep" as it were, by furnishing striking and artistic decorations.

About the wild clematis (clematis lasiantha) there is no question as to vine or shrub; it is a vine that runs at will over its comrades of the chaparral, keeping well on top, and falling downward over the outer branches. It often grows where the chaparral is thickest, climbing up out of the dense shade beneath and spreading over the top for yards in every direction, making a green coverlet that is decorated with strings of creamy-white, star-like flowers. At this stage, it is likened by sentimentally-inclined persons to the covering of some secluded retreat, and they call it the "Virgin Bower." By midsummer the star-embroidered coverlet becomes a fluffy mass of white, downy seed balls. Then to the children it has the appearance of an old gray beard, and they say:

"The Old Man of the Mountains is around again."

A Tree Decked With Clematis is a Sight to Behold.

THERE is also a late clematis (C. ligusfolia) which makes its home in the Elfin-Forest. It is more ambitious than its earlier sister, and almost manages to select its home where there are scrub oaks of considerable height, or other trees of some stature. For it likes to climb among the limbs of its host for ten, twenty, yes, even thirty or forty feet, where, running out to the end of the branches, it drops long trailing garlands of green and white until they almost or quite reach the ground. The beauty of a tree thus decked out is beyond description. I know of an oak that year after year is thus hung with garlands—as if for a flower festival! Once I camped over night by this tree and saw it so by moonlight, when the starry-white streamers gleamed softly against the dark oak foliage. This tree stands on the farther side of the Santa Ynez Range, and he who would see it thus adorned must go in July or August, for that is the flowering time of its decorator, the late-blooming clematis. This clematis is no mean, unimportant factor of the chaparral forest cover, having a good root system and furnishing a large amount of shade. And what it can do in the matter of reclaiming the land that has been fire-swept may be seen in Haines Canyon—just west of Mt. Lukens, near Little Landers—where it has formed extensive mats.

We naturally think of a pea as being a vine, but the Elfin-Forest has one that is not. This is the chaparral pea (xylothermia montana.) It's a shrub, and one of most uncompromising stiffness, with the end of every branch and twig ending in a thorn of horn-like hardness. The shrub is seldom more than four or five feet tall, but it has the habit of growing in copses—often on the very ridge which you would like to traverse—which there is no getting through, except by hewing a way. The deep red pea blossoms which sprinkle its crown in May may be some little compensation for the shrub's harshness, but I have never felt they were worth the torn clothing, painful scratches and lacerated feeling for which the stiff thorns are responsible.

Incense-Bush: (Ribes glutinosum.) The earliest of all our "Spring Flowers," often blooming early in December.

For thorniness, the chaparral pea has worthy rivals in the wild gooseberries, of which there are several species. The latter, however, are remarkable for a multiplicity of finer thorns, rather than for hard, stiff spines. Their armor is quite in contrast with the strong, dagger-like prods of the chaparral pea. While all the gooseberries are thorny, some are more so than others, the stickleback of them all being the burying place of the 'Fire Worshipers,' which are situated on a hill-summit outside Bombay. We ascended by a giant staircase, half a mile long, overhung by palms and tropical vegetation. We obtained a splendid view of Bombay from this eminence, which we should have enjoyed had it not been that the palms immediately around us were thick with myriads of large black vultures, gorged with corpses of the smallpox and cholera epidemic, which was then raging in Bombay. The air was so heavy with their breath that (though people say it was impossible) I felt my head affected, as long as we remained there. These myriads of birds feed only on corpses, and of necessity they must breathe and exhale what they feed upon. They fattened upon what bare contact with would kill us. They clustered in thousands.

"This burying place, or garden, was full of public and private family towers. The great public tower is divided into three circles, with a well in the middle. It has an entrance, and four outlets for water. First, there is a place for clothes, and a tank, like a huge metal barrel, lying on its side. Here the priests, who are the operators, leave their garments. A large procession of Parsees, having accompanied the body as far as this spot, turn and wait outside the tower. The priests then place the body, if a man, in the first circle; if a woman, in the second circle; if a child, in the third. In the center there is the door, well covered with a grating. The priests then stay and watch. The vultures descend; they fly round the moment they see a procession coming, and have to be kept at bay until the right moment. The body is picked clean in an hour by these vultures. It is considered very lucky if they pick out the right eye first instead of the left, and the fact is reported by the priests to the sorrowing relatives.

"When the bones are perfectly clean, a Parsee priest pushes them into the well. When the rain comes, it carries off the ashes and bones; and the water runs through these four outlets, with charcoal at the mouths to purify it, before entering and defiling the earth, which would become putrid, and cause fever.

"The Parsee will not defile the earth by being buried in it, and consider it is an honor to have a living sepulcher. The vultures have on an average, when there is no epidemic, about three bodies a day, so that they can never be said to starve. The whole thing struck me as being revolting and disgusting in the extreme, and I was glad to descend from this melancholy height to Bombay."

Medical Monopoly in England.

THE Medical Trust is as active in England as it is in the United States. The English call it the Medical Trade Union.

During the war, H. A. Barker achieved such wonderful results as a "bloodless surgeon," and earned so much gratitude from the soldiers, that the medical autocrats did note dare to suppress him. A petition was recently sent to the British government asking that Barker's work should be recognized by a grateful nation. Influenced by the Medical Trade Union, the authorities refused this plea.

The Glasgow Herald, one of the leading newspapers of Great Britain, recently devoted a column editorial to a scathing criticism of this injustice. Here is an extract:

"The man who won the war has already had something to say to certain trade organizations regarding their attitude towards ex-service men. What, we wonder, would he say to this scurvy treatment of a gentleman who has, by his wonderful skill, made so many maimed soldiers fit for the battle of life again, and, if need be, for 'service' again?"

An English "Specialist."

MEDICAL "specialists" seem to be much the same in England as in the United States. Following is from one of Arnold Bennett's short stories:

The doctor mentioned Greatorex of Manchester, the celebrated brain specialist. And Horace took Sidney to Manchester. They had to wait an hour and a quarter to see Greatorex, his well-known consulting-rooms in John Dalton street being crowded with imperfect brains; but their turn came at last, and they found themselves in Greatorex, his well-known consulting-man, with the voice of a thin man, who seemed to spend the whole of his career in the care of his finger nails.

"Well, my little fellow," said Greatorex, "don't cry." (For Sidney was already cry-

BUT YOUR NOSE?

BEFORE
AFTER

IN THIS DAY AND AGE attention to your appearance is an absolute necessity if you expect to make the most out of life. Not only should you wish to appear as attractive as possible, for your own self-satisfaction, which is alone well worth your efforts, but you will find the world in general judging you greatly, if not wholly, by your "looks;" therefore it pays to "look your best" at all times. Permit no one to see you looking otherwise; it will injure your welfare? Upon the impression you constantly make rests the failure or success of your life. Which is to be your ultimate destiny? My new Nose-Shaper, "TRADOS" (Model 24) corrects now ill-shaped noses without operation, quickly, safely and permanently. Is pleasant and does not interfere with one's daily occupation, being worn at night.

Write today for free booklet, which tells you how to correct ill-shaped noses without cost if not satisfactory.

BROWN SVGAR AND RAISINS

BY ENFOQUE

I DIDN'T think a good home brew could be made. And I'm not sure yet. But when I saw Patterson, the guy that lives next door, come out of the back door and fall down the steps I figured there must be something in it. I hadn't spoke to Patterson since last winter. You see I'd borrowed his snow shovel and he wanted it back right in the middle of the wors' storm of the season. Of course it was darned inconvenient and I told him so. And he got sore. Over nothing, you might say.

But I'm no man to hold a grudge so I got the shovel and took it over to him. He was still lying on the ground, but his enthusiasm was running high. He was hampered considerable by an impediment in his speech but I gathered that he had mixed brown sugar and raisins with a little water and let it stand until just before he fell down the steps.

Seeing he was in no condition to take care of his shovel I took it back home with me and the next day I bought some brown sugar and raisins myself. I was working in the dark, so to speak, and added too much water at first and had to put in a yeast cake to liven it up. At the end of two weeks it was pretty ripe. If you want to call it that. So I had my brother-in-law over to sample it. Ed's a plumber by profession and a meddler by inclination. What follows I blame directly on him.

He suggested distilling it. He said it would purify it. Maybe it did. But after he had rigged up a still and messed around with it, it smelled worse than before. The taste wasn't improved much either. You could have used it in any carburetor. He said all distilled stuff was that way at first and after seven or eight years it ought to be pretty good. Maybe it would have been. But my wife's uncle came to visit us. He's got money and while that don't make no difference to me I try to be nice to him for Min's sake.

We had a few folks in one evening to help entertain him. There was Ed and his wife, a fellow named Hendricks and his wife, and me and Min. We all sat around at first kind of stiff like and the women talked about operations and canning peaches and Hendricks and the old gent got into an argument about politics. It looked like a thin time for Ed and me. He voted for Bryan the first time and has been sore ever since. And I didn't care much for politics either since I got beat out as alderman of the Fifth Ward. He's the same way in a poker game, too, Ed, I mean.

So we decided to sample the brew. Seven years is a long time to wait. And even then you're taking a chance. After we put in a little orange extract it didn't taste so bad and we passed it around. It didn't have much effect at first except that the women switched from operations to recipes for mincemeat and the political argument changed to a discussion of the No-Parking Ordinance and we all mixed in on that.

After the second round Mrs. Hendricks said she hadn't felt so well for years. And a few minutes later she said she felt as spry as a school girl and proved it by standing on her head. If I was Hendricks I'd make my wife wear more clothes. Anyway she couldn't get up so we put her on the sofa and she put in the rest of the evening getting her beauty sleep. She needed it anyhow. As I often say to Min, "ain't it funny what people other people get married to." And she says, "yes, isn't it, and I guess the joke is on me."

Anyway Hendricks took another drink and started apologizing for his wife, saying she'd been brought up a Methodist and never had no chance. I was tactful though and remarked that it wasn't always the early beginners that made the best endings. Take Mart Slocum, for instance. Never had a drink 'til prohibition and now he knows more about beer than the Crown Prince himself.

Then the crowd wanted to dance. So we turned on the victrola and did it. But the floor was awfully slippery and the old gent kind of gummed things up by trying to dance with me. He kept hugging me and pushing me on the floor. He said I was a prince and he was going to treat me right. I should have made him put it in writing.

After a while it got pretty crowded and we put the chairs out on the porch. We finally had to put the victrola out there, too. And then we couldn't dance any more. The neighbors was calling up and kicking about the noise anyway. And then Min had the prize idea of the evening and notwithstanding the high cost of molasses and sugar she suggests that we make some candy and have an old-fashioned candy pull. I suppose she thought some of the simpler old-time pleasures would appeal to the old gent more than trying to dance the shimmy. I seen right away that it was a bum hunch, but I couldn't do nothing.

Before anything else had a chance to happen Ed's wife spilt molasses all over the kitchen floor, and he slipped and fell in it. It didn't hurt him much but they was his best trousers. Even plumbers don't have many pairs these days.

After it had cooled off a little, the candy I mean, we went in the dining-room and started to pull it. I guess it hadn't cooked enough or something because it kept breaking off and falling on the floor. After a while we couldn't walk much and I could hardly get my hands in my pockets. Then Hendricks the sap-head stuck a piece on his chin and climbed on the table.

"I'm a mountain goat," he says, "watch me leap."

And he did. Right onto the sideboard and fell off onto the floor. He'd cut himself on some glass or something and was bleeding all over the carpet. So we put him upstairs in the bathtub, where he wouldn't hurt nothing. Going up, the stairs seemed awful narrow and coming down they didn't seem any too saeady either. I made a note to speak to the landlord about 'em.

Things quieted down a little after that, the Hendricks having been the life of the party you might say. And the old gent began to get sleepy. But being afraid he'd miss something he went out in the kitchen to make some coffee to keep him awake. I heard him spluttering around out there on account of the matches being covered with molasses, so I got a good one off the smoking set I got for Christmas last year and lit it. He'd left the gas on and just as I got through the door there was an awful noise and an explosion of some kind. I kind of floated across the room and lit on top of Mrs. Hendricks. It didn't bother her any. She didn't mention it anyway.

Then we heard a noise outside and Min went to the window to look.

"I guess he's mad now," she says, "because he's out in the yard with the stove."

Having eliminated the weaker element, so to speak, the four of us that was left decided to play a little poker. I never seen such slippery cards. But I ate a piece of the candy and after that I didn't have no trouble holding 'em. We must have got a pinochle deck or something because I got five aces right off the bat. Two of 'em was spades. I opened the pot for five berries after Min passed. Ed's wife dropped out and Ed raised me five more. Min dropped out and I saw the raise. Neither of us took cards. I raised again and he raised back. And things started. By the time he got ready to call he had his flivver in the pot and I had all the Liberty Bonds left from my vacation. He didn't have nothing but two pair and a half. He couldn't see straight and thought he had a full house. It wouldn't've made any difference anyway, but he was just as sore as though he'd lost on a straight flush.

His wife got sore and said if she was going to have to walk home she'd start then before he lost the shirt off his back. And she went out and stumbled over the chairs on the porch and fell down the steps. Served her right anyway. She could have gone out easy where the kitchen wall had been.

Then I told Ed I'd take him home in what was his flivver and he could show me how to drive on the way over. I sat in front with Ed, and Min, of course Min had to come along, you know Min, she sat in back with the spare tire. I don't know whether it was because he was drunk or whether he didn't care now that the car wasn't his any more but he ran into a telegraph pole first thing and took off a fender. Then he headed right across the street and took off the one on the other side. I never saw so many poles in my life. I counted forty-seven in the first block. By that time the fenders was all gone and I didn't bother to count any more. After that he managed to keep inside the curbs but there wasn't much room for anybody else.

Nothing happened much after that except missing a few pedestrians that we could have hit easy, until we come to a place in the road where they'd dug it up and hadn't been able to get it all back again. We went over an awful bump and Min and the spare tire left us. We backed up to get 'em and ran over 'em both. It didn't hurt the tire any, but Min got sore and said she wouldn't ride with us if we was going to run over her all the time. So we headed her home and left her. Everything went fine after that. Women are no good on a party anyway.

Then we came to a place where the street stopped but we didn't. That is not soon enough. We ran up between two houses. There ought to be a law against building houses so close together. We took all the paint off one side and a wheel off the other. The flivver kind of sighed and fell over into a geranium bed. And two guys came out and wanted to know what in Sam Hill we was doing.

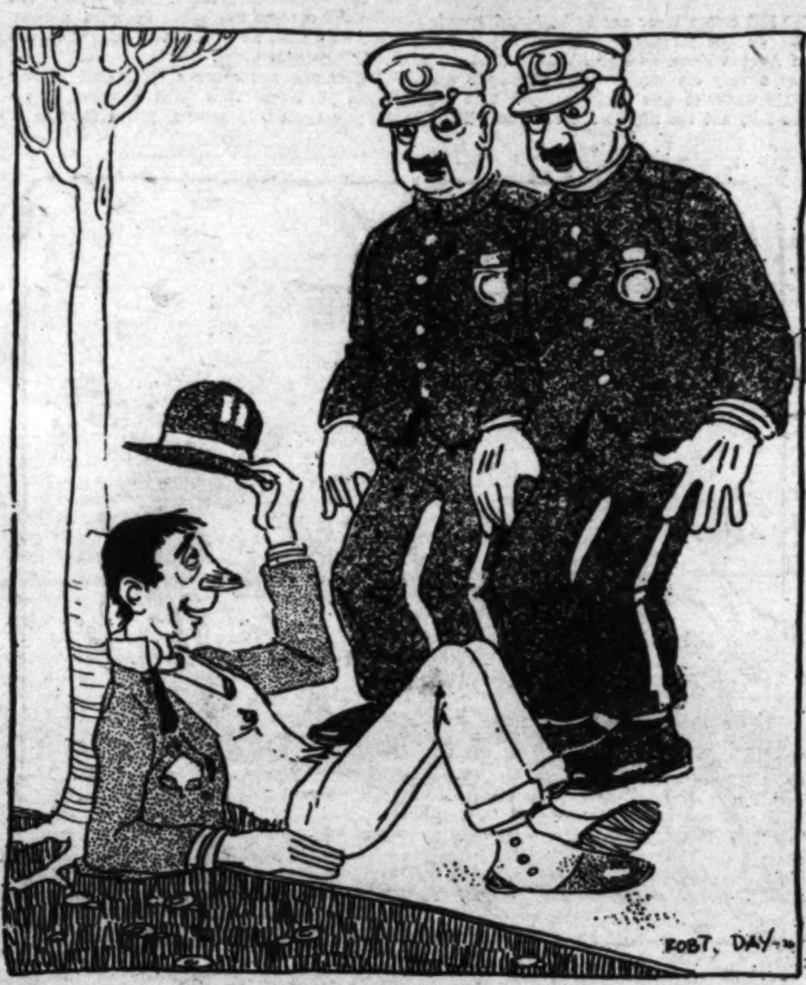
Ed was asleep under the car or something and I didn't see no use sticking around there so I left. They'd no reason to get sore about the geraniums though because I ate one and it was rotten.

I thought I'd better go home and see what Min was doing. After I'd walked about fifty blocks somebody got fresh and tipped up the sidewalk. So I fooled them and didn't try to walk any more. And two policemen came along. Twins they were. And told me I was drunk. I knew I wasn't because I hadn't had anything except brown sugar and raisins. And while I was licking one the other hit me over the head. I seen right away it was a conspiracy so I gave up.

It cost Ed $250 for the flivver and his wife's leg that she broke falling down our front steps and the guy's geraniums. And I had to pay $160 in fines and fixing up the kitchen. Hendricks the cheap skate only paid 25 cents for some court plaster. He wouldn't even settle for dry cleaning the carpet.

The old gent wrote me a darn sarcastic letter saying if I couldn't wait for him to die natural I needn't expect nothing from him.

But I got a recipe yesterday that includes apricots, corn and two yeast cakes. If it doesn't bust the crock it ought to be good.



Two Cops Where Only One Should be.

Success Depends Upon Wise Choosing.

All success in life, all business success depends upon wise choosing.

Failure is the result of choosing unwisely.

Life is one continuous series of choosings, decisions.

When we start going to school we have to choose whether we shall apply ourselves diligently to our studies or dodge them.

When we start work we have to choose whether we shall make it our first consideration and apply our whole selves to it, or whether we shall treat it as secondary to having a "good time."

In our youth we have to choose between giving rein to our appetites or keeping them under control.

Every human being is early confronted with the problem of choosing what line, or mode, of life to adopt.

Does it not seem to you, on reflection, that the reason why we make so many poor choices is that we do not attach adequate importance to each choice we make?

Do we not often tell ourselves that it is entirely unimportant whether we choose one course or another?

Life can be likened to a mosaic. Each particle is small, but whether the whole mosaic is a masterpiece or a hideous monstrosity or merely mediocre depends upon whether its builder chose each particle wisely or unwisely.

You and I are mosaic workers.

Each day we have to choose a certain number of particles to be fitted into the framework of our lives.

Although we may not fully realize it, the beauty or the ugliness of the product depends on the choice we daily make of the kind of particles we use.

Our choices are actuated by what we are, by what we have stored in our heads, by what we have in our hearts, by how we have disciplined our bodies, by how we have shaped our ambitions.

Our choices, in short, reflect ourselves. To make right choices we must strive to make ourselves right.—[Forbes Magazine (N. Y.)

"Carry on" is just as good a slogan today as it was during the war.—[Forbes Magazine (N. Y.)

CARE OF THE BODY.

typical New Yorker, whether artist or mere trader, feels the heavy hand of the capitalistic bourgeoisie upon him at all times. He is always looking over his shoulder furtively, in fear that he may have done something that is not approved, and so brought down upon himself some inexplicable penalty.

"Here are the great rewards, but here also are the inviolable taboos. The individual, facing that relentless regimentation, is afraid to be himself. Above all, he is afraid to be an American. The town is shoddily cosmopolitan, second-rate European, extraordinarily cringing, a sort of international Jenkins."

I haven't been in New York since 1876, so I don't know whether this is true, but I do know that you couldn't hire me to live in New York.

Sanitation vs. Medication.

CHARLES F. DINGMAN, an expert engineer, recently wrote to the Engineering News Record of New York, complaining that the Medical Trust takes credit that is due entirely to sanitary engineers. He says:

"Of what use is it to spend enormous sums to drain swamps and do other work to get rid of the malaria bearing mosquito? Would it not be better to train these very mosquitoes to just administer a prophylactic dose of their poison and thus inoculate us against the more vicious bite of their uncaptured and, therefore, uncultured and untrained brethren? And is it not true that even the most ardent advocate of these so-called preventive inoculations would much rather, so far as he personally is concerned, forego all the pleasure and protection that he gets from them than to be deprived of the real protection which real sanitary engineering gives him? And, putting it real plainly, is it not true that in most cases sanitary engineering has prevented the outbreak of epidemics, and where this was impossible has materially aided in restricting their spread, even in spite of the fact that the population had been subjected to various forms of inoculation?

"Insead of urging, as you do in your editorial, that the people submit to further interferences with their personal habits and liberties for what is alleged to be for the common good, I believe that the time is here when engineers should cast aside all false ethics and show the actual harm that is being done by the introduction of animal poisons into the human body, an act which is both revolting, unnatural and unclean, and how the reliance on such ineffectual measures tends to obscure the need for measures that are really effective and that must be taken before any relief can be obtained."

Own a Home.

A CORRESPONDENT writes:

"We need not look far back into history to prove, nor far around us in the world to see, that the deepest contentment and the highest prosperity are ever found where there are the most proprietors of small holdings of land, each owner living upon an dcaring for his own property. The most stable and ideal governments in the world are those whose citizens in the largest number own and occupy their homes.

"The first step in the prevention of anarchy is to secure a home owning and home-loving people, and the longest step toward peace and prosperity in a nation is the possession of its own home by each family in the state. The fundamental reason for this is in our nature—our intuition demands it—we know, because we are created to know, that the family home is the nearest approach to heaven that this earth affords, and is the source of the deepest contentment the human heart can attain."

"Towers of Silence."

THE Parsees, of Bombay, are the richest and most progressive of the Hindoos Most of them are merchants, and many are millionaires. Several have been knighted, for charitable work. They are sun worshipers, following the doctrines of Zoroaster. They have a curious and revolting method of disposing of their dead. Following is from the autobiography of Lady Isabel Burton:

"We stayed at Bombay some little time, and among other things we visited the Towers of Silence, or Parsee charnel-house,

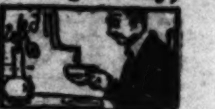
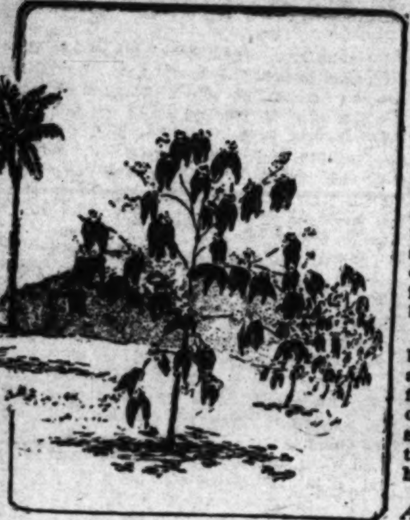
The Cult of Coffee



BY DUDLEY S. CORLETT.



Coffee in Blossom.

IF TEA is principally produced within the British empire, it is not so with coffee. Once it was the chief product of many of the islands of both the East and West Indies, but for various reasons it has so decreased as to only form a very small addition to the world's supply. In Ceylon, for instance, the vast areas that are now occupied with tea were once all under coffee. And right here is an excellent illustration of the old fallacy that any fool can be a planter. It was the son that appeared to have no brains for anything save an outdoor life that was shipped abroad to make his fortune in planting. What was the more general result, was that he quickly succumbed to the evils of drink induced by a hot climate or sank into the inertia of a loose manner of living encouraged by the lax morals of the tropics. In either case, when he became ill, it was attributed to the malarious climate rather than to his bad mode of life. Thus did the tropics gain an ill reputation in Europe. Now, in the case of coffee, here were millions of pounds invested in an important industry and no precautions were taken to study its needs or to protect it from disease. The consequence was that when the dreaded yellow fungus appeared on the leaves and so weakened the trees that the following attack of the green scale insect completely wiped out the whole industry by killing every tree, man was unprepared and being of an unscientific and easy-going mind stood helplessly by watching his living being swept away. And the coffee of Ceylon could all have been saved had only science instead of fools been at hand to cope with the disease. Some of these old coffee planters are still to be met with and they bear the dejected look and depressed gait, even after forty years, of those with whom Fate has dealt unkindly.

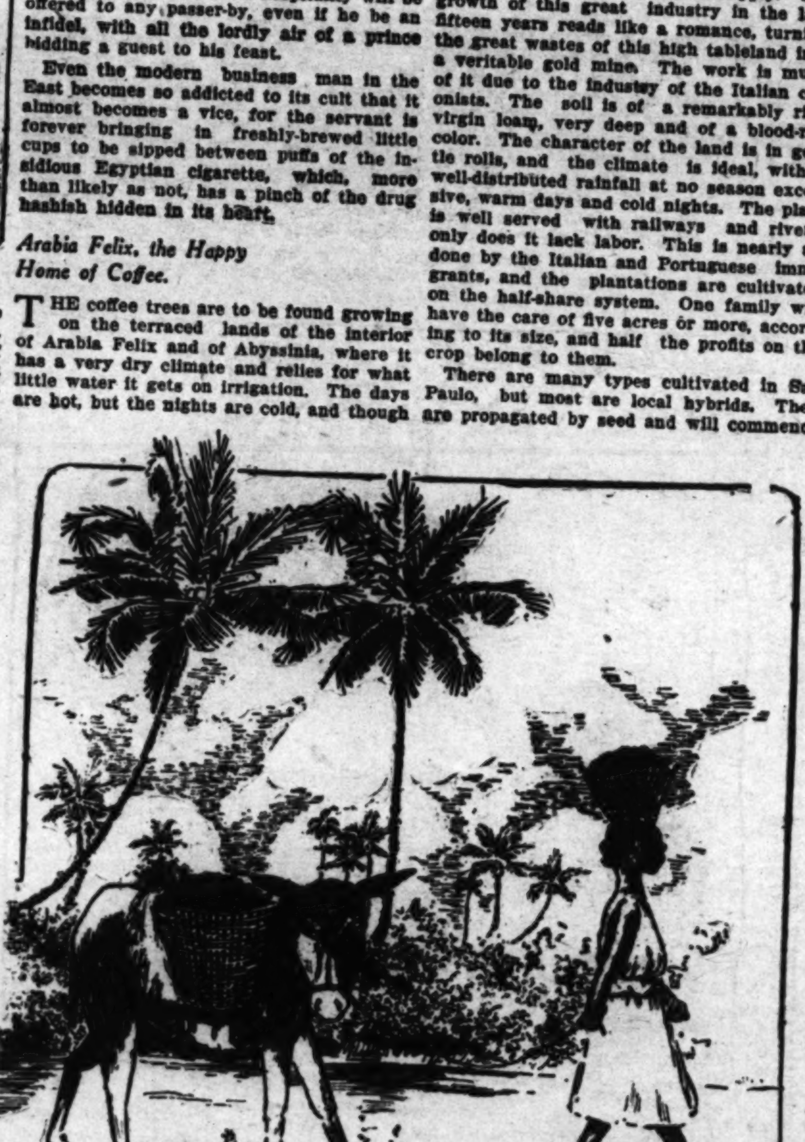
The Serving of Coffee is a Ceremonial in the Orient.

COFFEE is indigenous to the rocky mountains of Arabia and in its pungent aroma lurks all the charm of the East. It is probably one of the oldest of the cultivated beverages, after the grape, known to man, and was a favorite brew of the patriarchs of the Bible. To the true Arab it is almost a religious cult and is served at the rich man's divan with as great ceremony as to the begger squatting at the door of the mosque. It is the mark of courtesy and the height of hospitality to proffer coffee to the guest, after which, as long as he abides in that house, he can suffer no harm. The slaves of the wealthy prepare their master's coffee with a special ceremony. Only the finest beans from Mocha are ever used, freshly roasted and ground in a stone mortar. In a little pot of polished brass is it thrice boiled, over the smokeless fire of glowing charcoal. Each time that it froths up is it taken off and allowed to partially cool before being boiled again. Then is the little handless cup, with its dark blue Persian pattern, taken and warmed over a burning stick of perfumed mastic. Into the frothing coffee is dropped a tiny morsel of precious ambergris to bring out the full aroma and enhance the flavor. Last is added the sugar to make it richly sweet. Then on a tray of burnished brass inlaid with silver, the brass pot and the little blue cups are borne before the host and his guest and the thick fragrant fluid poured out and sipped with all due ceremony and enjoyment. There are special slaves who do nothing but preside over this coffee cult, for the Arab will consume as many as thirty cups at different times of the day. To the poor peasant squatting beside his field, his wife will bring his coffee in a little earthenware pot resting on a mat of gaily-colored plaited palm leaves, which she will set on the ground beside him together with the little cup. She will not be asked to share it with him, but its hospitality will be offered to any passer-by, even if he be an infidel, with all the lordly air of a prince bidding a guest to his feast.

Even the modern business man in the East becomes so addicted to its cult that it almost becomes a vice, for the servant is forever bringing in freshly-brewed little cups to be sipped between puffs of the insidious Egyptian cigarette, which, more than likely as not, has a pinch of the drug hashish hidden in its heart.

Arabia Felix, the Happy Home of Coffee.

THE coffee trees are to be found growing on the terraced lands of the interior of Arabia Felix and of Abyssinia, where it has a very dry climate and relies for what little water it gets on irrigation. The days are hot, but the nights are cold, and though frost is fatal to the trees, they will grow at an altitude of many thousands of feet. The soil is rough and sandy and the cultivation the trees receive is of a very scanty nature. Thus are they subject to disease and neglect and much of the area formerly cultivated is being given over to other crops. Yet in spite of all there is no flavored coffee produced in any other part of the world that is equal to the true Mocha grown in the Yemen of Southern Arabia. Next to it comes the coffee from Harrar in Abyssinia, where the climate is similar to that of the Yemen, but the flavor is not so delicate and more bitter. So high is the price paid for this coffee that it is never used in Europe by itself, but always blended with inferior beans. Naturally the scale of this precious coffee have long ago been planted elsewhere, but generally transplanted to countries where the cultivation was carried on in a wet climate, with the result that Arabian plants showed their delicate disposition, and like all true Arabs, flourished not in their strange habitat. Disease killed them, and the hot, humid climate quickly deteriorated their aroma and flavor of their fruit. So small is the supply of Mocha beans that are brought down from the mountains in the palm leaf bags on the backs of the camels to the Red Sea port of Mocha, that it cannot supply a moiety of the world's demand, so any stuff that in any way resembles it is sold by unscrupulous dealers as Mocha.



Off to Market.

COFFEE trees grow to a height of fifteen feet or more, but for the convenience of picking they are generally pruned down to a reasonable height. Coffee has found a congenial home in the southern state of Sao Paulo in Brazil, which claims to produce two-thirds of the world's supply. The growth of this great industry in the last fifteen years reads like a romance, turning the great wastes of this high tableland into a veritable gold mine. The work is much of it due to the industry of the Italian colonists. The soil is of a remarkably rich virgin loam, very deep and of a blood-red color. The character of the land is in gentle rolls, and the climate is ideal, with a well-distributed rainfall at no season excessive, warm days and cold nights. The plain is well served with railways and rivers, only does it lack labor. This is nearly all done by the Italian and Portuguese immigrants, and the plantations are cultivated on the half-share system. One family will have the care of five acres or more, according to its size, and half the profits on the crop belong to them.

There are many types cultivated in Sao Paulo, but most are local hybrids. They are propagated by seed and will commence bearing in three to four years. Unlike the East, the trees here are grown without shade. When the trees are in blossom, the white jasmine-like flowers clustering thickly on each slender branch, they perfume the whole air with their strong fragrance, till one feels drugged as at some Bacchanalian wedding feast. When the berries are ripe they turn a rich red and are either picked by hand or stripped off into large cloths laid on the ground to be easily gathered up. The outer skin of the cherry, as it is called, has a sweet flavor. There are two pickings in the year, and at the principal one the plantations present a busy scene with the whole families of Italians all chattering their pretty language and dressed in their own picturesque style. Wagons drawn by oxen or mules take the harvest to the barbecues, where the cherries are submitted to one of two processes. They are either simply dried in the sun and, after maturing for some time in their parchment to improve their flavor, the parchment is taken off by passing through a machine, when the beans are ready for bagging and shipment to the great city of Sao Paulo. The other method is to wash the cherries and leaving them heaped to ferment, the skins are pulped off and the beans dried. By far the greater bulk of this coffee is of the most inferior type, through poor selection of the better varieties in the first place, and secondly, through careless cultivation and preparation. However, there are a few of the more advanced cultivators and some of the companies, who do produce a high-class grade of coffee from selected varieties, some of which bear very fine berries, though none ever equal those of Mocha.

Brazilian Government Stepped in to Aid Coffee Growers.

IN SAN PAULO the merchants who buy and store the bulk of the coffee mix the varieties together, so that what little good coffee is produced is mostly lost in leavening up the poor stuff to make a marketable product. Some time ago Brazil found herself in the position where she was producing more than she could dispose of. So she instituted what is known as the valorization of the crop. That is, the government virtually purchased the surplus crop of many millions of bags and stored it in Germany, France and other coffee-consuming countries. By this method the price of the coffee was kept up and a store of the beans was kept against seasons of poor crops.

At the same time an order was issued against the planting up of new areas in coffee. The war consumed the whole of the store in Europe (for which Germany has yet to settle for what she consumed) and a severe frost in 1917 killed many of the trees and so reduced the crop. The port of Santos handles nearly all the coffee, and her docks are fitted with all the latest machinery for loading the ships. The Brazilians show their oriental character in their love for this beverage, and in Rio de Janeiro the cafes are numerous and good. For a cent the tired shopper or the worried business man may revive their spirits with a small cup of the black brew, which they understand to make perfectly, in order to bring out the full flavor and aroma. The Brazilian is as much its devotee as an Egyptian.

British East Africa is Rapidly Becoming Coffee Producer.

ONE of the latest countries to enter the coffee market is that of British East Africa, and here, on the high tablelands, the forest and plain is giving way to the enterprise of the pioneer, and plantations are rapidly springing up and prospering. Soil and climate are suitable and labor is plentiful and cheap, if it is not very intelligent or reliable. Java and the southern islands also produce a high-class grade of berry through the extraordinary fertility of their volcanic soils and the industry of their people. The trees in these tropical countries are mostly grown under the shade of leguminous trees to protect them from the extremes of wet and sun which tends to burn the delicate leaves. The trees are very subject to a variety of diseases, which have to be carefully watched and combated or it will soon spread and ruin the whole plantation. The life of a coffee tree is only about thirty or forty years.

In the town of Harrar in Abysainia we have seen the women selling the husks and parchment of the berries heaped up in their little baskets of plaited palm. To the very poor, who crave for the comfort of their coffee just as much as their richer brethren, it appears that even these waste products are capable of making some sort of brew. Failing this they will gather a few leaves from the terrace of some coffee garden, for the trees in Abyssinia are all grown on small terraces on the hillsides for irrigation purposes, and drying the leaves in the shade they will make a not unpleasant infusion from it which somewhat resembles a weak brew of tea. 'Tis the poor man's substitute for the Cult of Coffee.

Natural Foods.

"NATURAL FOODS OF CALIFORNIA" is a booklet by Otto Carque (Carque Pure Food Co., Los Angeles.) Regarding the superiority of dried over canned fruits the author writes:

"The difference between canned fruits and dried fruits, both in regard to price and wholesomeness, is seldom realized. For instance, a can of apricots retailing at 30 cents contains one pound of fruit and twelve ounces of cane syrup manufactured from refined sugar. One pound of the best evaporated apricots equal nearly seven pounds of fresh fruit and retails for about 65 cents. It is therefore furnishing almost as much nutritive value as seven cans of apricots. The syrup, being devoid of organic salts, is used only as a preservative. In other words, one pound of evaporated fruit equals about six cans of preserved fruit. The consumer has to pay for the cost of the syrup and canning, also for the increased cost of transportation."

As to the objectionable practice of sulphuring fruits Mr. Carque says:

"Sulphur is used in the drying process of many fruits, to obtain a brighter and more uniform appearance, making the article attractive to the eye at the expense of its wholesomeness. By improving systems of evaporation we are now in a position to furnish a line of wholesome fruits which come as near as possible to the hygienic value of fresh fruits, at a cost which is but a trifle higher than that of sulphured fruits. If we consider the fact that highly sulphured fruits can be preserved with a water content as high as 30 per cent while unsulphured evaporated fruits show on an average a moisture-content of no more than 15 or 20 per cent, we must see the latter are really cheaper from a standpoint of health as well as economy.

"Extensive experiments carried on by Dr. H. W. Wiley, former chief chemist of the United States Department of Agriculture, have shown that the use of sulphuric acid in food is deleterious, that it never adds anything to the flavor or quality of a food, but renders it less palatable and healthful. Sulphur, like all other chemical preservatives as benzoin acid, saccharin, etc., is purely a drug, devoid of food value, and exerting harmful effects on the digestive organs.

"Sulphuric acid retards the assimilation of foods and overworks the kidneys, which have to remove all the added sulphur from the body.

"It also seriously interferes with the formation of the red blood corpuscles. It is therefore evident that the sulphuring of fruits destroys to a large extent their hygienic value."

Fruit sugar is shown to be as wholesome as refined cane sugar is injurious.

Getting Well by Stealth.

A WOMAN consultant writes:

"I have had pulmonary tuberculosis for the last three years. . . . In January the doctors learned I had been pregnant for six months, so they quit all treatments, and my lung gradually expanded, as much as adesions will allow, and function quite a little.

"The doctors were convinced I would die and the baby, too, but unknown to them I had been following your teachings closely for some time and did all through pregnancy, with the result that I had a comparatively easy delivery, and the baby was a fine, strong girl. . . .

"The doctors say I am their 'prize patient,' as they never thought I could get well, and they can't understand why I get better. They don't know that I try to follow your advice. In fact, they think you and others with your common sense ideas, are freaks."

The Making of Silly Billy—A Dog Story.

BY ERNEST THOMPSON SETON.

ANN YANCY was hugging her "doggie" and what could he do? "It's my Billy—you shan't touch him. Go way you, naughty Daddy!" And the matter ended in a disastrous defeat for Daddy.

Every member of the family loved Silly Billy, but they wished from the bottom of their hearts that he might, somehow, soon develop at least a glimmer of common dog sense. For he was already past the time when with most bull terriers the irresponsible exuberance of puppyhood is ended; and for his destined place among his master's hunting dogs, he, it was judged, was not yet ripe enough.

Bob Yancy was a hunter, a professional—there are a few left—and his special line was killing bears, mountain lions, lynxes, wolves and other such things classed as varmints, for whose destruction the State pays a bounty.

Much of this hunting was done on the high level of "the chase." The morning rally, the far cast for a trail, the warning hunt, the hot pursuit, and the finish with a more or less thrilling fight—that was ideal. But it was seldom fully realized. The mountains were too rough. The game either ran off altogether or, by crossing some impossible barrier, got rid of the hunters and then turned on the dogs to scatter them to flight.

That was the reason for the huge bear traps that were hanging in Yancy's barn. Those formidable objects would not actually hold the bear a prisoner; when fastened to a convenient log, they were gripped on his paw, they held him back so that the hunters, even on foot, could overtake the victim.

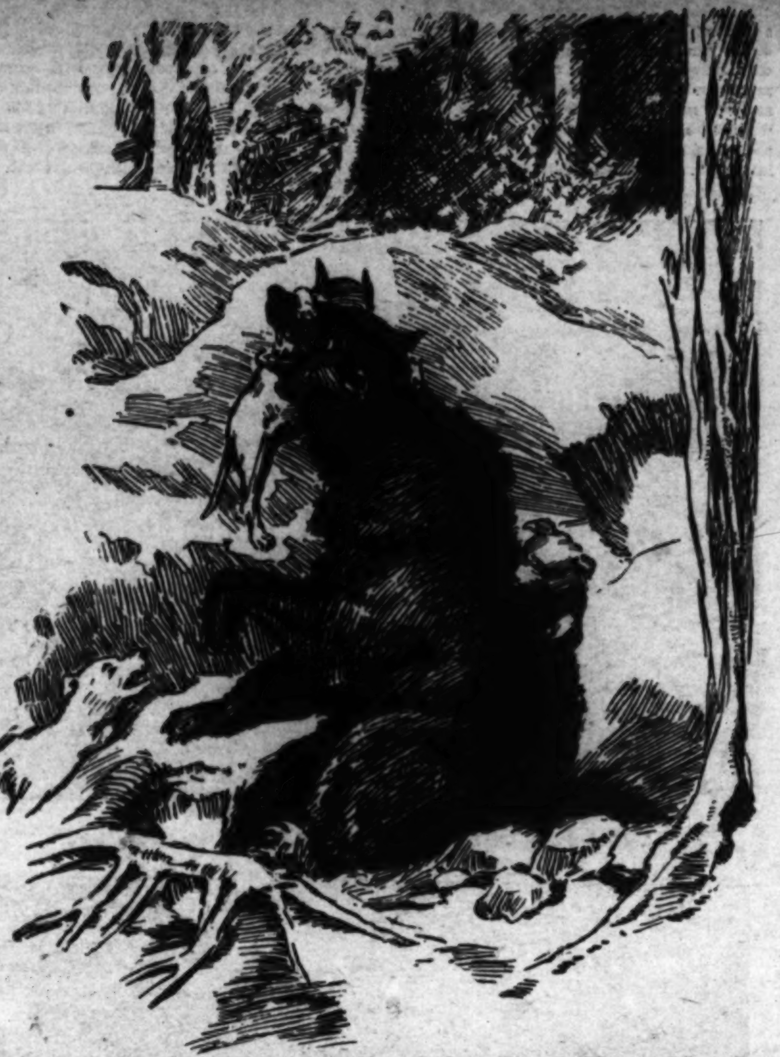
The dogs, however, were the interesting part of the pursuit. Three kinds were needed. Exquisite trailers, whose noses could follow with sureness the oldest, coldest trail; swift runners for swift game, and intelligent fighters. The fighters had, of course, to be brave, but intelligence was more important, for the dogs were expected to nip at the bayed quarry from behind and spring back from his counter blow, rather than to close at final grips.

Thus there were bloodhounds, greyhounds and a bulldog in the Yancy Pack; and, of course, as always happens in a community of diverse bloods, there were some half-castes whose personal worth had given them some social prestige and was accepted as an offset to doubtful pedigree. Most of the pack had marked personality. There was Croaker, a small bitch with an exquisite nose and a miserable little croak for a bay. You could not hear her fifty feet away, but, fortunately, Big Ben was madly in love with her; he followed her everywhere, and had a voice like the bell for which he was named. He always stuck close to Croaker and translated her feeble whispers into tones that all the world within a mile could understand.

Then there was Old Thunder, a very old, very brave dog, with a fine nose. He was a combination of all good gifts and had been through many fights, escaping destruction only by reason of the admirable sagacity that tempered his battle rage. Though slow and feeble now, he was the acknowledged leader of the pack, respected by dogs and men.

The bulldog is more conspicuous for courage than discretion, so that the post of bulldog to the pack was often open—the last bulldog had been buried with the bones of their last grizzly. But Yancy had secured a new one—a wonder. He was the final, finished and perfect product of a long line of fighting bulldogs that were kept by a famous breeder in another State. And when the new incumbent of the office arrived it was a large event to all the hunters. He was no disappointment; broad of head and chest, massive in the upper arm and hard in the flank, a little undershot, perhaps, but a perfect beast of the largest size. Surly, savage beyond his kind, the hunters at Yancy's knew at once that they had a fighting treasure in the Terrible Turk.

It was with some misgiving that he was turned loose on the ranch. He was so unpleasant in his manner. There was a distinct lack of dogginess about him in the gentle sense, and never did one of his race display a greater arrogance. He made no pretense of hiding his sense of contemptuous superiority, and the pack seemed to accept him at his own value. Clearly they were afraid of him. He was given the right of way, avoided, indeed, by his future comrades. Only Silly Billy went bounding in hilarious friendliness to meet the great one; and a few minutes later flew howling with pain to hide and whimper in the arms of his little mistress. Of course, in a world of brawn the hunters had to accept this from their prize fighter, and see in it a promise of mighty deeds to come, in his own domain.



The Huge Head Jerking Back and Forth Made the Little Beast Go Flapping Like a Rag.

In the two weeks that passed about the ranch the Terrible Turk had quarreled with nearly every hound in the pack. There was only one, indeed, that he had not actually injured. That was Old Thunder. Once or twice they confronted each other, as when Thunder was gnawing a bone that the Turk seemed to want, but each time Thunder stood his ground and showed his teeth. There was a certain dignity about Thunder that even a dog respected, and, in this case, without any actual conflict, the Terrible Turk retired and the onlookers hoped that this augured for a kindly spirit they had not hitherto seen in him.

October was glowing on the hills and long unwonted peeps of distant snow peaks were showing themselves through thinning treetops when word came that Old Reelfoot, a famous cattle-killing grizzly, had reappeared in the Arrowbell cattle range and was up to his old tricks, destroying live stock in a perfect mania for destruction. There was a big reward offered for Reelfoot—several times that held out for an ordinary bear. Besides, there was really a measure of glory attached to his destruction, for every hunter in the country for several years back had tried to run the great grizzly down, and tried in vain.

Bob Yancy was ablaze with hunting ardor when he heard the news. His only dread was that some rival might forestall him. It was a spirited procession that left the Yancy Claim that morning headed for the Arrowbell Ranch. There was Bob on his best mount, with his horn on his back; the motley pack straggling along or forging ahead till ordered back in line by the huntsman. There was the venerable Old Thunder staidly trotting by the heels of his old friend Midnight, Yancy's coal-black mare; and just in advance was the Terrible Turk, with his red-rimmed eyes upturned at times to measure his nearness to the powerful black mare's hoofs. Big Ben was fast by Croaker, of course, and the usual social lines of the pack were well drawn. Next was a packhorse laden with a huge steel bear trap on each side, then followed packhorses with the camping outfit, and other hunters, the cook and the writer of this story.

Everything was in fine shape for the hunt and we were well away when a disconcerting element was tumbled in among us. With many a yelp of glee there came bounding that fool bull terrier, Silly Billy, like a Junebug among honey bees, like a crazy schoolboy in a council-room, he rollicked and yapped, eager to be first, to be last, to take liberties with Thunder, to chase the rabbits, to bay the squirrels—ready for anything but what was wanted of him—to stay home and mind his own business.

Bob might yell "Go home!" till he was hoarse. Silly Billy would only go off a little way and look hurt, then make up his mind that the boss was only fooling and didn't mean a word of it, and start in louder than ever. He steered clear of the Turk, but otherwise occupied a place in all parts of the procession practically all the time.

No one wished him to come, no one was willing to carry him back, there was no way of stopping him that little Ann would have sanctioned, so Silly Billy came, self-appointed, to a place on the first bear hunt of the season.

That afternoon the party arrived at the Arrowbell ranch and the expert bear man was shown the latest kill — a fine heifer, barely touched. The grizzly would surely come back for his next meal. Yes, an ordinary grizzly would, but Reelfoot was an extraordinary animal. Just because it was the bear fashion to come again soon, he might not return for a week. Yancy set a big trap by this kill, also seeking out the kill of a week gone by, five miles away, and setting by that another gaping pair of grinning cast-steel jaws. Then all retired to the hospitable ranch house, where Turk succeeded in mangling a lightweight sheep dog, and Silly Billy had to be rescued from a milky drowning in the churn.

Who that knows the grizzly will be surprised to hear that that night brought the hunter nothing, and the next was blank. But the third morning showed that the huge brute had come, in craftiness, to his older kill.

I shall not forget the thrills of the time. We had passed the recent carcass near the ranch. It lay untouched and little changed. We rode on the five miles to the next. And before we were near we felt there was something doing, the dogs seemed prickled up, and there was some sensation in the air. I could see nothing, but while yet a hundred yards away, Bob was exulting, "A catch this time, sure enough."

Dogs and horses all were inspired. The Terrible Turk, realizing his importance, breasted his way to the front and the rumbling in his chest was grand as an organ. Ahead, behind and all around him was Silly Billy, yapping and tumbling.

There was the carcass, rather "high" but untouched. The place of the trap was vacant, log and all were gone, and all around were signs of an upset, many large tracks, so many that scarcely any were clear, but farther on we got the sign most sought, the thirteen-inch track of a monster grizzly and the bunch on the right paw stamping it as Reelfoot's trail.

I had seen the joy blaze in Yancy before, but never like now; he glowed, letting the dogs run free, and urging them on with whoops and yells of "Sic, him, boys!" "Ho, boys!" "Sic him!" Not that much urging was needed by them—this way and that they excitedly circled, each for himself. For the bear had thrashed around a while before at length going off. It was Croaker that first had the real trail, Big Ben was there to let the world know, then Thunder indorsed the statement. Had it been Plunger that spoke the rest would have paid no heed, but all the pack knew Thunder's voice and his judgment was not open to question. They left their devious different tracks, and flocked behind the leader, baying deep and strong at every bound, while the Turk came hurrying after and Silly Billy tried to make amends in noise for all he lacked in judgment.

Intoxicating moments, those, for all the hunt. However civilized a man may be, such sounds and thoughts will tear to tatters all his civilized ways and show him up again a hunting, predacious animal.

Away we went, the bawling pack our guides. Many a long detour we had to make to find a horseman's road, for the country was a wilderness of rocky gullies, impenetrable thickets and down timber, where fire and storm had combined to pile the mountain slope with one dead forest on another. But we kept on, and within an hour the dinning of the pack, in a labyrinth of fallen trees, announced the bear at bay.

No one who has not seen it can understand the feeling of such an hour. The quick dismount, the tying of the nerve-tense horses, the dragging forth of guns, the swift creep forward, the vital questions, "How is he caught? By one toe that will give, and set him free the moment he charges? Or firmly by one leg? Is he free to charge as far as he can hurl the log? Or is he stalled in trees and helpless?"

Creeping from trunk to trunk we went, and once the thought flashed up, "which of us might not come back alive?" And what a din those dogs were making! Every one of them was in the chorus. Yapping and baying, high and low, swaying this way and that, which meant the bear was charging back and forth and had still some measure of freedom.

"Look out, now, don't get too close," said Yancy. "Log and all, he can cover fifty feet while you make ten, and I tell you, he won't bother about the dogs if he gets a chance at the men. He knows his game."

There were more thrills in the woods than the mere sounds or expectations accounted for. My hand trembled as I scrambled down over the timber. It was a moment of fierce excitement as I lifted the last limbs and got my first peep, but it was a disappointment. There was the pack, bounding, seething, yelling, and back of some brush was some brown fur, that was all. But suddenly the brush swayed, and forth rushed a shaggy mountain of flesh, a tremendous grizzly—I never knew one could look so big—and charged at his tormentors, who scattered like flies when one strikes at a swarm of them.

But the log on the trap caught on a stump and held him, the dogs surged around, and now my view was clear.

This is the moment of all in the hunt. This is the time when you gauge your hounds. This is the fiery furnace in which

CARE OF THE BODY.

CONDUCTED BY
HARRY ELLINGTON BROOK, N.D.

State Medicine.

FOLLOWING is a press dispatch from Sacramento, Cal.:

"It is time that human beings in the United States be given at least equal consideration with plants and animals."

Thus ends an appeal issued by the State Board of Health for a Federal health department, with representation in the President's Cabinet. The appeal said in part:

"There is no Federal department to advise the citizen how to conserve his own health, how to prevent the contraction of communicable diseases, how to develop physical strength, energy, vitality and reserve.

"There is need today for stronger, better American citizens, and a Federal health department should be established to provide service for making citizens into better, healthier Americans. It s executive should have a place in the President's Cabinet."

Always striving for control of the bodies of the American people, and with the same old arguments.

Does the allopathic school of medicine "teach people how to conserve their own health?" No, indeed. Ask one of them what you should eat, and nine times out of ten—to cover their ignorance—the answer will be: "Eat what you please," or "Eat what seems to agree with you."

"There is need for better, stronger American citizens." Yes. But does "medical science" make them? Ask the many thousands of soldiers in our hospitals, suffering not from wounds, but from "scientific" treatment, while in the army.

Not only laymen, but an increasing number of independent physicians, are uttering warnings against the establishment of a system of State medicine, which is more odious and dangerous than State religion. Here are extracts from the Presidential Address by J. W. Van Derslice, M.D., Oak Park, Ill., before the Illinois State Medical Society, at Rockford, May 19, 1920, as reported in the Illinois Medical Journal, June, 1920:

"It would appear to the observer conversant with the facts that there is a trend of events that cannot be gainsaid; that the logical interpretation of past occurrences is that the medical profession stands today upon the threshold of State medicine unless the organized profession with united, persistent, aggressive measures combats the various agencies which are so surely bringing about a socialization of the profession.

"This exploitation of the profession has not been confined to the legislative bodies but in no small measure it has been evolved by members and organizations of the medical profession itself.

"The medical profession of this country has given organized and individual effort toward the creation of a United States Department of Health. To this idea all have subscribed; this largely, first, because it appealed to our vanity; second, because many prominent members of the profession approved it. Nevertheless, the safety to the profession depends wholly upon the attitude of the recipient of the office.

"For example, the aim of some of the advocates of this venture is that the department regulate the practice of medicine and allied professions; supervise all State departments of health; all State institutions, hospitals and dispensaries; that all candidates to enter the study of medicine expecting to receive State appointment shall first secure a certification of fitness from said department and only to enlist such number as the service shall annually require; in other words build up the same political institution as West Point; to fix a health standard above the minimum of which individuals are to be considered well; to have periodic physical examinations of every individual in the State; the establishment of compulsory treatment, without limitation, other than recovery or death, of those compulsorily examined and found to be below the minimum standard of health and of those taken sick; a compulsory sickness, insurance system to provide funds; the insurance premiums and payments to be determined along actuarial lines. Here is the embodiment of the defeated New York measure dressed out in new attire to be foisted upon an unsuspecting profession by the establishment of a national department of health.

"Politicians look with much favor upon any new science which increases the patronage they may be able to dispense in the form of salaried positions, as these assure at least that many workers at the polls.

"That the above picture is not greatly overdrawn as to the activities desired by those now in authority in the government public health service is evidenced by the many bills that have been introduced in Congress in which the various States were to receive government subsidies when these States agreed to act conjointly with the Public Health Service.

"There is to be a very definite attempt to secure a national department of health in the near future. Before giving the endorsement of the organization to this venture a little caution should be exercised to see what safeguards there are to be against State medicine."

Political doctors have been so reckless in their enforcement of a held-over war law, as to invite a word of caution from the A.M.A., acting through the United States Public Health Service, which warns against examining a "wrong class" of girls—that is, those whose families have some influence. Commonting on this, the Truth Teller says:

"The warning to use caution and good common sense in reporting sources of infection comes from the knowledge that health officers are assuming powers and authority which they do not possess, and that they are likely to get into trouble if they tackle the wrong person. A health officer who insists upon making a personal examination of any girl is exceeding his authority and the bounds of common decency, and should be promptly prosecuted. And a health officer who publicly visits a girl with such a purpose is liable to a charge of malfeasance which makes a perfect basis for a suit for damages and for removal from office. This action should be taken promptly, as it will stop any practice of that kind. Do not be misled by any claim of authority from the State or Federal governments to make such examinations, for there is no such authority and it cannot be given under State or Federal constitutions. Just tell such officials that they are exceeding their authority and what you intend to do, and the bluff will rarely be carried any farther. If it is, call an officer and get an honest attorney. The latter is important, as officers and attorneys generally stand in with these perverts and will advise yielding to the assault. But do not do it! . . .

"We have repeatedly offered a premium for a case of venereal disease cured by allopathic treatment, and we have not been called upon to pay it. It is true that crude doses of mercury and potash or shots of salvarsan do not cure syphilis. Nor does heroic medicine cure any disease. It suppresses it in some cases and aggravates it in many cases. In either event the patient is injured. And in the event that he begets children while a suppressed disease is in his system those children will be affected by it, often fatally and always seriously."

H. B. Anderson, secretary of the Citizens' Medical Reference Bureau, protests against State medical control of children. He says:

"Assuming for the sake of argument that the physical condition of the average pupil is as bad as claimed, does that afford a sufficient reason for enlarging the burdens and increasing the labors of those in charge, by turning the schools into general hospitals or free dispensaries? It is the plain duty of the school authorities to see to it that the school buildings and all places where the students assemble for study are safe, sanitary, comfortable, well lighted and ventilated, and in every way suitable and calculated to facilitate and promote the work to be there performed. When they assume to go beyond this, and to take charge of the physical condition and health of the pupil, we believe they have transcended their functions. This duty should be left to the parent, or the legal guardian, where it properly belongs.

"Furthermore, although there may be exceptional cases and localities, we should say that, as a general rule, if the duty of looking after the health and physical condition of the child is taken from the parents and his chosen physician and delegated to the school, it is not likely to be so well performed. Those medical practitioners who are appointed under any political regime to the charitable work of the State are not apt to be the most experienced or skilled physicians or surgeons, but rather the new recruits to the profession who are looking for business. Should the schools add this department I can readily discern the opening up of a large field for exploitation and experiment."

Tilling the Soil.

A FEW foppish and unthinking town and city dwellers sometimes take delight in referring to farmers and members of their families as "rubes," "roughnecks" and "backwoodsites."

The larger percentage of small land owners in a country the less industrial unrest.

How very differently have the really great and worth while men of the world spoken of those sturdy folk, engaged in agricultural pursuits,

Here are a few of such comments, collected by the Dearborn Independent:

George Washington—"Agriculture is the most healthful, most useful, and most noble employment of man."

Napoleon—"Agriculture is the soul and chief foundation of empires; industry produces riches and the happiness of the people. Exportation represents the superabundance and the good use of both."

Thomas Jefferson—"Let the farmer for evermore be honored in his calling, for they who labor in the earth are the chosen people of God."

Benjamin Franklin—"There seem to be but three ways for a nation to acquire wealth; the first is by war, as the Romans did in plundering their conquered neighbors—this is robbery; the second by commerce, which is generally cheating; the third by agriculture, the only honest way, wherein man receives a real increase of the seed thrown into the ground, in a kind of continual miracle, wrought by the hand of God in his favor, as a reward for his innocent life and his virtuous industry."

Daniel Webster—"The farmers are the founders of civilization."

Lord John Russell—"In a moral point of view, the life of the agriculturist is the most pure and holy of any class of men; pure, because it is the most healthful, and vice can hardly find time to contaminate it; and holy, because it brings the Deity perpetually before his view, giving him thereby the most exalted notions of supreme power, and the most endearing view of the divine benignity."

Henry Ward Beecher—"He that would look with contempt on the pursuits of the farmer, is not worthy the name of man."

Lord Chatham—"Trade increases the wealth and glory of a country; but its real strength and stamina are to be looked for among the cultivators of the land."

Virgil—"Command large fields, but cultivate small ones."

Oran Roberts, former Governor of Texas—"Civilization begins and ends with the plow."

Edward Gibson—"Agriculture is the foundation of manufactures, since the productions of nature are the materials of art."

Johnson—"Agriculture not only gives riches to a nation, but the only riches she can call her own."

Edward Everett—"Agriculture seems to be the first pursuit of civilized man. It enables him to escape from the life of the savage, and wandering shepherd, into that of social man, gathered into fixed communities and surrounding himself with the comforts and blessings of neighborhood, country and home. It is agriculture alone that fixes men in stationary dwellings, in villages, towns and cities and enables the work of civilization, in all its branches, to go on."

NERVES

AMETROPATHY is the most modern, the least understood, yet the most rational method of dealing with disorders of the nerves and internal organs. It is not suited to conditions due to organic lesion or infection. It cannot, for instance, cure tuberculosis (though it may remove the cause of the depletion that brought on consumption:) but it will produce positive results in cases of Neuritis, Neuralgia, Nervous Heart, Epilepsy, St. Vitus's Dance, Stuttering, and in functional derangements manifested by states of Fear, Despondency, Headaches, Insomnia, Asthma or Indigestion.

Persons who (in spite of sound organs) are suffering physically or mentally, particularly those subject to spells of unnatural fatigue, and to whom the known methods of treatment do not bring lasting relief, will probably find in AMETROPATHY the solution of their difficulties.

HEALING TO ALL LININGS

Seeing Glacier National Park in Four Days.

BY ALLEN M. CULVER.

"SEE AMERICA FIRST," this is the slogan you hear on every hand today, and the great railways have spent thousands of dollars on this phrase with the distinct end in view of bringing people to Glacier National Park. Their efforts have not been in vain for thousands of people yearly visit this glorious spot. We are eating breakfast in the diner, our train is an eastbound one and it has just come to a stop at Belton, Mont., which is one of the gateways to the park. There are a number of people in the diner who have the same objective in view that we have and one of the passengers asks the dining car conductor how far Lake McDonald (one of the principal attractions and the first stop that the auto stage makes after leaving Belton,) is from Belton. The conductor's face is a perfect blank, but he turns to the sleeping car conductor, who is just eating his morning meal, and puts the question to him, and he in turn answers that he has no idea. Is it any wonder that the railroads find it difficult to pay dividends?

We do not leave the train at Belton as we wish to save Lake McDonald till the last, so we continue on to Glacier Park Station, which is about sixty miles further east. We arrive here about noon and go at once to the magnificent hotel which is constructed from some of Americas largest and finest trees, in fact the entire lobby is surrounded by enormous logs in the rough that act as pillars, extending up five floors and supporting the roof. To the traveler who has visited Yellowstone National Park this hotel can be described as quite similar to "Old Faithful Inn" only a great many times larger. We arrive at the hotel just as luncheon is being served and as we have set out to see the park in four days we can waste no time, and after a very good meal we start at once in one of the auto busses for Two Medicine Lake. Every seat is taken in the stage, as, in fact, they are in all the stages, and everyone is in the best of spirits. The driver pushes right along at about twenty-five miles an hour and a little before 3 o'clock we arrive at Trick Falls, so named because there is about three times as much water descending at the bottom of the falls as there is coming over the top, due to the fact that a large portion of the water comes in through an underground passage.

Park is a Perfect Riot of Wild Flowers.

ON OUR way from here over to the lake we see every variety of wild flowers, all shades of blue, red, pink, yellow and in fact every color imaginable. I think that this park must be the greatest place for wild flowers in the world. The guide tells us that there are 260 varieties in the park. We arrive at Two Medicine Lake about a quarter of four for one hour's stop. Mountain peaks rise sheer against the sky in every direction and most of them bear Indian names given them by the Blackfeet tribe. A few of the peaks seen from the lake are Rising Wolf, Pumpelly Pillar, Rising Bull, Grizzly Mountain, etc. After our all too short stay here we return to Glacier Hotel, arriving in time for dinner. In the evening a log fire is kindled in the huge fireplace in the lobby of the hotel and everyone gathers round. And on this special evening we happen to be favored by a visit from about a dozen Indians, all in their war paint, which adds color to the scene.

From Glacier Hotel looking to the westward a great many peaks can be seen, among same being Spot Mountain, Bison, Papoose Mountain, Squaw Mountain, Bear Head and Red Crow. I love these Indian names and to me it gives you part of the atmosphere of the place in just reading over the names.

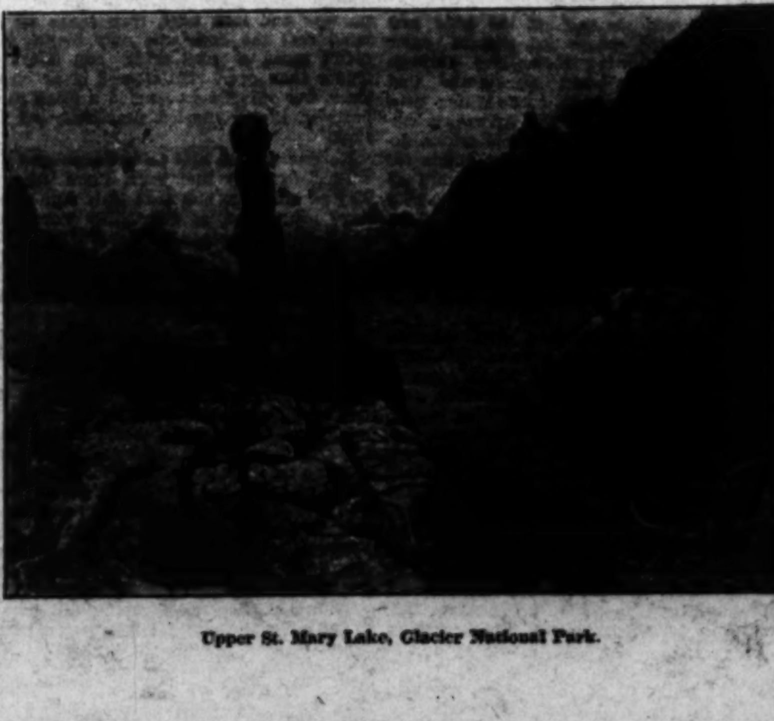
Second Day—Divide Mountain Where Water Runs Three Ways.

WE RISE early on our second day and at 8 a.m. we are on the stage bound for Many Glacier Hotel, which is fifty-five miles distant from here. In about an hour we are near Divide Mountain, from which point water runs in three directions. To the Pacific, to the Gulf of Mexico and to Hudson Bay. When we visited Yellowstone we saw Two Ocean Pond, from which water runs to both the Pacific and the Gulf, and considered it a wonderful sight, but Divide Mountain is going it one better.

At 10:20 we arrive at St. Mary Lake, some of our passengers get out here and other passengers take their seats but we will not stop here until our return trip. The roads in the park are exceptionally good and the machines travel at a rapid rate and we arrive at Many Glacier Hotel which is rather similar to Glacier Park Hotel, for luncheon. We are traveling fast as there is a great deal to see for a people who have allowed themselves just four days and at 2 o'clock we are on horseback with a party headed for Iceberg Lake, the round trip to which point is about fourteen miles. It is the most beautiful trail. Just as we start about forty boys on horseback from Culver Military Academy come galloping down the road. On our way to the lake we see bighorn sheep grazing up on the mountainside and a way up in the cliffs we see mountain goats; these little fellows the guide tells me can go right up over a practically perpendicular cliff, which seems almost incredible. We arrive at Iceberg Lake at about 4 p.m. It is a warm day and the lake is filled with dozens of icebergs, being caused by the fact that a glacier flows down into the lake and as it breaks off forms the icebergs. Our party is very loath to leave this spot and our guide has considerable trouble in getting them started back and as it is beginning to get dark he grows rather impatient. However when we at last get started the horses jog on at a merry pace and we are back at the hotel for a fine dinner at which some of the most delicious trout is served us. After our long day, which certainly does a city man a whole lot of good, we are extremely tired, in fact, I think that I have used muscles today which have not been put in play for a number of years and it does not take us long to get into our very comfortable beds. But just a little before I left the lobby some news from the civilized or uncivilized world, just as you choose to call it, crept in as a dispatch was received that Jack Dempsey had knocked out Miske in the third round. This was the first telegraphic news we have had since leaving Seattle.

Two Medicine Chalets, Two Medicine Lake, Glacier National Park.

Gunsight Lake, Glacier National Park.



Upper St. Mary Lake, Glacier National Park.

Our Third Day is a Very Busy One.

MANY GLACIER HOTEL has a most picturesque location right on the shore of Lake McDermott and my room looks right out on the lake. When I awake at 6 o'clock in the morning the fog is so heavy that we are unable to see more than thirty feet but as we are eating breakfast in the large and artistic dining-room the fog lifts and the sun breaks through, making a most glorious picture. And out across the lake we get a fine view of Grinnell Mountain, Grinnell Glacier, Mt. Wilson, Swift-Current Pass, The Garden Wall, Mt. Gould and a number of other peaks. At 8:30 we are again seated on the auto stage and are headed back towards St. Mary Lake, although the sun comes out very warm. Still while you are riding through the forest it is very cool and in order to be comfortable I have put on two pairs of wool stockings, and also I am wearing my sweater and heavy overcoat, which goes to show that a person visiting here who wishes to be comfortable must prepare for both hot and cold weather. Among other information in the small pamphlet gotten out by the railroad it says, "Take some old clothes with you," and this is certainly a valuable tip. It is all right to have good clothes along for you are meeting a lot of delightful people at the hotels and of course everyone wants to put up some kind of a front, but you can leave these at the hotel and put on your old duds when you hit the trails; also a pair of puttees are very serviceable. Our stage drives right along at a rapid rate. We drive for miles along the shore at Sherburne Lake and Swift-Current Creek, and just before we make a turn to the south the driver informs us that Duck Lake is straight ahead of us about twelve miles to the eastward, and this reminds me of old Duck Lake in Michigan where I spent so many pleasant hours as a boy.

We are now traveling along the shore of Lower St. Mary Lake and at 10 a.m. we arrive at St. Mary Chalet which is at one end of Lake St. Mary. Here we leave the stage and in about an hour after our arrival we are on the cosy little steamer making the trip up the lake to "Going to the Sun Chalets" and the trip is a most delightful one. We disembark at noon and eat our luncheon in the dining-room, from the windows of which we view the most gorgeous panorama and we obtain a fine view of Sexton Glacier, "Going to the Sun Mountain," Gunsight Pass and "Almost a Dog," "Little Chief" and "Red Eagle Mountains." After luncheon we take a hike of about three miles over in the direction of Sexton Glacier. As soon as we return our little steamer is ready to leave and at 3 o'clock we are back at St. Mary Chalet seated on the stage headed back to Glacier Park Hotel, at which place we arrive for dinner.

After a very sound night's sleep, in fact, you sleep soundly every night up here, we take the train at 8:25 a.m. to Belton, on our way crossing the Continental Divide; we leave the train at this station and

THE MESSAGE OF THE ROSES.

BY FLORA BRAIDWOOD.

CRIMSON, yellow and white! In a secluded corner of a tiny garden, they unfolded their petals to the dawn!

Three perfect rosebuds, promises of great beauty, glistening with dewdrops; the warm rays of the morning sun shone down and welcomed them to a land of loveliness! The world would be enriched by their presence, and so they traveled.

. . . .

In the old thatched cottage, under the shadow of the hill, the mother pursued her simple duties, but the days were so long since he went away!

The wrinkled hands were careworn and weary, and the eyes, once so blue, were becoming dim; the back, once so straight, was not so strong as of yore, and the dear head, that had gleamed like burnished copper, was now snow white. The years had seemed so long since he passed down the path, and out of the little gate, and faith had almost died in her heart. And then one day came the yellow rose, radiating its smiling message!

Be brave and smile, smile, smile, it seemed to whisper! But momentarily the tears welled up, as she gazed upon it, and memories crowded in, and touched her heartstrings with a wondrous, but plaintive melody. As she looked into the heart of the rose, she saw again, the face of her boy!

A tiny babe with eyes of forget-me-not blue, shell-pink hands, and ten tiny toes, on ever restless feet.

And again, as he appeared in his first breeches, hands in newly acquired pockets, and trying, oh, so hard, to be a "real big boy!"

The picture faded, and he had reached manhood; eager, impulsive, brimming with youth and ambition, and imbued with the desire to do something worth while in the world.

Then came the morning when he left her. His cap was jauntily perched on his head, he whistled his way down the well-worn path, and out on to the highroad, which would lead to the city of his dreams.

At first, she had many letters from him, and then they became less and less frequent, finally entirely ceasing. Her only son—the light of her life—had forgotten her.

The little stream gurgled past the foot of the garden, as of old. The crocuses, hyacinths and wall-flowers, bloomed and faded in their seasons, and still he came not. But the golden rose had breathed its message of faith to her.

One memorable day, a strange new feeling of expectancy permeated everywhere. The canary in his swinging home flooded the cottage with a melody of welcome. As the little mother dusted the glass case, which had housed the old stuffed owl for many years, he seemed to blink comprehendingly at her, as if he, too, participated in this newly awakened hope in her life.

There were no other footsteps that sounded just like those! The long years had no power to erase from her memory, the eager spontaneity of their tread!

Their warm tears mingled, as he held her tenderly in his arms, and all was forgiven, in the joy of reunion. Her boy had returned.

And the golden rose in the tiny broken jar, on the table, dropped from its stately stem; its mission over.

. . . .

Clutching fingers of the past seemed to strangle him, strange sounds and long, sinuous shadows haunt him forever; waves of demoniacal laughter swept across his brain, to break the tomblike silence of the night! Just to get away from them all. They seemed to beckon so' His brain was on fire. To achieve oblivion, if only for a few hours, was his one plea. But ever they crept nearer and nearer, till he felt that they would at last entirely engulf him. Out of doors, a storm raged. The very elements seemed to have conspired against him, to add new anguish to his already maddened brain, and grief stricken soul!

The thunder rolled and reverberated in the distant hills, while the vivid lightning illumined the spectral-like trees in the garden. The wind sobbed and moaned around the old house, and always he heard the drip, drip, drip of the rain!

And now he saw the face of the man whom, through an inadvertent stroke, he had hurriedly sent into another world. At sword play, his weapon had slipped, and it was over! And the light for him, also, had gone out. He had killed a man! Would the drip, drip, drip of the rain never cease! It seemed to say "Farewell." For him also, life was over; soon he would be within four small walls, probaby for years—a convict—and then these well-known lines seemed to burn into his soul like flames:

"They think a murderer's heart would taint
Each simple seed they sow.
It is not true' God's kindlier earth
Is kindlier than men know,
And the red rose would but blow more red,
The white rose whiter blow!

But neither milk-white rose, nor red
May bloom in prison air;
The shard, the pebble and the flint
Are what they give us there.
For flowers have been known to heal
A common man's despair!"

His head fell forward on the table; like an over-tuned violin, a string had snapped!

Then all was still.

He was back again in the garden of his beautiful home! Long, rolling lawns, emerald like, framed by borders of Easter lilies; rhododendrons flame on either side of the gate, just as yesterday, and everywhere he saw again bushes of big, white roses. Suddenly the snowy blossoms merged into one, as down the path the figure of the Christ appeared, bearing outstretched one perfect rose of waxen tint which He handed gently to him. He had found it—the White Rose of Hope!

The sun was streaming in through the Venetian blinds when he awoke. He pulled them up, drew aside the heavy portieres, and through the open window, on a bush hitherto unnoticed, bloomed one white rose!

A new day broke, a new [illegible] Hope was born!

A child of the slums, just one of the flotsam and jetsam, on the ocean of humanity. She had reached the age of 13 when I met her. Hair of spun gold, in which the sunbeams seemed to chase each other, and deep, dark eyes, with shadows and mystery in their depths, full of a great appeal, and questioning as if forever searching to elucidate the problems of life.

The pink geranium in the window box had ceased to exist, in spite of most assiduous attention, and it hurt her. She had tended it so carefully, watched it from a tiny bud till it bloomed into a real live flower. And now it had died! It had been quite a friend to her, too—this little waif who knew no others. In a lonely attic, through which a small patch of blue sky could be seen quite clearly on fine days, she managed to eke out a precarious existence.

Already the heritage of that most malignant of all diseases, tuberculosis, had laid its imprint upon her, and I knew that a few more months would terminate her little sojourn here. So characteristic of the disease, her days were full of hope, and promise of what she would accomplish, soon.

It was in the gray softness of a summer twilight when they met. She had finished her tasks for the day, while he—a struggling violinist in a small picture theater—was leaving, to begin his. They encountered each other on the narrow, rickety staircase, and as she smiled, his eyes rested on this little scrap of humanity, and a great love for her was born!

For many days they did not meet, till one day strange footsteps approaching heavily and slowly, warned him of something ominous. She had met with an accident, and they had sent to tell him of it.

In the long white ward of the hospital, he found himself, with somber tread; his heart filled with anguish, and unutterable sorrow. He had so little to take to her—this small girl whom he loved so dearly—but he had found a gorgeous crimson rose. The Rose of Love.

At the sound of his entrance she turned her head, and as the wistful eyes—now so dark with suffering—opened slowly, she [illegible] the Land of [illegible] her to it.

With fragile hands, that trembled [illegible], she found the door at last, a door very, very high, and almost entirely obscured, by many creepers of wondrous hues, rather difficult to find even to her eyes of Rarest Youth and unsophistication. Through a forest of wonderful green she passed. The perfume of a thousand tropical flowers, with almost overpowering fragrance, held her in their spell. The vivid "Flame-of-the-Forest" beckoned joyously to her, while millions of fireflies gleamed in the surrounding branches with an iridescence almost unearthly. Tall palms and feathery bamboos swayed in the breeze, and the night owl answering to his mate was the only sound to break the silence. A strange new peace enveloped her like a mantle.

Then it all changed, and she found herself at the edge of the restless ocean, whose great blue waves broke and fell in long lines of foam at her feet, the salt free breath, tossed and blew her hair about the small white face. As she stretched out her arms to retain it all, the scene suddenly receded from her, till it gradually faded into oblivion.

She awoke, so free from pain, and as her eyes rested on the quiet rows of long white beds, she sighed, and longed unutterably to return forever to this new land, the beauty of which had been a revelation, too wonderful to have left behind. Then the realization came to her, that what she had seen was but a brief vista of greater wonders still to come, and with a smile of infinite happiness, she closed her eyes.

When Dawn stole in, with softly trailing garments of pink and silver, the little girl slipped into the Shadows. The wood doves cooed so mournfully, and the breeze caressing the golden cornfields, was only a whisper!

But along the lonely road, she did not journey alone. The glory of the Crimson Messenger—Love—guided her steps.

So small and still. The tired little hands at rest. With one, she had crushed the Rheumatism Left Him As If By Magic!

Had Suffered Over 50 Years!

Now 83 Years, Yet a Big Surprise To Friends

Regains Strength Goes Out Fishing Back to Business Laughs at "URIC ACID"

How the "Inner Mysteries" Reveals Startling Facts Overlocked By Doctors and Scientists For Centuries

"I am eighty-three years old and I doctored for rheumatism ever since I came out of the army over fifty years ago," writes J. B. Ashelman. "Like many others, I spent money freely for so-called 'cures', and I have read about 'Uric Acid' until I could almost taste it. I could not sleep nights or walk without pain; my hands were so sore and stiff I could not hold a pen. But now, as if by magic, I am again in active business and can walk with ease or write all day with comfort. Friends are surprised at the change."

HOW IT HAPPENED.

Mr. Ashelman is only one of thousands who suffered for years, owing to the general belief in the old, false theory that "Uric Acid" causes rheumatism. This erroneous belief induced him and legions of unfortunate men and women to take wrong treatments. You might just as well attempt to put out a fire with oil as to try and get rid of your rheumatism, neuritis and like complaints, by taking treatments supposed to drive Uric Acid out of your blood and body. Many physicians and scientists now know that Uric Acid never did, never can and never will cause rheumatism; that it is a natural and necessary constituent of the blood; that it is found in every new-born babe; and that without it we could not live!

These statements may seem strange to some folks, who have all along been led to believe in the old "Uric Acid" humbug. It took Mr. Ashelman fifty years to find out this truth. He learned how to get rid of the true cause of his rheumatism, other disorders, and recover his strength from "The Inner Mysteries," a remarkable book now being distributed free by an authority who devoted over twenty years to the scientific study of this particular trouble.

NOTE: If any reader of the Times wishes the book that reveals these facts regarding the true cause and cure of rheumatism, facts that were overlooked by doctors and scientists for centuries past, simply send a post card or letter to H. P. Clearwater, No. 476-X Street, Hallowell, Maine, and it will be sent by return mail without any charge whatever. Cut out this notice lest you forget! If not a sufferer yourself hand this good news to some afflicted friend.

The Mark of the Serpent—A Weird Tale.

BY HOMER KINGSLEY.

WE WERE about three or four days out, the sea was running high, for we were getting the tail-end of a nasty nor'easter, that had almost threatened to drive us down into the tropics. Indeed one passenger declared he had observed a water-spout coming our way, and another saw a giant sea serpent bearing down upon us.

Our leviathan was taking the giant white-caps in great rolls, that to a landsman seemed mountain high. The sky was quite dark. Away to the south the lightning blazed out in uninterrupted flashes that lighted up the rigging in lurid splendor. The incessant thunder told plainly the course of the tempest.

It was far too windy for sensitive people on the promenade deck, and only those who loved the sea in its rougher mood dared venture out. Fortunately I had had no touch of mal de mer, and the brisk wind together with the tang of the storm kept me outside. That rare phenomenon, St. Elmo's fire, appeared fitfully to burn on the yard-arms; while miles abaft the track of the ship was bright on the phosphorescent water.

On the starboard side I found a group of our party who were "sticking it out," to win a bet, two to win, the others as witnesses. I joined them, and drew my chair into their circle.

"You not sick?" exclaimed one. "It's a case, once, of a physician that can at least keep himself well."

"Oh, he's immune! Not susceptible to any of his satanic majesty's tortures," sarcastically objected my stateroom mate, who was also of the medicine chest, and was beginning to be nauseated merely because he persisted in thinking about it.

"Well, this is indeed a relief!" exclaimed the ship's surgeon as he stepped up, "a whole company, and no one needing a paregoric," and he looked into each face laughingly.

"Rest awhile, with us, you're tired!" several spoke up. "Take this chair."

"On one condition."

"Name it," they answered in unison.

"That you young doctors let me have an ounce or two of ether apiece. You see there's a stitch or two to take on a patient in the steerage who had a bad fall, and she's so nervous that I'll have to put her to sleep first. My supply was lost when the container slipped off the table and broke.

"With pleasure," I exclaimed. My stateroom mate adding, "Need it now?"

"Not just yet, in about an hour or so," and he settled himself in the proffered chair.

"A favor should be recompensed—tell us a story," spoke up one.

"A story, ho!" was echoed by all.

"This shortage of ether reminds me," the ship's surgeon said, "of an incident, hardly a story—more like the last chapter of a penny terrible."

The group unconsciously settled back in their chairs, drawing their rugs up closer. A sailor passed by to adjust the binnacle lamp. A little spatter of light from the shaded electric to the right cast fantastic and grotesque shadows on the faces of the expectant listeners.

"A strange incident occurred," he began, "while on a South Pacific run. It was about the second day out from Bombay that just about dusk we picked up a lone European adrift in an open boat. He was nearly insane with thirst and hunger, and together with his disheveled clothes and hair, his sun-blackened face and parched lips, he presented a most pitiful appearance.

After plenty of fresh water, food and rest, he was able to talk coherently. It seems that the Indians had put him adrift in an open boat, as some sort of sacrifice to their gods. He would not, or could not, give any reason for such treatment. I had heard of the Sogi tribes that adhered almost to the letter of the Mosaic law in the severity of their judgments. One peculiar custom took the form of a two-fold curse to be visited upon the white man who failed to marry a native girl after having lived with her. The first part I knew to be the punishment or sacrifice of setting the man adrift in an open boat at sea, the other I had never learned—until later.

I thought no more about the rescued man or the Sogi curse, considering it rather miraculous, for the man that we happened onto his open boat.

Two days following his rescue I was half slumbering on the deck when I was aroused by a scream of terror that brought me to my feet in a hurry. Awakening so suddenly from a sort of half-sleep I experienced a tingling sensation at the roots of my hair. And the scream seemed to me particularly piercing. Just ahead of me I saw a native woman of exceptional beauty in form and figure reel into the arms of her escort.

"What is it? What's the trouble," he gasped, as I came up.

There was a circle of blank faces of those who had gathered for my response, as they watched the young woman.

"She's dying!" the young lady's escort cried, in his excitement. "Where's the ship's surgeon?"

The whole thing had occurred so suddenly that until then it had not dawned upon me that I was needed. It all seemed so mysterious and my ears were still ringing from that scream. I have a decided reticence for interfering in mysteries not my own. I stepped up to the apparently lifeless form of the young lady, and made a quick examination of tongue, eye and carotid. The symptoms were normal.

"It is nothing," I remarked as nonchalantly as my nervous tension would permit, "a mere surprise, a trifling fright perhaps. She will be herself in a moment. You must get some ice water—lower the head a bit—so."

"But what is the cause of it?" and her escort's eyes were wide with fear. He began chafing her wrists awkwardly, when the blue lips parted and a shuddering gasp escaped from the oppressed lungs. Looking wildly about her she cried: "There he is! I can't save him now! He threw me away then—" and her voice trailed off in inarticulate mutterings. The spectators stepped back discreetly, glad thatthe crisis was passed. I assisted in leading the young lady to her stateroom, and summoned the stewardess.

My curiosity then then mastered me, and I asked if he knew what caused her faint, or fright; if he had a theory, or knew of some reason.

He seized on the last word. "Reason!" he reiterated. "Theory! If I had one, I would have done something—to someone!" and his eyes glittered strangely.

I left him with a strange sensation, as if I had been suddenly dropped into a city morgue and called to examine the body of a victim of a mysterious murder case. This sensation, I analyzed to myself, was caused by the sudden awakening, and the overbearing and oppressive heat, but for all that, I had a strange unnatural feeling. As I went back on deck the second mate, who had witnessed the affair, asked me if "I smelled anything?" I glanced at him in amazement.

"Then I don't suppose you know what caused the trouble?" he questioned.

"No, hardly," I answered dubiously. I looked for a secluded spot to think it out, for my mind seemed to be in a whirl. I asked myself several times what particular emotion that scream suggested. Joy? Surprise? Hate? What? Fear seemed to be the only motive that appeared reasonable. "Fear of what?" I argued. "Fear of whom?" I asked myself. Then I tried to remember who was in the company that gathered. In an attempt to formulate a theory, I slowly walked past the scene. That portion of the deck seemed to be now deserted by all. Then it came to me that just before I had lost myself in a semi-sleep, the man whom we had rescued had been occupying the deck chair directly in front of the woman. After a moment's earnest thought I was able to focus him in my mind's eye. He wore a tan panama and a suit of white duck, each having been given him by sympathetic passengers. "Could he have been the one who had frightened that girl so?" I asked myself. But how could he have caused her to faint?

Later in the day the young lady and her friend appeared on the deck again. She was still pale and weak and clung to his arm closely. He carried a heavy cane and his eyes looked closely at the passengers.

"There seems to be trouble in the air," I thought to myself. But I stopped to speak to him.

"I am pleased to note your friend's recovery from her shock. It was really most unfortunate. Was it fright, and may I ask, if you know just what caused the trouble."

He scrutinized me keenly, and the girl shrank from my professional gaze.

"Zelia cannot explain—now!"

I noticed that he gripped his cane suggestively, or rather savagely. I was in the midst of a polite reply and offer of help, when from the deck below a pistol shot interrupted, followed immediately by a crash of glass, and there was a hoarse bellow of pain mingled with terror. I started for the companionway wondering what now threatened.

Before I could reach it, the steward came bounding up the steps and ran into my outstretched arms.

"What's up, man?" I roared.

"He's dead! He's dead! I shot him. He dropped like a beef," wailed the frantic steward, as he squirmed in my arms.

"Who's dead? Tell me quick?" I commanded.

"The man with the panama. The man we rescued! I caught him trying to swallow ether. He lifted the bottle—I fired to break it. He fell! Oh, oh, my God!" and he groaned miserably.

I gave him into the arms of a stout passenger and jumped for the stairway. Ahead I heard the hard slam of a door. As I reached the lower deck, I found enough to satisfy me that something was decidedly wrong on that ship. But to quiet the crew and passengers I strolled with all apparent leisure back on deck.

The steward came toward me. "The corpse? You found it!" he asked with a blanched face.

I answered as indifferently as possible. "Man, you're excited! Beyond a few bits of broken glass, and the odor of the chemical you mentioned I found nothing. You must have been dreaming. I would advise you to be more careful in your libations hereafter."

"You mean to say—" he flamed.

"That is all—" I said, for I desired to put an end to the whole affair until I could formulate some reasonable hypothesis for the day's events. The angry steward glanced about him and saw a hundred eyes laughing at him, and slipped away.

I retired to my cabin to think. The seeming demoniacal actions of the man with the panama hat, and in fact the whole devilish affair, nettled me. I hardly knew whether to take up the matter with the captain or not. The last occurrence was this:

The steward had entered his precincts below rather suddenly and discovered a man in the act of removing a bottle from the shelf. The steward knew the bottle contained ether, and too amazed to cry out, and too slow of mind to outwit the thief, who he thought was about to swallow the contents, he grasped his pistol and shot at the bottle. The man fell and the steward very much frightened, fled.

I pulled from my pocket an ordinary druggist label to which clung small pieces of glass. The paper said plainly, "Spirits of ether—poison," and marked with the ordinary skull and cross-bones. I looked long and hard at that tangible bit of evidence, but I did not arrive at any particular or satisfactory conclusion.

The day passed and the next. On the evening of the third day the steward apologized, and I tried to atone for my injustice to him. He happened to casually remark that the man whom we had rescued had called upon him with profuse apologies and regrets, tendering remuneration for the damage as soon as he reached friends in port. It seems that he had so far restored himself to the steward's good graces, that he had purchased the remaining stock of ether, which amounted to a small bottle partly filled.

"What did he want it for?" I asked at once, very much interested at the mention of ether again.

"Oh, I don't know, something or other on his back," he said.

I was thoroughly mystified, and even went as far as to overhaul my emergency outfit, but for the life of me I had no reason to believe that I would need it.

The ship's barometer had been steadily dropping and a storm seemed imminent. I walked the deck in a feeling of umbrage. As I turned a corner suddenly, I beheld the lean figure of the man with the panama hat regarding me intently from a point up the deck. After a moment's hesitation he thrust his hands into his pockets and stalked towards me humming a peculiar air as he did so. My every nerve seemed to be on a tension just at that time. There was a sort of feeling of the presence of the Unknown, if the presence of such a thing could be said to exist.

"A thousand apologies for disturbing you," he said, bowing; I am searching for a doctor, and I believe that you are the ship's surgeon that rendered such efficient service to me when I was picked up from that beastly boat."

I inquired what I could do for him.

"Just a slight favor, I merely desire a small quantity of ether—you have that, of course?"

"A bare whiff, I am afraid," I said, and I looked at him closely, wondering what could be the reason for his great need of ether.

"Pray get it!" he implored while his face darkened and was almost distorted. His request was almost mandatory in its intensity.

I sent the cabin boy after it. I handed it to him, determined to see for myself just what he did with it. He seemed to be shaking as if he had the ague, and almost snatched the bottle from my hand. With an inarticulate cry, he drew the stopper and dashed the contents down the back of his neck! I gazed in stupefied wonder at the inexplicable proceeding.

"In the name of—" I gasped.

He smiled. "It's all right—it's all right," he said rather hoarsely, "just a mere local irritation," then thanking me warmly he turned and walked rapidly away.

At about that time the storm began to break in fury. I went to the smoking saloon, and sat down in a far corner. I had been sitting there in moody contemplation for about an hour or two when the second mate came up.

"Come with me, quick," he said.

He wheeled and darted off rapidly, glancing over his shoulder to see if I followed. I had scarcely taken three steps when from the forward saloon came a wailing cry that nearly froze the blood in my veins, and brought the men in the smoking-room to their feet standing tense. It was a long drawn out and hopeless cry, but filled with a nameless despair.

Then it sounded again and nearer. The figure of the rescued man, without his hat, and hair disheveled, leaped up the companionway and sprawled on the deck, writhing horribly, crying with an anguish that tore at one's heart strings. He scrambled to his feet and plunged frantically forward and blindly. He stopped to clutch at the back of his neck.

Spectators who had gathered from among the passengers gave him a wide berth, no one knowing just what ought to be done. The storm was breaking in increasing fury. There was lightning and thunder. The wretched man's cries, his groaning and mutterings together with the storm filled the very air with horror.

Of a sudden the crouching form crashed to the planking with a wailing, hopeless cry. The body writhed horribly, twisting about in contortions more grotesque and gruesome than it is man's usual lot to witness with unclouded senses. The malady, if such it was—or some influence, if it was that—held him in its grasp with relentless vigor, against which he hopelessly struggled. At moments there would come a calm, then again the man would clutch at his back and moan most pitifully. It was truly awful. I remember now that none of us moved, for the thing was positively uncanny.

At moments the suffering victim bounded clear of the deck, to drop back limply, gasping and whistling for breath, ever clutching and clawing at his throat and back. My professional instinct asserted itself and I stepped forward, but my services were not needed.

The form lay on its face, pulsating feebly, and there was a sight! Limned on his bare shoulder was the repulsive outline of that most hideous reptile—the cobra. As the form moved in its last throes of life, the swelling hood of the snake seemed to expand in intensity. At last the crumpled figure flattened out in the last gasp of a merciful dissolution.

I stepped forward and bent over the form, although there were, I remember, cries of warning. I called for a pike and a scared seaman threw one at my feet. Sternly in earnest, now, I set about to uncover the mystery. Strip after strip—piece upon piece of clothing was removed from the body. With a sudden wrench I bared the back.

"Strike! Strike!" called a chorus of high-pitched voices.

I saw then and understood, for the first time. I passed the pike down the man's body—across the snake's outline—yet it moved not a hair's breadth. Again I did so for the benefit of the passengers, pressing down strongly with a like result. The truth

THE ELFIN FOREST OF CALIFORNIA

one called the fuchsia-flowered gooseberry (grossularia speciosa.) This bush goes to extremes in the matter—covering stem, branches, twigs, flowers and fruit with a prickly armor. It is partially justified in this, perhaps, as a protection to its bright, cardinal-hued, fuchsia-shaped flowers, which hang in recemose profusion from slender branches that are often several feet in length. It may be, also, that the berries minus their thorns would be especially palatable to the birds, and that Nature has therefore given them this protection. Whatever the cause, certain it is that the berries of the fuchsia-flowered gooseberry are veritable "thorn-drops." They are too small and so nearly pulpless to be of any economic domestic use. The fruit of the common wild, or canyon, gooseberry is freely gathered for making jelly, as it is much larger and juicier. But these berries, too, are heavily armored with thorns, and to gather them with comfort, one's hands must be protected with good, stout gloves.

The Flowering Currants One of the Chief Attractions of the Forest.

THE gooseberry family is well represented in the Elfin-Forest. Besides the true gooseberries, there are several of their first cousins, the currants. The chiefest of these is the flowering currant, or "incense bush," as it is often called, on account of its exceedingly heavy and rather agreeable fragrance. Not only are the flowers fragrant, but the foliage as well. One who gathers and carries home an armful of the flowering branches is perfumed as by some invisible spray. The shrub is deciduous, usually some eight or ten feet tall, and of irregular shape. It is not at all noticeable for most of the year, but along in December it comes into its own, for it is the very first of all the new flowers of the year. Then, a little in advance of its oncoming leaves, its bare branches break into bloom, and for two or three weeks the shrub becomes a light pink cloud resting among a thicket of ceanothus, sumac and other chaparral shrubbery. By Christmas time the leaves are overtaking the flowers, and the branches are in fine shape for holiday greenery. They are used to some extent for this purpose, but their keeping quality is so poor, unless they are in water, that other sorts of shrubbery are preferred where the decorations are to remain longer than a day or two. The currants which this shrub bears are of no consequence, being dry and bitter. This early-blooming currant is botanically known as ribes glutinosum, the specific name coming from the rather sticky, glutinous character of the new branches and foliage. It is a very common shrub in the near-coast mountains of Ventura and Santa Barbara counties.

There are several later species of currants, some with pink and one with yellow flowers. None has such highly scented foliage, however, as the glutinosum. One found in the San Gabriel Mountains and westward has a more delicately-scented foliage, and large recemes of rose-pink flowers; but the flowers are not so numerous and often much hidden by the leaves. Its blooming time is from January to March. I have found it in fine condition in February among the Eagle Rock hills. Its bright green leaves make it an attractive shrub at any time, but it is especially charming when in bloom. It bears the long botanical name of ribes malveceum-viridifolium.

In the higher mountains there are two or three other species of currants much resembling the last, but not so robust, nor with such pleasing flowers. The one yellow-flowered species mentioned is principally a dweller of the washes. Both in its flowers and shiny black berries it always reminds me strongly of the old Missouri currant in the garden of my youthful Middle West home.

Wild Blackberries as Big as Olives Grow in the Elfin-Forests.

THREE berry bushes of the rose family find a home in the Elfin-Forest, although no one of them is plentiful. One is a blackberry (rubus vitifolius;) another a raspberry (R. leusodermis,) and the third is the thimble berry (R. parvifolius.) The blackberry is not uncommon near the coast and in the moister canyons inland. Its berries have a very good flavor, although they are small and quite scattering on the bushes. When I first came from the Middle West—where as a boy I had gathered wild blackberries by the ten-quart pailful, and as big as olives—these wild Southern California berries were very much of a joke to me. But I have learned not to despise summer rains they are entitled to much credit for being as good as they are.

The raspberry grows at a higher altitude, being most plentiful up towards the Pine Belt. Its berries have an excellent flavor, but they are so few and far between that one gets hungry searching for them.

The true home of the thimble berry is in the north, so when we look for it here in the south, we should expect to go to the top of the higher mountains to find it; and we do. Its home here is in the San Bernardino Mountains, and around Mt. San Jacinto and Mt. San Antonio. It is a very scanty bearer in this region, and the fruit which it does produce is even more insipid than in the north—which is saying a whole bookful. Nevertheless the bush is always welcome to my sight for its fine, large leaves and wild rose-like white flowers.

The common desert sagebrush (artemisia tridentata) is not a true chaparral shrub, although in a way it is closely connected with the Elfin-Forest, in that it meets the dwarf shrubbery, and even mingles with it to some extent, where the chaparral borders on the desert. But its sister, artemisia californica, sometimes called California sagebrush, is a common shrub in many parts of the chaparral belt. It has the same ashy, gray-green foliage as its desert sister, making it a marked shrub and easy to pick out from the other shrubbery. While it is not so strongly aromatic as the desert sagebrush, it still has an abundance of the pungent odor, as one finds out when he wades through a thicket of it on an exposed slope some hot summer day. The new branches which the shrub sends up each year are covered with such a soft, gray-green foliage that one feels like stroking it—at least I always do—a feeling akin to that of the desire to run the hand over any soft, furry coat we may happen to see. These new branches look as if they would make a nice soft mattress for your mountain bed; and so I thought when I was new to the Chaparral Trail. One evening a party of us made camp near a thicket of this sagebrush. I gathered several armfuls of the stuff and made a beautiful, downy-looking bed. But when I lay down upon it, the stuff packed into a wad as hard as wood, and at the same time let me have the full benefit of all the rocks, roots, and inequalities of the ground beneath.

Beware of artemisia when looking for "mountain feathers!"

The next chapter will be on "Some Flowering Shrubs of the Chaparral."

SUCCESS.

BY FLORA BRAIDWOOD.

I HAVE just read, with much enjoyment, an article entitled "What Are You Getting Out of Life?" and which will appeal to every thinking person of today. It is so forceful, and the question is such a vital one, that I feel I must pen a few of my own thoughts relative to it.

I do not presume to be competent to attempt a reply—it is merely that the force of the article itself has started a train of thought, which has long filled me with unrest, and the intense desire to bring before those who control, to a very great extent, the destinies of the masses to endeavor to make them realize the vast struggle it is for the majority of people to even eke out a precarious existence.

A question which at this moment is absorbing us is truly, "What Are You Getting Out of Life?" For under prevailing conditions, the struggle for actual existence has become so strenuous and nerve wracking that very little time or thought can be devoted to the finer and greater side of life.

To me material things seem to be so unequally divided.

To define the word "Success" is difficult, for in its generally accepted meaning it applies to the man or woman, in this world, who, in spite of almost insurmountable obstacles, has acquired wealth and fame. But, after all, are those material acquisitions the best that life holds?

Having attained them, has it not, in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, transpired that in acquiring them many of one's follow-creatures have been trampled on, ruthlessly, in this great mad rush for fame and money?

Has it not been proven that having reached, apparently, the summit of success, some one else has accomplished just a little more? And so it goes—all a matter of comparison.

When men and women barter their very souls daily for a few dollars to swell the grand total, then is it worth while? When the cry of a little child, the voice of a fellow-comrade in distress, in this great battle of life, the outstretched hands of the sick and weary, mean nothing—then is it worth while?

When the music of the wind sighing through the pine trees, the song of the birds and the caress of the summer breeze on one's cheek mean nothing, then success is indeed empty!

MARK OF THE SERPENT.

was now apparent to all—no cobra was there!

I bent over the uncanny thing and scrutinized it closely while absolute silence prevailed. I then announced what was quite evident to me.

"It's tattoo!"

"But don't you dare to touch it!" almost screamed the Indian girl, Zelia. Then, after watching with a scared and fascinated look she shuddered and throwing up her hands to her face and covering her eyes she said aloud: "He has paid! He has paid! I told him! I warned him! Oh, if he had only stayed with me, they would never had known!" Then she reeled and almost falling she was borne away by her escort.

I superintended a hasty burial because of a desire to quiet the passengers and because the sea was getting so rough that it appeared that it might be days before it would be possible to attempt such a thing should the storm increase as it seemed likely. With a smothered splash the body was given to the raging sea.

. . . .

The ship's surgeon stopped and drew from his pocket his meerschaum pipe, filled and lighted it. The little group drew a long sigh of relief.

"Theory!" questioned one. "You didn't tell us your theory?"

The surgeon thrust his thumb and finger in an inside waistcoat pocket, extracted two small slips of paper and extended them to the questioner. He took them and glanced at them. The papers were oblong, stiff, although somewhat crumpled. The upper edges were torn as if taken from a book of similar pages. Under the near-by electric they read the following:

"Jelypoor, August 16, '19.—Prisoner among the Sogis on account of Zelia—a devilish pretty and shapely woman. Can't and won't live longer with her. Must get back, curse or no curse. Expect to be placed in an open boat and have the Sogi scourge tattooed on my back as a sacrifice to their god of women. Curse indeed! Told them to bring on their curse! Soon to be out of this hole. Will take my chances of escape by swimming ashore after they leave me.

"VAN CAMP REDFERN."

"And that was the girl—and they met!" mused some one aloud.

The other slip was a mere fraction of a day's awful record.

" . . . going far too slow. It cannot last long! My God to have never been near that Sogi woman! Ether! It must be had! The ship? Can it not be hastened? Ah? One chance! The ship's steward! I will try again. No! Oh God! He has none left! The thing! The curse! the curse!"

That was all. After examining the two small pages for myself I handed them back to the surgeon. But between those two slips—a story indeed! This man had broken some law of Heaven and nature back there among the Sogis of India! I conjectured in silence.

The sky had cleared, and the moon was shining clear and brilliant. We were all aroused from our thoughts when the ship's surgeon knocked his pipe against a ventilator and asked,

"Gentlemen, pardon me, but may I trouble you now for the—ether?"

HER ONLY HUSBAND—PERILS LURK IN CANDY, ETC.

into a taxi with drawn shades, and blissfully disposed against the shoulder of a smart gray suit, before she could reach for her handkerchief. His eyes and arms and his lips were exquisitely the same; she had been, in odd breathless moments, pathetically afraid they wouldn't be. Surely, nothing in a practical, skeptical world could be the heaven she remembered, of his heart beneath her cheek, his deep voice, muted and unsteady, at her ear—but it was—and memory not the half of it!

Rosy and dazed from his kiss, she pulled herself away after the first twilight block or so and laughed up at him with dew on her lashes.

"Lewis—you've got on a new suit! I adore your tie—do you like me?—I've gained two pounds—and this hat is new."

"You'll do," said Lewis. He barely allowed her to breathe between wordless demonstrations of his approval.

"Miss me, Marie-Louise?"

"Oh, Lewis!"

"Ever going to leave me again?"

"Never—never—never."

"Horrible, wasn't it!"

Marie-Louise shuddered closer in his arms.

"Lord—how I missed you!"

Her wonderful, inarticulate Lewis! No words wasted there—no garnishing with pretty futile phrases. A man—that was what Lewis was—a regular man!

Marie-Louise got out of the taxi with him and led him up the steps and into the parental domicile in triumph.

Mrs. Dunlevy embraced him. Trixie embraced him; Sue, the shy and drawling voiced, embraced him, even the portrait of Mr. Dunlevy, done in oils, some time about the middle eighties, looked down from the wall in a kind of aloof satisfaction. Lewis

"Run and get ready for dinner," Mrs. Dunlevy warned them presently; "fried chicken, Marie-Louise!"

Fried chicken is the fatted calf of the South. Marie-Louise bestowed a grateful little kiss upon her mother's cheek. Now, indeed, she know that Lewis was being welcomed as one of the family.

The dinner table was gracious with candles and flowers, heavy with edible tributes. Lewis did a western appetite justice. By the time black coffee arrived he was firmly installed in every one's dearest regard. Marie-Louise watched him with her happy heart on her sleeve. She could not eat—women have so little control over their emotions—but there were all the other days of her life for thinking of food.

After dinner they went back to the living-room, where Sue sang to them in a delicious soft soprano, and Mrs. Dunlevy asked polite questions of Lewis about the West. It was a perfect evening, with Marie-Louise never more than two feet aawy from Lewis's arm—until Trixie, in a moment of charming exuberance overturned the applecart of fate.

"I do think, Lewis," said Trixie, "that you are the most wonderful husband—all those flowers and things! Wiring all the way here for them, too! Poor Jimmy used to turn green with jealousy."

"Now, Trixie," murmured Mrs. Dunlevy, "you leave Marie-Louise alone!"

A long look passed between Lewis and Marie-Louise—surprise and question on his part, embarrassment, unfortunately, on hers. She had neglected to foresee, had Marie-Louise, the ostrich, that there would be at once family conversation approving Lewis for his domestic offerings. So she said the worst thing possible under the circumstances:

"Oh, Trix, do hush! Don't be silly—"

'Go on, Trixie," Lewis interrupted coolly. "Tell us all about it. Who's Jimmy, and why was be jealous?"

Trixie accepted the position of oracle delightedly.

"Why, he's an old beau of Marie-Louise—he used to send her tons of flowers, himself, before she married you—and all your flowers and things coming along now—you can see him writhe!"

"Oh, you can see him writhe, can you?" said Lewis, inspecting the back of one hand quietly—"over all my flowers and things—that's good—anything else I ought to know, Trixie?"

Trixie said no, she thought not. She was prettily coquettish about it, and altogether unconscious of having started anything.

A little later the clock on the mantel shelf struck 10 and Mrs. Dunlevy said that Lewis was probably tired from his trip and would like to go to bed.

Lewis said yes, thanks, he thought he would, and the family separated for the night.

Marie-Louise went up the stairs, with Lewis just behind her, feeling a little like a criminal and a good deal like injured innocence. She cast about desperately for the nearest form of explanation that should be convincing and truthful at the same time, but before she arrived at it, the bedroom door opened and closed and she found herself standing with her back against the pretty frivolous dressing table of her premarital days, facing a Lewis she had never seen before—a chill, impatient Lewis, with an incongruous flush rising beneath his clean, bronzed skin. Marie-Louise had never been jealous in her life. She knew none of the symptoms beyond a flattering if trivial annoyance, or might have saved trouble by an immediate laying of all her cards upon the table.

As it was, she flushed faintly in her turn and returned Lewis's look with her head high. This, she considered, was a fine way for an only husband to comport himself within the first twelve hours of reacquiring a wife.

"Marie-Louise," said Lewis grimly, "I didn't send you any flowers."

"I reckon I know that," observed Marie-Louise with almost a touch of sarcasm. It sat oddly upon her lovely tremulous mouth.

"Then who the devil did?' inquired Lewis, displaying what he believed to be extraordinary self-control in the face of incredible provocation.

'Is that the way you ask me?"

"I shouldn't have to ask you at all—I don't have to ask you." Lewis's face was burning now, his hands were shaking. He was swept with that flame than which there is no more exquisite agony, and for the soothing of which reason availeth not. "Every one but me seems to know all about it—your friend Jimmy, of course."

"Jimmy!" cried Marie-Louise. She broke into a high, unsteady litle laugh. Her nerves had been strung fairly tight that day.

"Yes, Jimmy!"

"Oh, Lewis—you're too absurd!"

"I remember him—he was in love with you when I first met you."

"If he was, I'm proud of it—Jimmy was always sweet to me—he'd never had talked to me like—like t-this!"

"Are you proud of his running after you, now you're a married woman?"

"Oh-o—Lewis!"

He overrode the horrified sob in her voice, the little hand half outstretched. He looked at her with the eyes of a cruel stranger.

"Here I've been, like a fool, sitting at home night after night, mourning over your picture, carrying your letetrs around in my pocket—thinking you cared as much as I did—making a thundering ass of myself—for your sake—and all the time Jimmy was keeping you supplied with—'flowers and things'—to such an extent that you had to tell your family they came from me—to keep 'em from asking questions, I suppose. Marie-Louise—I hate a lie."

"Do you?' asked Marie-Louise in a small voice, half-strangled with tears.

"And I won't have other men hanging around my wife."

"Won't you?"

"I never thought we'd have to come to an understanding on that subject, so soon—God," said Lewis huskfly, and turned away from her as a man turns from something no longer lovely to look upon.

Marie-Louise began to cry. She put up her hands to her eyes, but the tears ran over her fingers, and though she cried very quietly it shook her slim white shoulders and made a pitiful sound in the quiet rosy curtained room.

Presently, still crying, she went over to her desk and began to rummage in it.

"Don't show me any of his maunderings," said Lewis savagely.

"I'm not," said Marie-Louise.

She selected two or three sheets of paper from a femininely crowded pigeonhole and carried them to where Lewis stood staring down into the empty fireplace, his face hard and a little gray.

"Look," said Marie-Louise.

Lewis looked.

"Read it out loud," she told him.

He read, still without turning:

"Mrs. Lewis Galloway: To the Garden Flower shop, debtor: One violet and gardenia corsage, $5; one dozen roses, $10; six orchids, $12; "What in the name of—"

"It's receipted, you notice," said Marie-Louise, a frozen Niope at his elbow.

She gave him the other two bills as well—the one for the box of crystallized fruit and that for the yellow roses and orchids. "You see, they are all my bills," she said, "and they have all been paid. They are receipted."

"You sent flowers to yourself!" said Lewis stupidly. "Why—in the name—".

"Because," said Marie-Louise, clearly and coldly, "my family thought you should have sent me—something—every once in a while—and you didn't—and I couldn't bear to have them think."

It was she who turned away then. She ran to the coquettish ivory bed and flung herself face down upon it, sobbing as if her heart would break. Lewis followed with unbelievable swiftness. Her tears were on his cheek in no time at all.

"My little angel!" he muttered brokenly, "Oh, Marie-Louise—you adorable baby—" That was a wild flight for Lewis. It flushed him to the eyebrows, but he got it out somehow.

"You see," stammered Marie-Louise presently, with a long, delicious sigh. 'I knew you l-loved me—but they didn't—and I couldn't bear for them not—to understand—[illegible]"

Lewis lifted her into his lap and [illegible] her against his shoulder. She went [illegible] there like a bird into its nest.

"Tomorrow morning," he told her, and now it was miraculously her old Lewis back again, "we are going downtown together and I am going to buy you a ring or pin or something that will make your precious family get up on its hind legs and paw the air—what do you say?"

"Oh, Lewis, you're so western!" murmured Marie-Louise with the ghost of a giggle.

"Well, I swear to you, on my honor as a native son," said Lewis humbly, with his cheek against her soft brown hair, "that you shall never have to buy yourself a flower again!"

And she didn't—but she sometimes had to do without them, because one may, if one is agile, whitewash a leopard, but it is impossible, on the best zoological authority, to change the creature's spots.

THE MAKING OF SILLY BILLY.

the metals are all tried. There was Old Thunder baying, tempting the bear to charge, but ever with an eye to the safe retreat. There was Croaker doing her duty in a mere announcement. There were the greyhounds yapping and nipping at his rear; there, in the background, wisely waiting, reserving his power for the exact time, was the Terrible Turk; and here and there, bounding, yapping, insanely busy, was Silly Billy dashing into the very jaws of death again and again, but saved by his ever restless activity, and proud of the bunch of bear's wool in his teeth.

'Round and 'round they went as Reelfoot made his short, furious charges, and even Turk kept back, baying gloriously, but biding his time for the very moment. And whatever side Old Thunder took, there Turk went, too, and Yancy rejoiced, for that meant that the fighting dog had also good judgment and was not over rash.

The fighting and baying swung behind a little bush. I wanted to see it all and tried to get near, but Yancy shouted out, "Keep back. He knew the habits of the bear, and the danger of coming into range. But the shout of warning to me attracted the notice of the bear and straight for Bob he charged.

Many a time before had Yancy faced a bear, and now he had his gun, but perched on a small and shaky rotten log he had no chance to shoot, and swinging for a clearer view, upraised his rifle with a jerk—an ill-starred jerk—for under it the rotten trunk cracked, crashed, went down; and Bob fell sprawling, helpless, in among the tumbled logs, and now the grizzly had him in his power.

Thud, crash, as the traplog smote the trees that chanced between; and we were horror-held. We had no power to stop that certain death, we dared not fire, the dogs and the man himself were right in line. The pack closed in. Their din was deafening; they sprang on the huge, haired flanks; they nipped the soggy heels, they hauled and held, and did their best, but they were as flies on a badger or as rats on a landslide. They held him not a heartbeat; delayed him not a whit. The brushwood switched, the small logs cracked as he rushed, and Yancy would be in a moment more smashed with that fell paw.

In a flash Old Thunder saw the only way—it meant sure death for him—but the only way. The veteran of the pack ceased all halfway dashing at flank or heel and leaped at the great bear's throat—but one swift sweep of that deadly paw and he went reeling back, bruised and shaken. Still he rallied, rushed as though he knew how much depended on him, and would have closed once more, when Turk, the mighty warrior Turk, the hope and valor of the pack, long holding back, sprang forward now and fastened, gripped with all his strength—on the bear?

No! Shame of shames—how shall I say the truth? On poor old Thunder, wounded, battered, winded, downed, seeking to save his master. On him the bulldog fastened with a grip of hate. This was what he had waited for, this was the time of times that he took to vent his pent-up jealous rage—sprang from behind, dragged Thunder down to hold him strangling in the brushwood.

The bear had freedom now to wreak revenge. His only doughty foeman gone, what could prevent him? But from the reeling, spieling, yapping pack there sprang a small, white flash of fury, not for the monster's heel, not for his flank or even for his massive shoulder forging on, but for his face, the only place where dog could count in such a sudden stand. Gripped as by an iron vise above the monster's eye the huge head jerking back and forth made the little beast go flapping like a rag, but the dog hung on. The bear reared up to claw and now we saw that his antagonist was Silly Billy.

Bob scrambled to his feet and escaped. The huge brute seized the whirling white body in paws like stumps of trees, as a cat might seize a mouse, gripped and wrenched him quivering; tore his own flesh wrenching, and hurled the pup like a bundle far aside. Then wheeling for a moment, the grizzly paused to seek the bigger foe, the man—the pack recoiled. Four rifles rang, a long, deep, grating snort and Reelfoot's elephantine bulk sank, limp as the storm-tossed logs. Instantly Turk, the dastard traitor Turk, with chesty gurgle as a war cry, closed bravely on the dead brute's haunch and fearlessly tore out the hair, as the pack sat lolling back, the battle done.

Bob Yancy's face was set. He had seen it nearly all, and we supplied the rest. Billy was wagging his whole latter end, shaking and shivering with excitement, in spite of some red-stained slashes on his ribs. Bob greeted him affectionately: "You dandy! It's the finish that shows up the stuff a bear dog is made of, an' I tell you there ain't nothing too good in Yancy's Ranch for you. Good Old Thunder has saved my life before, but this is a new one. I never thought you'd show up this way."

"And you," he said to the Turk, "I've just got two words for you. Come here." He took off his belt, put it through the collar of the Terrible Turk and led him to one side. I turned my head away. A rifle cracked, and when at length I looked, Yancy was kicking leaves and rubbish over some carrion, that one time had been a big, strong bulldog.

But heading all on the front of Yancy's saddle in the triumphal procession homeward, was Silly Billy, the hero of the day, his white coat stained with red, his body stiff and sore, but his exuberant spirits little abated. He probably did not fully understand the feelings he had aroused, but he did know that he was having a glorious time, and that at last the world was responding to the love he had so bounteously squandered on it.

Riding in a pannier on a packhorse was Old Thunder. It was weeks before he recovered from the combined mauling he got from the bear and the bulldog.

Billy, himself, was as fit as a fiddle within a month, and when half a year later he had shed his puppy ways, his good dog sense came forth in strength. Brave as a lion he had proved himself, full of life and energy, affectionate, true as steel, and within two years he was leader of the Yancy pack. They do not call him Silly now, but "Billy, the pup that made good."

Unfair Advantage.

THE family had just lost their little dog. It had been run over by a motorcar, and the remains were awaiting state burial in the garden. The two younger brothers were discussing the tragedy.

"Do you think," inquired the elder, "that God would perform a miracle on Toby and bring him back to life, if we asked Him?"

"Oh, no," wisely replied the younger. "You see, God wanted a little dog in heaven, and so Toby was the nicest dog He knew, He took him." A pause, then he added under his breath: "but it was a very mean thing to do!"

A MEMBER of the British colony in a certain foreign town quarreled with a native, and a duel with revolvers was arranged. The Englishman was a good shot, and the native, knowing this, made it a condition that the duel should take place in a room in total darkness.

The time arrived.

"I don't want to hurt the blighter," thought the Englishman, "but I'll give him the fright of his life."

He groped his way round the room to the fireplace and fired all the chambers of his revolver up the chimney.

The native was killed.

Game with a Limit.

AT A BALL game between a South Carolina negro team and a visiting team of similar color, a negro preacher was acting as umpire. The pitcher had gone rather wild and had permitted all the bases to fill. Another man came to the bat and the nervous pitcher shot one over.

The pitcher tried again. "Ball two," was the decision.

Another effort by the hurler. "Ball three," said the umpire.

The pitcher saw his predicament, and made one master effort to save the day.

"Ball four," yelled the ump, "and the man's out."

"How come I'se out?" inquired the enraged batter.

"I'se repelled to put you out, nigger. Don' you see dar's nowhere else to put you?" reasoned the umpire.

A MOVING picture actor relates an amusing incident that happened during the filming of Rostand's "Chanticleer." This was done out of doors and one day while the actor was taking a stroll he came across a man seated by the roadside with his face buried in his hands, evidently deeply distressed about something. Sympathetically he stopped and inquired what the trouble was.

"I'll tell you," said the man. "I'm one of the patients at the sanatorium for bugs over yonder. Yesterday the doc said that I was well and could leave in a day or two—but what do you suppose I saw this morning? Roosters and hens six feet high and talking just like humans. That settles it! If I get away from this hole in ten years I shall be lucky."

"'Fair,' he answered.

"'Have you called on your neighbors yet?' said I.

"'No,' said he. 'But I'm going to if I miss any more of my wood.'"

SENATOR LODGE was talking about the League of Nations. "It will only plunge us into more war," he declared, "and we will forever be mixing into things that do not concern us and which we do not understand.

"A great many of the people who favor the League know this to be true and apparently hope it will be so, as they have found that war is more profitable for them than peace.

"Oh, I think they're straight enough," interrupted the other who was present.

"Straight!" retorted the grouch in a tone of withering scorn. "Yes, they're all straight—so much so that if any one of them were to swallow a nail he'd cough up a corkscrew! Now look here—"

But his interlocutor had fled.

But He Wasn't Hungry.

THE man in the rainbow stockings was playing golf. No: that's a false start. He was trying to play golf. The difficulty was, of course, to hit the ball. It was so much easier to hit the ground. In fact he was quite an expert at that. He got it every time.

The green turf flew in all directions. It rained mold.

Swish! Swosh! Flop! More excavations.

Something was wrong somewhere. It couldn't be his stockings. It must be the links. He turned helplessly to his opponent.

"What do you think of these links?" he exclaimed.

"What do I think of 'em?" gasped his opponent, wiping a bit of California from his lips. "Pouf. Best I ever tasted!"

"A middle-aged chap volunteered," he said, "and the first day in the trenches was a thing to see. No veteran ever conducted himself more coolly or more cheerfully under fire.

"'Ah, captain,' said a corporal, "if you knew poor Bill Smithers's home life as I do you'd realize how he appreciates a quiet day among the shells.'"

FOR years a bitter feud had existed between the Browns and Robinsons, next-door neighbors. The trouble had originated through the depredations of Brown's cat, and had grown so fixed an affair that neither party ever dreamed of "making it up." One day, however, Brown sent his servant next door with a peace-making note for Mr. Robinson, which read:

"Mr. Brown sends his compliments to Mr. Robinson, and begs to say that his old cat died this morning."

Robinson's written reply was bitter:

"Mr. Robinson is sorry to hear of Mr. Brown's trouble, but he had not heard that Mrs. Brown was ill."

"Well, I should say never put off till tomorrow that which you should have done the day before yesterday."

Always Prepared.

"DID you ever have the telephone bell ring when you were in the bathtub and there was nobody else home?"

"That's me," said the applicant exultantly, "for the last ten years I worked in the swellest bar in this city."

Up Against It.

A NEGRO was an important witness in a trial in the courtroom of a little town in the south of the U.S.A. and he was carefully coached by his lawyer and told exactly what to say.

When Mr. Brown, the lawyer, left the negro, just before the trial began, Abe knew his evidence off by heart, but when he entered the crowded courthouse and saw the sea of faces all around him, he suffered from a severe attack of stage fright.

His lawyer stood up, and gently and kindly, and with a winning smile, said:

"Now, Abe, tell the judge and jury everything you know about the case."

Abe looked startled, and glanced fearfully around the court, then he gasped:

"When I started fo' de courthouse dis marnin' dey wux only two people in de world dat knew what I wuz to say—me and Massa Brown. Now Massa Brown am de only one dat knows."

California Legends—Yosemite—the Poppy.

BY DESSA H. M. FULTZ.

"YOSEMITE."

Long, long ago, when there was peace and plenty in the Valley of Ah-wah'-nee, a stalwart young brave of the tribe started one morning to spear some fish in the lake Ah-wai-yah (Mirror Lake.) It was very early, even the birds were still sleeping and the sun had not awakened.

A turn in the path, and he found himself facing a great grizzly bear who savagely disputed his way. It mattered not that he was unarmed—a brave never turned his back on a foe. Seizing the dead limb of a tree, he defended himself; after a long and furious struggle he succeeded in killing the bear. But he was desperately wounded and it was many moons before he could follow the chase again.

His deed was considered so remarkable by the rest of the tribe they named him "Yosemite," meaning, "A full grown grizzly bear." This name was handed down to his children, and in later years the valley and the tribe became known as the "Yosemite."

MANY suns and many moons, many summers and many winters have passed since the Great Father led a band of his chosen people into the Valley of Ah-wah-nee. Then the valley was only surrounded by green hills; the meadows were sweet with clover, the waters full of fish. Bushes yielded berries and fruits; the trees gave acorns and pine nuts. Deer roamed the forests and food was abundant. Here they lived and multiplied and worshiped the Great Spirit. They absorbed strength from the hills and strength from the wild creatures.

So the young son of their chief slept in the skin of the beaver that he might be wise in building his lodge. From the skin of the coyote came the keen scent in following the game. Some days he was fed with la-po-si that he might be swift and strong in swimming: on other days the eggs of the great crane (to-tau-kon) that he might have a clear, ringing voice and grow tall and keen of sight. And so the boy grew in strength and wisdom and he was named Choo'-too-se-ka, meaning, the Supreme Good.

He built his great home at the base of To-tau-kon-nu-la (El Capitan) because the great cranes built their nests on its summit and raised their young in its meadows. From it their voices rang clear and loud over the Valley of Ah-wah'-nee (Yosemite.)

As the summers and snows passed this great rock wall grew and grew and all the hills around Ah-wah'-nee grew until they became great mountains.

Then Choo'-too-se-ka built a great o'-chum on the summit of the rock and they named him To-tau-kon-nu'-la. A little west of his palace he built a great chair of state. Here he sat on festival occasions where he could overlook his people and talk to them. The remains of his great chair can be seen to this day.

The valley was fruitful and the people happy: To-tau-kon-nu'-la sat in his chair of state and watched over them. He had no wife of his own, but all the women ministered to his needs.

To the south rose the snow-capped mountains and the gray dome of granite where dwelt the goddess Tis-sa'-ack. To her the women prayed for lovers and children. To-tau-kon-nu'-la had never seen Tis-sa'-ack and his mind had been too full of his people's needs to think of women. One evening as he sat in his great chair, the western sun shone against the gray dome of granite, and he saw Tis-sa'-ack fleeing across the valley like a radiant cloud. Golden hair rippled over her perfect white form, and her white wings held all the colors of the rainbow. To To-tau-kon-nu'-la she seemed a vision of the sunset. For a moment she paused and the evening wind bore sweet and clear her call "To-tau-kon-nu'-la." Again it came, softer and sweeter, "To-tau-kon-nu'-la." Swift as an arrow To-tau-kon-nu'-la started in pursuit up the face of gray dome until he was almost to her. "Tis-sa'-ack, Tis-sa'-ack," he cried! With a laugh soft and sweet, she glided on. Then, shaking her wings, a cloud of soft down surrounded him. When he cleared his eyes she was gone.

No more did To-tau-kon-nu'-la watch over his people, but from dawn till dark he sought Tis-sa'-ack. Far down the valley his eyes caught the sunlight on her wings or the faint echo of her footfall, and he hastened after. Always Tis-sa'-ack fled before his advances. His love was so great he was silent, only wooing by sight and glance.

No longer was there happiness and plenty in the Valley of Ah-wah'-nee, for To-tau-kon-nu'-la forgot his people. The berries and nuts dried on the bushes and the grain grew dead and brown. The waters ceased to flow, the fish died in the dry river beds. Sorrow and famine dwelt in the once happy Valley of Ah-wah'-nee. Ever the prayers of the people went up to To-tau-kon-nu'-la; but the god's ears were deaf to their cries. He heard only the voice of Tis-sa'-ack and his eyes saw only her form.

With eyes of sorrow Tis-sa'-ack looked over the desolate Valley of Ah-wah'-nee. The suffering of the people and their unanswered prayers filled her heart with grief. Her eyes became dim with weeping and her voice filled with sobs. Then she prayed the Great Spirit for help and he heard her prayer. The earth shook terribly and groaned as with great pain while great rocks fell into the Valley of Ah-wah-nee. With a mighty sound the great dome on which Tis-sa'-ack stood was split asunder and a mighty river flowed between the sundered rocks. When the thunder and the lightning had ceased, a shattered dome was reflected in a quiet lake—the awful answer of the Great Spirit to the prayer of Tis-sa'-ack.

The river singing through the valley gave life to all things; the quail call was again heard in the land and the voice of To-tau'-kon, the great crane, sounded over the valley. Flowers bloomed, birds sang in the forests and the people sang grateful chants to the guardians of their tribe.

But Tis-sa'-ack had left Ah-wah'-nee forever. As the mighty dome that had been her home was riven in twain in answer to her prayer, she arose above the storm. Mounting upward, upward, on her mighty wings, ever growing more distant. To-tau-kon-nu'la, ever watchful, followed her swiftly. Once more the soft down, like snowflakes, from her wings, blinded him, and she vanished. As the soft, tiny white feathers floated down to the margin of the lake, they turned to white violets—the violets of Tis-sa'-ack. To those who pick them with belief in their hearts, they are true talismans of love, faith, hope and good fortune. Along the margin of the lake they lie and through the valley. A token of purest love, a frarance never to be forgotten.

Unable to find Tis-sa'-ack, To-tau-kon-nu'-la returned to his people for a season, disconsolate. Many moons after, he left them forever. Then there appeared on the face of the great rock To-tau-kon-nu'-la, the figure of a man in a flowing robe with one hand pointing westward. This the Indians believe to be the picture of their departed chieftain come to tell them he has gone to the "happy hunting grounds." About that same time the beautiful face of Tis-sa'-ack appeared on the great, flat side of the dome that had once been her home, and which still bears her name—called by the white man "Half Dome."

THE POPPY.

All the bright day we had been driving over the wonderful roads around Los Angeles; for miles we had followed one leading to the west, then east, bordered on either side by a continuous hedge of roses in full bloom. It was a wonderful sight, and our eastern friends had used their entire vocabulary in expressing their admiration, and had relapsed into silence. Suddenly a great field of California poppies burst on our sight, and the silence was broken by a great "Oh!" all exclaiming as in one voice. Truly it was a wonderful sight; they covered the ground so thickly they gave the impression that some sun god had passed that way and dropped his golden mantle. There it lay, shading from the deepest orange into gold, and even the most delicate shades, some almost white.

Almost in the midst of the field, we saw another flower gatherer, and, as we drew near, I saw she was one of the old natives of California. Her features, although time had left his mark on them, were clear-cut, and she carried herself with a dignity age could not alter. As we drew near, she smiled a welcome, and in answer to my exclamation,

"Did you ever see so many, and such beauties!" said:

"Si, senorita, they are very lovely, but they are so few, or so it seems to me. Many, many years ago, when I was young, they covered the hills and the valleys by the millions. You should have seen them then, the lovely copa de oro, they surely made a carpet of gold, those golden cups." She smiled, as if dreaming of other days, and there was a faraway look in her dark eyes.

"You know our copa de oro were the first flowers the Sun God sent to earth, do you not?"

"No," I answered, "won't you tell us?"

It will be something to always be remembered by us all; the beautiful woman of the romantic days, with her arms filled with the golden flowers of the beloved land of her youth, and the flower-decked carpet at her feet. This is the story she told us.

"When the world was created, so legend says, there were no flowers or birds, only the green grass and the green trees, while over all arched the blue dome of sky, here dwelt the God of the Sunland, and the Queen of the Skyland. Seated on his golden throne in the midst of the heavens, sat the God of the Sunland, watching over his beloved children of the earth. Always was he planning some new way to make them happy.

"Directly below him lay his favored spot of all the beautiful green land. There his eyes wandered oftenest, and then his smile was the most tender. There he sent his softest rains and his gentlest zephyrs. There the grass was the softest, and the trees of the most varied greens. There, too, his earth children were the fairest and the happiest.

"One day, as the God of the Sunland sat on his golden throne, his brow wrinkled in deep thought, the Queen of the Skyland came floating by on a fleecy white cloud, and gaily she called to him:

"'Good morning, O King, why the deep thinking?'

"'I am troubled, for I can think of no new joy to send to my beloved children of the earthland.'

"'Why not send them flowers? They have the green trees, and the green grass; in the Skyland we have wonderful gardens where the children play. Add color to the greens of your Earthland.'

"'But where, O Queen, would I find the colors for the flowers?' asked the Sun God.

"'Take the fragments of the blue of the sky, left from the places where the stars were fitted in, the white of a fleecy cloud, and the colors of the sunset, and drop them among the grass blades of the earth, and bid them grow,' and with a smile she was gone, her azure-hued cloak floating behind her, carried by two tiny zephyrs.

"Gone was the frown from the face of the Sun God, for he would send new joy to earth.

"His favored spot on the Earthland should receive the first of the blossoms; great mountains hemmed it in to the east, and on the west rolled a great, quiet, sapphire-hued ocean. Here all was happiness, peace and plenty.

"Of what should he create his first blossoms? They must be yellow, the color of the Sunland, and of something very precious, carrying with them sunshine and love. Then his eyes rested on his golden scepter, lying in his lap. It represented all his thoughts, for it would mean that love ruled, and that was the greatest power in heaven and earth. And it was radiant with the gold of the Sunland.

"Taking it in his hand he held it far from him, over his chosen spot on the Earthland.

"'Oh my scepter, I am sending you earthward, there to scatter the first flowers. They are to be yellow, like my Sunland, and will ever say to my people,

"'I represent the love of the Almighty Father; I bring to you joy and sunshine and love.'

"Then he loosened his hold, and the golden scepter, like a beam of sunlight, flashed earthward. The God of the Sunland leaned far from his throne, watching with loving eyes his messenger. Swift as light it fell; then, as it neared the Earthland, it hovered a moment over the spot he loved best, then burst into millions of tiny, golden seed of light, and fell among the roots of the soft, green grass. And wherever a golden seed fell, there immediately sprang a wondrous, golden blossom.

"It was the color of the Sunland, and, swaying on its slender stem, with the delicate, feathery green leaves, united the symbol of the God of the Sunland with the earth. And the children of the earth gathered their newfound treasures in their arms with shouts of joy, and called them the 'copa de oro, the cups of gold.'

"They were the first flowers, the poppies, and the chosen spot on which they fell was afterward called 'California.'"

The soft voice ceased, and for a moment we all remained silent. Then we were rudely awakened by the honk of a machine. Swiftly the lady turned.

"My grandson's son is calling me," she said, and with a smile was gone.

For a moment we watched her, feeling as if the spirit of the past had been with us and told us the secret of the golden cups.

"No wonder you Californians are so proud of your golden cups," said the youngest maiden, whose hair was the color of the golden flowers she held in her arms, "we, too, feel their magic, and have fallen under their spell; and when my knight comes riding to claim me, he will bring me golden poppies as his offering."

Was it a prophecy? I knew not, but the maid was wed among the gold of the poppies, and the knight who won her had listened to the tale told by the lady of the long ago, among the cups of gold.

Charts in Business.

"Charts," says William H. Rankin, in an article on this subject, in Forbes Magazine (N. Y.) "are simply a mechanical means for right thinking.

"Judgments or decisions are made by either one or both of two faculties; feeling or reasoning.

"Many times judgments are apt to be faulty.

"You can't put feeling into a chart. That is where charts become valuable.

"Correct judgments or decisions can only be made by comparison.

"A mountain is high. It might be 4000 feet high. That itself does not mean anything unless there is a proper comparison made with other mountains.

"Unless we have the proper basis of comparison, then we cannot chart our problem. No doubt there have been quite a few who have undertaken to chart certain sets of figures. But they did not learn anything more from the charts than they did from the figures themselves. The reason for this was that they did not have the proper basis of comparison and consequently could not form any adequate or correct judgments or decisions from the knowledge portrayed in the charts.

"Charts of themselves are comparatively simple things, but backed by competent brains miracles can almost be accomplished.

"Music in sheet form is simply a standardized chart for musicians. A musician can have a song, a theme, in his mind, which is the most intangible thing that I can think of. He puts it into a chart of music and it becomes a tangible thing. If arranged for an orchestra it can be placed before twenty, thirty, forty or 100 musicians and each knows just exactly what he has to do and when he has to do it.

"The man with a baton at the head of the orchestra gives the signal and you have an expression of the most efficient organization that I know anything at all about. Every man in that orchestra does what he is required to do at the right time; does it independently of each individual surrounding him, and yet he does his work co-ordinately so that you have one mass of harmony.

"At the present time we have no such standardized charts for business; that is, charts have not been developed so that the average business man understands what is told in charts, nor can he truly appreciate the worth and the value of the information contained in the charts."

The real fun is in the battle for success, not in the rewards victory lays in your lap.—[Forbes Magazine (N. Y.)

Her only Husband — Perils Lurk in Candy and Flowers

BY FANNIE HEASLIP LEA

WHEN Marie-Louise Dunlevy was 22 to a day she married Lewis Galloway and went out west to live with him. They still say "out West" in the South and still think '49ers, washerwomen and opium dens when San Francisco is mentioned. Marie-Louise, never having been farther afield than Houston, Tex., was no exception to the rule.

She shivered when she thought of exchanging Main street for Market street, but, being badly enamored of Lewis's smile, the way his hair grew back from his forehead, the different note in his voice when he spoke to her, his taste in ties—in brief, with all the little things that go to make up love before marriage, she shut her pretty eyes and took the plunge, which action on her part left a scar on more than one manly heart in her immediate vicinity, for Marie-Louise was by the way of being a man eater. Dresden, if you like, as to figure and coloring fragrant as white lilacs and delicate as May moonshine, but still a man eater, who had slain her all too willing thousands.

She had been reared in cotton wool, so to speak, with a suitor in either hand. She drew in adoration with every breath, and her worshipers were the chief support of the Garden Flower shop, corner of Main and Eleventh streets.

"Say it in flowers," was written for her. It was she who kept the smartest sweets agency in town perennially "out of" a certain sort of caramel, having chopped nuts in its interior.

The day she announced her engagement there was lamentation and wailing in more places than one—but even the women wished her well. She was that kind of a girl. Can one say more?

Lewis said more, no doubt, in the first flush of infatuated enthusiasm, but as no mere penny a liner, however well intentioned, is a lover's class, we make no attempt to compete with him, merely observing that when, like young Lochinvar, he came out of the west he lifted the brightest jewel in the crown of a certain township. Even her mother said so. Her mother, however, said other things as well.

"San Francisco," sighed her mother, "is apt to be horribly crude, dear, and you've been brought up in such a different atmosphere. Suppose you got out there and then found you were dreadfully lonely?"

Marie-Louise tried to suppose it and failed. She suppressed ecstatic and breath taking visions of herself and Lewis, alone together, in any atmosphere at all. But she only said:

"Oh, dearest, I'm sure I shall manage."

Which is a form of self-confidence no mother, however poignantly enlightening her own experience, is ever able to combat—not all of them have the heart to try, knowing that every woman is entitled to her own disillusionments, at least.

So Marie-Louise was married, in white satin and tulle, with dark eyes full of dreams and with the loveliest shy smile on her momently unsteady lips. Lewis's hand shook when he slipped the ring on her finger, and he said in his heart, "Oh, God, I'll be good to her, but I'm not good enough." He was not accustomed to praying, so there was nothing perfunctory about the effort.

Afterward there was a wedding cake, indigestible, but romantically and elaborately adorned, as well as a good deal of rice and a certain number of white satin bows and old shoes. Lewis and his wife got away on the midnight express. The last thing Marie-Louise saw before the train began to move was her mother's strained but tearless smile—you must hand it to mothers; they are, in the final estimate, the best sports in the world—and the prettily envious eyes of her two younger sisters, Trixie and Sue.

Then, in the mysterious shadows of the Pullman drawing-room, Lewis put his arms around her and kissed her eyelids. He thought she was going to cry, but she wasn't. She was as badly in love as he was. She couldn't hear the wheels of the train for the beating of her own heart. Marie-Louise had been a man eater, but she had come in out of the jungle of hearts forever, for she was also a born wife. And not every woman is that—worse luck!

She went forth, even into the wild and shaggy trousered west, as calm as the turkey in Margery Fleming's little poem—the one, you remember, who was more than unusual ca'm—who did not give a single damn so long as Lewis was there to hold her hand and walk beside her; that was Marie-Louise's frame of mind.

That San Francisco turned out to be a unique and delightful big city instead of the raw settlement of her imaginings was by the way. She loved it for itself very soon, but she would have loved it in any case for Lewis's sake. And she and Lewis were most outrageously happy there.

They had a tiny apartment on a pleasantly possible street; and Marie-Louise cooked breakfasts and luncheons over a duck of a little gas stove, while Lewis took her gallantly forth of an evening to more substantial dinners in one restaurant or another, where he glowed comfortably because other men regarded him with envy as he passed by, or glowered because they confined their attention to Marie-Louise and forbore to notice discreetly the presence of a husband.

He was not jealous according to his own statement, but he had well defined ideas concerning limitations of other men.'s eyesight where his wife was concerned.

Marie-Louise forgave him that very readily. Jealousy in a new husband is a delicious tribute, not a fault. But she would have forgiven him just the same if he had needed it. She acquired in no time at all the most adorable touch of motherliness, where Lewis was concerned. It sat like an old lady's lace cap, all lavender bows and delicate frills, on the pale curled gold of a little girl's head. When they had been married almost a year, and he forgot her birthday, she was so sorry for his subsequent distress that she almost consoled him into forgetting St. Valentine's day, which came directly after.

A born wife, as I said before. She had been reared—raised, they say, in her native State—upon the roses and raptures of constant courtship, but Lewis's ways were different, and that, in the eyes of Marie-Louise, was all there was about it.

He loved her—that was as sure as God. She loved him. She had been twenty-two years in the world without him. She proposed hereafter to live close to his heart. If he bought her trifles on high days and holidays, or if he forgot them, what foolish difference could it make? He showed his love in other ways. Whether he showed it or not, she knew it was there. And no dancing master's love, at that! No piffing pink and white passion, forever needing to be told in lace paper and chocolates.

If he forgot to pick up her handkerchief when she dropped it, at least he never forgot to send her monthly allowance to the bank. And if he sometimes sent her upstairs after his cigarettes when he was comfortably disposed of an evening in the big chair under the ruddy shaded lamp, when she came back he was very apt to say, "Listen, old dear. I want to talk to you about that deal with the Del Monte people. What do you think is the best thing to do?"

Now, a woman can have only one kind of flattery from one kind of man, and if Marie-Louise preferred her husband's kind so much the better for both of them.

The question inevitably arises, "What would she have done if she hadn't preferred it?" I don't know. Found a way, doubtless, to teach him better, or gone home to her mother in tears. Which is exactly what she did do at the end of a year and two months. The tears, however, were for Lewis.

"It's breaking my heart to leave you," mourned Marie-Louise, ten minutes before the train roared in.

"Think how much your mother wants to see you," Lewis adjured her. "You'll have a wonderful time. Be a good little sport—and don't forget to come back to me."

He let her go without a single box of sweets, without a rose, without a magazine to lighen the dusty hours—but she saw tears in his keen, cool eyes just before he kissed her for the last time—and Marie-Louise fed her soul upon those tears all across the desert, across the barren, hateful praries, and into the lovely greenness of the southern fields that were somehow almost as barren as the prairies and the desert, without Lewis.

She could have done with a few roses, but Lewis was not that kind of a man, and he was—Lewis.

Marie-Louise spent her first ten minutes of her visit to her home town upon her mother's knee. Her mother cried a little. Marie-Louise did not. She knew that if she cried a little she should have to cry a great deal, and life with Lewis was teaching her self-control.

"Darling, I think you've changed somehow," said her mother. "I'm not sure I quite like that hat. Is it the San Francisco style? And isn't it just a bit—well, just a bit—"

Marie-Louise, who had been until then distinctly proud of her little close black hat, with its encircling black lacquered flowers, began to feel a touch of strangeness. She had not realized that marriage would alienate her, even family, from the scenes of her childhood, much less from the inhibitions pertaining to those scenes. Lewis had liked the hat. She said so now, but rather diffidently.

"What's Lewis like when he's married?" Trixie demanded delightfully curious. She had a mouth that was made for smiling and romantically dark eyes over an impertinent nose. "And is it a thrill, Marie-Louise, being married to a man you hardly knew at all?" Marie-Louise said it was a thrill. Something took her by the throat as she said it, and all at once there were tears on her lashes—great, hot, unhappy tears—she had just remembered how Lewis looked at her across the breakfast table of a morning, and the humorous set of his beloved mouth was hard to bear—at a distance. She made an excuse for getting away into her own room, and behind locked doors scolded herself back into composure.

"You wanted to see your mother, didn't you?" she told the Marie-Louise that was already stretching pathetically empty little hands back across the prairies and the alkali desert; "well, are you a homesick baby or a married woman? And isn't Lewis coming for you—to take you home—in only two months?"

Neither the shifting of locality, in the matter of home, nor the only two months appealed to her own sense of humor. She had none, of course, or Lewis might never have fallen in love with her. She was ideally the man's woman, was Marie-Louise.

But away from her own especial man she suffered soon and unaccountable tortures of loneliness. In vain her mother petted and made much of her. In vain all the girls with whom she had gone to school, with whom she had "come out" and coincidentally with whom she had married, gave parties to welcome her back. Luncheons and bridges and teas, however flower adorned, however elaborate, were yet manless, and therefore soulless, affairs.

On the other hand, sitting at dinner parties between other women's husbands had no charm for a lady busily engaged in missing a husband of her own. Other women's husbands were negligible quantities. Either they were neglectful, in which case they bored you, or they were inclined to be unduly attentive, in which case it was not possible to do more than tolerate them, remembering how much better Lewis was at their every game.

"Marie-Louise certainly is devoted," was Sue's soft drawling comment. "You behave as if you'd been born married, Marie-Louise."

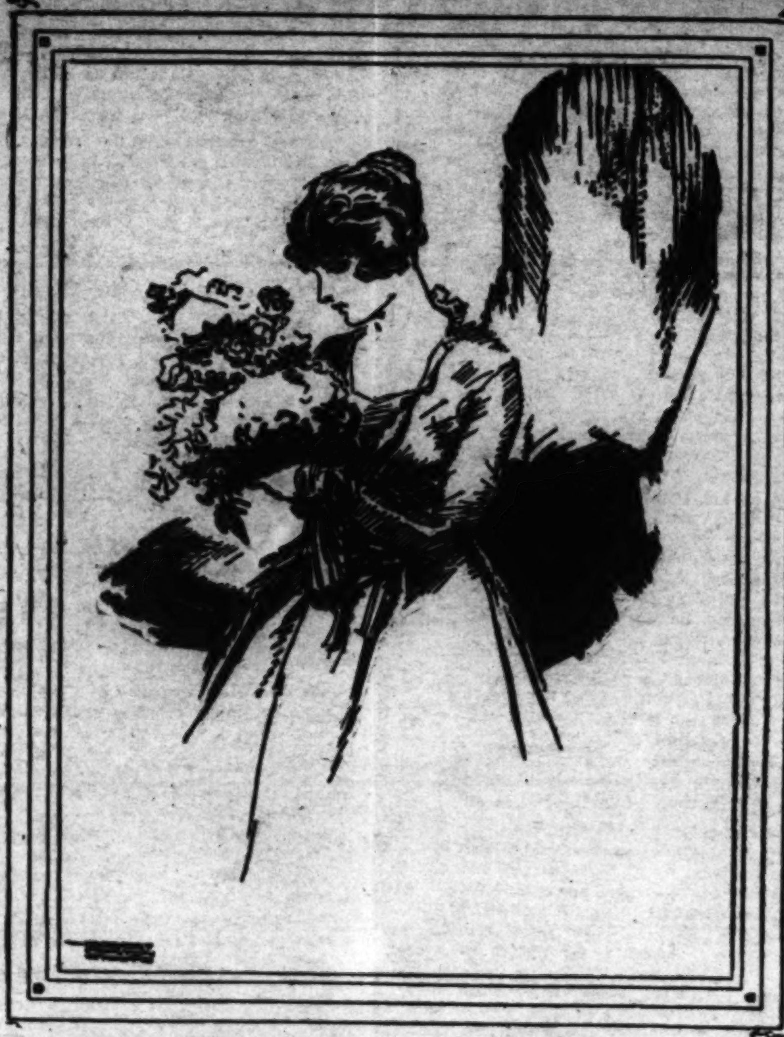
"There is always one who kisses and one who turns the cheek," Trixie remarked sapiently. She was rather proud of a growing reputation for a witty tongue.

Marie-Louise turned a startled glance on her second sister. Afterward she could trace the whole dreadful affair, or fancied she could, to that one flashing moment of Trixie's incredible insight, which may after all have been merely conversational.

For it was just about that time, as if set off by some shortening fuse, that the family began to question, jokingly, but none the less agonizingly, Lewis's attention to his wife.

"You've been here three weeks, and you haven't had a thing but a few letters," Sue complained aggrievedly. "They say you can get awfully good chocolate in San Francisco, too. Goodness, Marie-Louise! When you remember the tons of stuff you used to get before you were married—and the roses! Your room was always a regular garden. Doesn't Lewis ever do things like that? Bess Gaynor's husband never goes to Chicago for a week even without sending her back the loveliest five pound box—and Lily Welles gets a night letter every day when Joe's away from her."

"Lewis is a westerner," said Mrs. Dunlevy, in her soft, appeasing voice. "They may be different from our men, Susie—perhaps they don't attach the same importance to those little things."



It Was Not All Acting—the Flowers Spelled Lewis to Her.

Marie-Louise winced. It was hard to be sure which hurt deeper, her mother's explanation or Sue's accusal.

"I'm sure Lewis is a most devoted husband," Mrs. Dunlevy insisted soothingly.

And that was an insistence which was not to be borne. The thing must be self-evident or Marie-Louise could not endure it.

She cried a little alone in her room that night. Lewis's letters had been like Lewis's self—altogether dear, altogether laconic, and altogether businesslike. He had written her details of his business affairs in a way that had touched only lightly upon missing her, pal as well as a wife. He had inquired in the most friendly way after the different members of her family, he had sent her all his love, with a brevity which he obviously considered required no elaboration, and he had touched only lightly upon his missing, trying to be unselfish about it, and he undoubtedly believed, not without reason, that for him to say he was unbearably lonely would bring her back to him hot-foot. That was Lewis. But as for flowers, or sweets, Marie-Louise knew quite well it would never enter his head to send them to her, under the circumstances. She did not expect them.

But her family did. And her family could never be able to believe in or understand Lewis's love for her except as expressed in terms of their own experience. Also, she could not bear that they should not believe in and understand it.

So Marie-Louise went downtown next day and sent hersel fa large box of violets from the Garden Flower shop. She had two or three gardenias set in the middle of the violets and flattered herself when it was done that the offering was distinctly loverlylike, as it was. Even Sue was impressed by it.

"How perfectly sweet!" said Sue. "I suppose he wired down here to have 'em sent out to you. Now, that is what I call romantic . Is it an anniversary or anything honey?'"

"It's the anniversary of the day we met," Marie-Louise told her brazenly. To herself she said, "Well, we did meet in April—and, anyhow, I paid for them with Lewis's money." Which was feminine reasoning of the purest and most single minded, as any one will admit.

That night an old suitor of Marie-Louise came to call on Trixie, handed down, as old suitors sometimes are, from one sister to another, and Trixie, in Marie-Louise's presence, discoursed upon the violets and gardenias of Lewis's offering with a kind of sisterly pride. In the eyes of the family Lewis was about to redeem himself.

"Violets and gardenias!" observed the old suitor, whose name was Jimmy West. "Well, I'll say that's good—at this distance! Birthday, Marie-Louise?'

"The anniversary of the day they first met," Trixie explained with an artful sigh.

"Oh," said Mr. West, and looked at Marie-Louise a little curiously.

Next day Marie-Louise met him downtown upon a peculiarly crowded corner and he took her arm and steered her across the street to a confidential little tearoom.

"I'm not sure if I should," murmured Marie-Louise, but she was feeling a bit lonely, and, after all, Jimmy had always been fond of her This was not a triangular situation. Marie-Louise had never to any appreciable extent returned his affection.

She looked at him now in silence from beneath the brim of a rather large and very innocent hat, and her eyes were wistful, but not for him.

"Marie-Louise," said Mr. West when he had ordered according to the lady's fancy, "have you really forgotten the date of your meeting with Galloway?"

Marie-Louise looked startled.

"It was the second of April, not the seventeenth,' 'said Jimmy very gently.

'How do you know?" asked Marie-Louise. She saw the instant she said it, because she happened to be looking squarely at him, and it was impossible to mistake the look in his nice brown eyes, exactly how he knew, and was deeply sorry she had asked him. Because Marie-Louise was not of those who like to turn the knife in a wound of their own making.

"It—I believe it was the seventeenth," she added hurriedly.

"I'll tell you how I knew," said Jimmy, turning the knife himself, "because I introduced him to you. He had just come on here from San Francisco, you remember, on some business or other, and he had a letter to me from a man I used to be in college with. I brought him up to a party of Joe Welles's—and fifteen minutes later it was all over."

"You mean with me?" inquired Marie-Louise, dimpling shamelessly at the thought.

"I mean with me," said Jimmy simply.

She poured his tea and he drank it. Like most American men, he had no fancy whatever for tea, but he would have drunk hemlock just to be sitting there at that intimate little table with Marie-Louise, watching her cool white fingers hover over the tea things, watching the little smile that tipped up the corners of her mouth, watching her lashes flutter and fall.

"Marie-Louise," he said abruptly, in a voice that held a trace of sudden hoarseness, "happy, aren't you?"

"Why, Jimmy!" gasped Marie-Louise. Then she leaned across the little table and looked straight into his eyes with her own misting pitifully—she knew somehow that she could have put her head down on Jimmy's arm and cried, just as safely as on her mother's; it is the sort of thing one does somehow know about a man who goes on caring, as Jimmy was doing, when it is no longer any use.

"Jimmy," said Marie-Louise. "I'm so happy—when I'm with him—that, I'm as lonesome as—as a lost puppy, when I'm not—and that's the truth."

"His master's voice stuff," said Jimmy bravely, "and all that kind of thing, eh?"

Marie-Louise nodded her pretty head without speaking.

"Even here at home?" insisted Jimmy.

"Here isn't home any more," said Marie-Louise. "You forget."

"I had a hunch you were lonely," said Jimmy.

"You're mighty right, I am," said Marie-Louise.

She ran a finger across her eyelashes, surreptiously, and smiled. She had a notion in the first relief, of having some one to whom she could speak frankly, of telling him about the flowers which she had sent herself, but some feminine instinct of caution as well as a shamed sense of pride held her quiet.

"Well, see here!" said Jimmy presently, 'would it help any if you had—I mean to say if there was some one you knew you could call on when you wanted to be—amused, y'know—mind taken off your troubles and all that? Kind of a clown dog effect—you know what I mean! I'm not particularly busy just now—could you use a devoted retainer, Marie-Louise? No salary expected—wishing to learn the business, thats all."

"Jimmy," said Marie-Louise, just touching the back of his rather strong looking hand with the tip of one finger, "I do think you're the nicest man in the world—but one."

"Where do you get that stuff?' asked Jimmy, slightly embarrassed.

"Where do you suppose?" replied Marie-Louise, with an adorable flicker of her old man eating self.

So Jimmy gave Marie-Louise his telephone number and she promised to let him know next time her lonesomeness got too much for her—which was not for a week or more. She forgot him, almost at once—poor Jimmy!—in an unusual accumulation of letters from Lewis, who had been on a business trip down into Southern California, and was full of a new business deal which he seemed about to put through successfully.

Then one day Trixie observed that Bob Gaynor had sent Bess the sweetest dinner ring from New York, where he had gone a week or ten days before, and Marie-Louise decided that it was time for another tribute from her only husband.

She went to a sweet shop, the biggest in town, selected an absolutely gorgeous box of crystalized fruit, and had it sent up to herself. The thing cost rather more than any woman on a modest income would cheerfully pay out for mere sugar and orange peel, but it was also exactly the sort of thing a man very much in love would consider only proper—and Marie-Louise knew her audience. She had gauged them correctly. Trixie and Sue told it all over their own special part of town inside of twelve hours.

"Lewis must be absolutely mad about her," Trixie announced. "My dear, you never saw such a box in your life! And to wire all the way here to have it sent up to her—thats what he must have done, of course. He wrote her he couldn't bear to send candy from San Francisco—that things were so apt to get stale on the way over."

"I do think he's the sweetest thing," drawled Sue. "I'll say youre lucky, Marie-Louise. I only hope I marry one with as much consideration as that."

The family satisfaction went just a little to Marie-Louise's head. It was so sweet to have them singing Lewis's praises—to hear them really appreciating him for what he was.

"They wouldn't get it any other way," she defended herself to herself. "And anyhow—I do pay for the stuff with money he gives me—he is buying it—only he doesn't know it." Even Marie-Louise giggled a bit over that.

The tale of the crystalized fruit drifted speedily to Jimmy's ear. He called Marie-Louise on the telephone and congratulated her on her choice of a husband.

"Some boy!" said Jimmy. "No wonder you fell for him, Marie-Louise. I hear he keeps the messenger service busy out your way. Don't you want to come out in my new roadster with me this afternoon and talk about him?"

"Will you let me talk about him—all the time?" inquired Marie-Louise.

"Merely saying how do you do, and goodby to your host—I will."

"Jimmy, I think I'll do it."

"I'll be there at 4."

"You may be horribly bored—I warn you—I'm missing him more all the time."

"I'll wear my hair short," said Jimmy, "and bring my little fox along beneath it. But no one shall hear me complain."

"Do you really want me, Jimmy?" asked Marie-Louise.

'Don't be a brute, Marie-Louise," said Jimmy, cheerfully. "What's the good of rubbing it in?"

He came at 4 as he had promised and brought with him a large purple box of violets which Marie-Louise gently but with unmistakable decision refused and saw subsequently presented to Trixie.

"It's very sweet of you, Jimmy,' she explained when they were slipping along the road to the Country Club in the new car, "but I'm almost sure Lewis wouldn't like me to take them, and—"

"And anyhow, he keeps you supplied, himself, doesn't he!"

"Why shouldn't he?" asked Marie-Louise.

"Does he send you roses, too? I used to send you roses—remember?" said Jimmy a trifle moodily.

"Now, Jimmy," said Marie-Louise, "I am not going to talk that sort of thing to you—nor to any one else."

"Reformed character, aren't you, Marie-Louise?"

"I'm married," said Marie-Louise briefly.

"So you are," said Jimmy with a sigh. "Well, go on, devoted young wife—how does he like his eggs for breakfast? And all the rest of it? Have you any picture of him as a child? What was his regard at college? Begin at the beginning and tell me all about him."

Marie-Louise did. She loved talking about Lewis. It seemed to lessen the thousands of miles between them.

"He's really a pretty good scout, isn't he?" Jimmy observed on the way home. 'I wonder if he knows how lucky he is, Marie-Louise, to have you leading the applause?"

"Am I silly about him, do you think?" asked Marie-Louise wistfully.

"Sure you are," said Jimmy, unsmiling; "but it's all right if he's as good as you say."

Marie-Louise felt rather happier after that ride with Jimmy, so happy that she allowed him to give her a dinner party, about a week later, at which she appeared in a delicious gown of pale green satin with orchids richly simple at her waist.

Trixie, who was also of the dinner party, expalined that the orchids had come just the day before and wasn't it luck? Wasn't Lewis a darling?—he sent Marie-Louise flowers or candy or something almost every week.

"We used to feel a little nervous about him at first," said Trixie quite seriously. "You know, westerners are so different, Jimmy, and we're all so crazy about Marie-Louise, and she had been used to so much attention, and all that."

"You're talking like your own mother, my good child," said Jimmy. "What Marie-Louise wanted was a regular man, and I dare say she's got one. Flowers and candy are by the way. There are other essentials. Want to dance?"

"You're talking like your own grandmother," said Trixie impertinently. But she went into his arms very obediently and slid off into a fox trot without further parley. Trixie had designs of her own upon Jimmy and rather resented his attitude of also serving where Marie-Louise was concerned. "She's married," thought Trixie impatiently, "why can't she let him alone?"

As for Marie-Louise, she wrapped herself in dreams of Lewis and forgot to know that Jimmy ever suffered at her hands. Five weeks of the two months had slipped away when she had a letter one day telling her that Lewis would be with her in two weeks more.

"It's a whole week sooner than we planned," sai dthe letter; "I onder if you'll be as happy over that as I am? I miss you like hell, Marie-Louise."

It was not an artistic letter, but Marie-Louise wore it like a hidden decoration, over her heart. She had had volumes of passionate scrawls, in the old days, from other men—verses even—but Lewis had said the ultimately beautiful thing as only Lewis would even had thought to say it—"miss you like hell, Marie-Louise." It was not profanity; it was a love song.

The day that letter came Marie-Louise sent herself a box of the reddest red roses she could find in the Garden Flower shop. They glowed like live coals and were sweeter than a summer night with the moon at the full. When she opened the box under the affectionately curious eyes of the greater portion of her family she caught up the ardent sheaf of bloom and held it against a glowing cheek. It was not all acting. The flowers spelled Lewis to her. She had herself come to half believe in his sending them; such is the tangled web we weave.

"That young man must have a pretty heavy bill at the florists," Mrs. Dunlevy observed with tender pride.

"I'll say so," murmured Marie-Louise demurely, but with a touch of ruefulness.

She lived the next two weeks with her finger on the calendar. Each day as it passed went into the waste basket, but none of them went fast enough. The nights were endless and the mornings grimly leaden footed. Roses came again at the end of the first week, yellow ones this time, with the little leopard spotted orchids for good measure.

"Really—Lewis is too sweet to you, isn't he!" cried Trixie, half jealous of such a fairy tale husband.

"He is rather a lamb," Marie-Louise admitted modestly.

Just as a matter of financial discretion she was glad that floral proofs of Lewis's sweetness would soon become unnecessary. Her allowance had been under something of a strain. She had paid her bills, having a wholesome horror of such things, but the totals had not been insignificant, and Marie-Louise, being human, resented just a little having had to spend her substance in that especial way. A vague thought of Jimmy's rejected violets crossed her mind.

"I could have had all the flowers I wanted—without paying for them myself." But the maternal in the wife thrust that aside. "I couldn't bear," she said to herself proudly, "to have them misunderstanding my boy—just because his way of loving wasn't theirs." So she waited, in a fever of adoring impatience for the end of the two weeks and at length it came.

She met him at the station herself—and alone. She had insisted on that, because she thought she would be likely to cry, which, as a matter of fact, she did. Lewis had her

GREATCOATS for MEN

THERE is more "snap" in Patrick styles. Their fashionable lines are clean-cut and comfortable. Carefully tailored from the famous Patrick cloth that gives warmth and long service.

There is no other cloth just like Patrick cloth. It is as distinctive to America as are friezes to Ireland, cheviots to Scotland and tweeds to England. It is made from the thick, long-fibre north country wool from "sheep that thrive in the snow."

It is manufactured exclusively in Patrick woolen mills and made up into garments in the Patrick factories. Patrick controls every manufacturing process, from raw wool to finished garments.

Look for the green and black Patrick label. It identifies these long-fibre northern wool garments. If your dealer does not carry them, permit us to refer you to one who does.

See these styles for men, women and children in our new 1920-21 catalog, showing Patrick-Duluth fabrics in natural colors.

Oily skin and shiny nose—
How to correct them

WHEN you want to look your best—to make the best possible impression—how it embarrasses you to know that your nose just will get shiny. If you only knew the cause of this condition! Then you could relieve it!

A certain amount of oil in your skin is necessary to keep it smooth, velvety, supple. This oil is constantly being produced by the glands of the skin. On the nose, especially, there are more of these glands than in any other part of the skin. When the oil from these glands is too abundant, the result is an oily skin and a shiny nose. You can relieve this embarrassing condition by using the following treatment for it as frequently as is necessary:

> With warm water work up a heavy lather of Woodbury's Facial Soap in your hands. Apply it to your face and rub it into the pores thoroughly—always with an upward and outward motion. Rinse with warm water, then with cold—the colder the better. If possible, rub your face for thirty seconds with a piece of ice.

This treatment will make your skin firmer and drier the very first time you try it. Use it as often as your skin requires, nightly if necessary, and before long you will see a marked improvement.

Get a cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap and have your first treatment tonight. You will find Woodbury's on sale at any drug store or toilet goods counter in the United States or Canada. A 25-cent cake will last a month or six weeks.

"Your treatment for one week"

A beautiful little set of Woodbury's skin preparations sent to you for 25 cents

Send 25 cents for this dainty miniature set of Woodbury's skin preparations, containing your complete Woodbury treatment for one week.

You will find, first, the little booklet, "A Skin You Love to Touch," telling you the special treatment your skin needs; then a trial size cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap—enough for seven nights of any treatment; a sample tube of the new Woodbury's Facial Cream; and samples of Woodbury's Cold Cream and Facial Powder, with directions telling you just how they should be used. Write today for this special new Woodbury outfit. Address The Andrew Jergens Co., Spring Grove Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio.

If you live in Canada, address The Andrew Jergens Co., Limited, Sherbrooke St., Perth, Ontario.

For the commoner skin troubles

You will find complete treatments in the booklet, "A Skin You Love to Touch." This booklet is wrapped around every cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap. It gives treatments for Blackheads; Coarsened Skin; Oily Skin and Shiny Nose; [illegible] Conspicuous Nose Pores; Sluggish Skin; Tender Skin; [illegible] Skin, etc.
